More and more gardeners are coming to grow Chinese or celery cabbage. It is delicious and has a flavor all its own. Nutritionists report that Chinese cabbage is a much better source of vitamins A and C than either head lettuce or celery, but is not epual to them in vitamin B or in riboflavin content. The thick mid-ribs are very choice in delicate flavor and contain no stringy fibers as does celery.

Harvesting vegetables at the proper stage of maturity, and proper handling after they are harvested are especially important for palatability. Overmature vegetables will lose their succulence and become tough. Immature vegetables will not develop their fullest flavor. The family will eat more vegetables when they are grown well and harvested right. Far more vegetables and more kinds of vegetables would be eaten if they were properly prepared. Different kinds of vegetables may be cooked in different ways to enchance their palatability.

Prepare Now For Alfalfa-Brome Fall Seeding

Hancock County farmers who plan to make fall seedings of brome grass and alfalfa should arrange now for their seed and keep the ground free of weeds until seeding time, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Harvesting of the brome crop already is under way in Neb. and western Iowa. And while there should be enough brome seed this year to go around, it pays to start early to insure the right variety. Certified Lincoln and Fisher varieties are most desirable for Iowa if they can be obtained.

Henderson says any seed purchased, and particularly that imported from Kansas, should be checked for downy brome seed. Downy brome is a weed that Hancock County farmers won't want to get started on their farms.

Alfalfa seed supplies remain short everywhere, according to word received from Iowa State College agronomists. So the farmer will do well to start hunting his supply now.

Brome and alfalfa seed should be sown as soon after the middle of August as moisture conditions permit, Henderson says, Ten pounds of brome and 10 pounds of alfalfa should be sown per acre. (Where red clover does well a mixture of 3 pounds red clover, 6 alfalfa and 8 of brome should be used.)

Small grain fields on which brome and alfalfa are to be sown should be disked right after harvest. And disking should be repeated often enough to keep down weeds and hold the moisture.

OF IOWA'S PIONEER RAILROAD

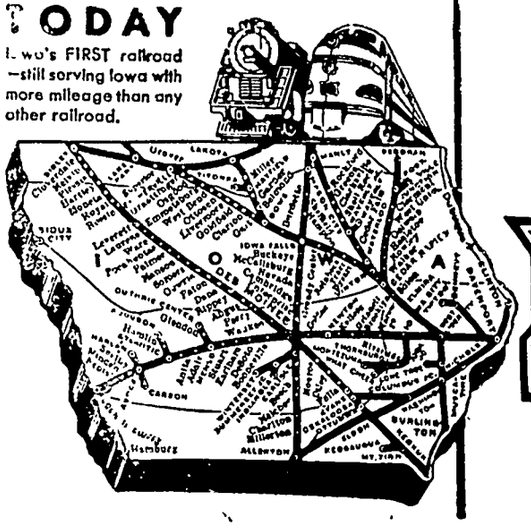
1856 Rock Island builds the first bridge across the Mississippi, linking Iowa with the East

TODAY Iowa's FIRST railroad —still serving Iowa with more mileage than any other railroad.



NO page in the album of Iowa history is more dramatic than that of its first railroad—the Rock Island. Then, as now, prosperity followed the rails... and for more than 90 years, State and Railroad have grown together.

There is exciting drama... as in the famous "race against time" New Year's Eve, 1855, when railroad president, citizen and track worker alike toiled side by side in sub-zero weather to complete the line to Iowa City in the allotted time. Disaster, too... when, only 14 days after the completion of the Mississippi bridge to Davenport that experts said was "impossible," the span was burned by rival steamboat interests. Progress... as, against all obstacles, Rock Island pushed ahead to complete the line to Des Moines and Council Bluffs.

Now! Rock Island provides the State with its largest rail transportation system. The state's biggest taxpayer, we have supported the schooling of generations of Iowa children; many thousands of Iowa folks are Rock Island employes. As we continue to pioneer the search for better, safer, more dependable transportation, we hope that Rock Island's record as a good citizen of Iowa will earn your continued support—for the next 100 years!

The Truth ABOUT Butter Price

We know that the present price that you pay at Your Grocery ore perplexes you as to WHY. Most of us became shocked at first. is our belief that very few of our customers understood the set-up der the OPA and the set-up as it now is. Maybe these few statents of fact will help you understand. Please think them over refully as you read.

Butterfat has been subsidized under times of the OPA. That eans our taxes helped pay extra for each pound of butterfat proced.

Without OPA and the subsidy which also went out, you as a conmer are now paying the total butter bill at the time you buy your und of butter.

Your butter bill paid in this way as you buy each pound, actuy costs you less per pound.

With no subsidy we have removed the condition which (as it work- out) brought on the black market in butter. Now butterfat is rth the same as cream or as butter.

We present this statement not for argument but for the pure of trying to help all of us understand better the present situan respecting the price of butter.

WATCH HIS VOTING RECORD CAREFULLY!

Know Your Congressman To Make Democracy Work

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

The time of the singing of candidates has come, and the voice of the mock - turtle is heard in the land.

The representatives of the people are about to assure you that you have been well - represented, and that they would like to continue to do the representing.

And who are you to say no, if you don't know exactly how well your representatives in the house of representatives or in the senate have carried out your interests?

Issues are being joined, there are sharp cleavages of thought these days. And if you don't take the trouble to vote for the men in congress who are voting the way you want them to, you have no right to lambast congress. True, it does take some trouble to learn to read your congressman's record correctly. A simple statement by a candidate that he voted for the X bill (the one you wanted passed) doesn't mean too much.

A number of energetic organizations are out to tell you how to read the lawmaker's records. One organization is the National Citizens' Political Action committee which reminds voters:

"A favorite device of congressmen is to vote for a series of mangling amendments, or to procrastinate with investigations or recommittal. Then, having partially or completely wrecked the usefulness of a bill, they may vote for the final version. Don't take these votes at face value."

In other words, don't be satisfied with the record of the final vote. See how your congressman voted on the amendments.

The NC-PAC literature concludes with a warning that any voter, whatever side he is on, may well take to heart:

"When your congressmen start promising in their forthcoming campaigns, check their past voting records very carefully. Don't take it for granted that if they voted for a measure, they were for it, and fought for it. Perhaps they helped cripple it first."

Disguise Enmity To Legislation

That is true, and with a little investigation, you will learn that a lot of congressmen, whose real views and activities you really wouldn't subscribe to at all, may have been voting in favor of some of the bills you would like to see passed. Later, when he is soliciting your support, he will point with pride to these measures, omitting to mention the fact that he helped to emasculate them carefully before hand.

You will also find sometimes that although he has loudly shouted down a bill (which you didn't like, and, secretly, he did), he did not actually work against it. Perhaps, finally, he even voted for it if there was no roll call.

Another way in which a congressman can fool his constituents is to offer an amendment which appeals to his particular locality, but which he knows can't possibly go through. That appeases the constituents and, at the same time, doesn't hurt the congressman with the particular interests with whom he may be friendly. They know, as well as he does, that the whole thing is just an empty gesture.

Kill Bill With Recommittal

The vote to "recommit" is a favorite trick, and usually reveals the true sentiments of a senator or congressman. Not much attention is paid to these votes. When a bill is "recommitted," it is sent back to committee, supposedly for reconsideration. Actually, recommittal usually means the measure is pigeonholed forever.

On the other hand, when a powerful committee pigeonholes a bill you would like to see passed, and your congressman is willing to sign a petition to try to get it out, you can be pretty certain he is sincerely working to get it through.

Of course, what goes on secretly in committees is most important, and can usually be found out, for the newspaper and radio correspondents make every effort to report the inside facts. This is not difficult for the reporters, since committee members whose efforts were defeated are usually willing to divulge the machinations of the majority — if there were any machinations.

Admittedly getting all this information takes time and trouble on your part. But that is the price you have to pay for the kind of government you want. The government makes you take time to figure out your income tax and to do a lot of other little chores, but it doesn't force you to inform yourself on how your government is being run. However, the information is all there, if you care to take the trouble to get it. Reports of public hearings, as well as the record of what happens on house and senate floors, are available for the asking. That is a part of your congressman's job — reporting to you.

As Lowell Mellett says in his "Handbook of Politics":

"The true test of a member of congress is not the good bills for which he voted, but the good bills he voted against — plus the number of bad bills he voted for."

Knowledge is power. Know your congressman, don't knock him.

Ike Didn't Tell It All

The final report of General Eisenhower to the combined chiefs of staff, which has at last been released, is a splendid example of terse and comprehensive exposition. Into less than 123 pages is compressed the epic of the greatest military operation in history, extending from D-Day to V-E Day.

It is unfortunate, for the sake of mystery lovers, that the document does not go into detail concerning one phase of the invasion which has rightly been called "the greatest deception in history" — the clever ruses which caused the enemy to make his fatal miscalculations.

The Germans knew that the Allied landing must be made somewhere within a relatively limited length of shore-line, but despite this, they were completely deceived as to where that landing was to be. The result was that the Allies were able to get a toehold which they might never have been able to secure, had the Germans guessed the prospective location of the real beachheads.

Obviously, the natural place for a landing would be in reasonable proximity to Calais, where the English channel is narrowest. Actually, the nearest beachhead was established more than a hundred miles farther to the west, but the whole German 15th army remained immobilized in that locality until it was too late.

But even after the landings were made, the Germans were not sure they were the main objectives. This was because of a five-prong plan of deception, all the prongs pointing to simulated diversionary attacks by land, sea and air, away from the actual invasion area.

One simulated attack was at Cap d'Antifer, northwest of Le Havre, far to the east of the invasion area. There, planes, ships and balloons moved in, gradually producing echoes on the German radar warning instruments similar to the approach of a convoy.

Another fake landing was staged in the direction of Boulogne, still farther east, with 16 ships and accompanying planes. The steady patrolling of the skies was taken by the Germans to be the air cover of an oncoming armada.

Far to the west, halfway down the Cherbourg peninsula, and at various other points, dummy airborne invasions were carried out. The Germans finally decided that the real thing was approaching Boulogne, and opened up with all they had. Meantime, the actual invasion forces crossed the channel without any interference by air or sea.

It was a grand fake.

1946 Wheat Harvest to Alleviate World Famine

WHEAT: Harvest Is On

When wheat ripens in the southwest, it ripens in a hurry. Shortly after harvesting of a normal crop began, the elevators were filled to overflowing. "Where are the cars so we can ship it?" asked growers. Thus, another wheat harvest started out normally!

There is strong belief now that the world grain outlook has apparently eased to a startling degree, but no official figures are yet available. Officials said exports in the final 10 days of June were in line with the first 20-day period when 834,000 tons were shipped for famine relief. The department hopes to equal or possibly exceed its 400,000,000 bushel export commitment with heavy July shipments.

TOURISTS: Sell Their Autos

Reports from Mexico and Cuba indicate that great numbers of tourists have taken their cars out of the United States, ostensibly for use in their travels, and then sold them at "fabulous" prices. And the U. S. government doesn't like it.

The government has moved to break up what it described as a practice of taking automobiles abroad as "personal baggage" and selling them at exorbitant prices. To halt it, the commerce department has forbidden export of cars as personal baggage unless the traveler proves he has lived in the United States continuously for a year and has owned the car for six months.

654,000 AUTOS: Made in First Half

A total of 654,000 passeger cars were turned out in the first six months of 1946, the Automobile Manufacturers' association has reported. About 140,000 cars were assembled in June. This is far below schedule.

Production by General Motors increased slightly during June. In the week ending June 22, the five car manufacturing divisions of the corporation turned out 18,111 passenger cars in contrast with 16,280 for the preceding week. Only 4,692 trucks were produced, compared with 4,802 the week before.

Truck output is expected to be accelerated as a result of the opening on June 25 of the GMC truck division in Pontiac, Mich.

5-YEAR TAX: Tops 151-Year Total

During the five years from 1941 through 1945 tax collections by the federal government totaled $121,524,000,000, or about 38 per cent more than the $88,723,000,000 returned in the preceding 151 years of the nation's history, according to figures of a New York trust company.

In 1917 the United States paid its first billion-dollar tax bill. In 1942, federal tax revenues reached 12 billions; in 1943, 21 billions; in 1944, 40 billions and in 1945, 41 billions.

Earliest federal revenues, according to the study, came from customs duties, tobacco and liquor excise taxes.

HOMEMAKERS: Leaders to Be Named

A campaign to recognize outstanding women in Nebraska and part of Iowa has been launched by the agricultural committee of the Omaha chamber of commerce. Nominations from rural communities will be received until November 1.

The rural homemakers recognition program was designed to honor women in every community who have outstanding records. Individual selection of the rural homemakers will be made by county committees composed of women who are leaders in that particular county.

The Omaha chamber of commerce and the chairman of the rural homemakers program, May Yard, believe the plan so meritorious that it will spread to all parts of the United States.

OIL MEN: To Aid Farmers

A program calling for special types of research which will be of direct aid to farming and for co-operation with all chemurgic research groups and farm organizations has been set up by directors of the American Petroleum institute at a recent meeting in Dallas. It will be sponsored by local oil companies in their own areas. Final action on the plan will be taken at a meeting in Chicago.

DOUBLE INDEMNITY

Judge Says War Clause Invalid

CHICAGO. — A decision holding that the war clause in a life insurance policy was invalid because the service-incurred death did not directly result from combat or enemy action has been placed on file in United States district court here.

Federal Judge William J. Campbell ruled that John P. Hooker, 52, of Winnetka, Ill., a real estate broker, should collect double indemnity on a policy taken out by his son, Marine Capt. George K. Hooker. Captain Hooker leaped to his death in training maneuvers near Auckland, New Zealand, in 1943.

Was Training Accident.

The $10,000 policy carried a double indemnity clause for accidental death, but stated the double payment would not be made if death resulted from war or any act incident thereto.

In May, 1943, Captain Hooker, 26, was sent out as a scout in a sham battle. He was captured by "enemy" marine corps forces, and attempting to escape, leaped over a bush which hid from view a 75-foot cliff. The resulting plunge caused his death.

Company Paid $10,000.

The life insurance company paid the elder Hooker $10,000, but refused the additional $10,000, claiming the captain's death resulted from an act incident to the war, Mr. Hooker filed suit in November, 1943.

In his opinion, Judge Campbell pointed out that the captain's death occurred in "routine training" and not as a result of combat or activities in immediate support of operations against the enemy.

INSURANCE AT NEW HIGH

NEW YORK. — Topping all records, life insurance owned by American families will reach an estimated 163 billion dollars at midyear, the institute of life insurance has reported.

Purchases of new life insurance in the first half of the year are estimated at 11 billion dollars, or about half again as large as in the first half of 1945 and practically twice that in the first half of 1941.

Greatest gains, the institute said, have been in the purchase of ordinary insurance, although group life coverage has shown a marked recovery from the setback which followed V-J Day.

Annual Farm Safety Week Is Set for July 21 to 27

By W. J. Dryden
WNU Farm Editor.

Accidents—one crop we can do without! And that is the reason why July 21 to 27 has been set aside as "Farm Safety Week" to carry the annual warning message to those who work with tools, livestock and machinery. Accidental death marches through the farm and ranch lands every day.

The great outdoors, it seems, is not so healthy when you look at the figures. Farm work accidents alone killed 4,500 persons last year. These farm deaths were 28 per cent of the nation's occupational death total, more than in any of the other seven major industrial groups.

'Eliminate a Hazard a Day.'

That is the information which President Truman undoubtedly had when he issued a proclamation this year calling upon farm people of the nation "to observe National Farm Safety Week by resolving to eliminate at least one hazard a day until their farms are as safe as they can possibly make them."

They must be made to see also the peril of nails, ladders, machines.

Because of truths like this the United States department of agriculture, the National Grange, the National Fire Protection association, the Farm Equipment institute, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Farmers Union, the co-operatives and other leading agricultural organizations are taking an active part along with the National Safety council in observing Farm Safety Week from July 21 to July 27 as a means of carrying safety education to the farmer.

Riddle of Ring Around Neck of Bear Is Solved

HEMLOCK, WASH. — Frequently a black bear with a white ring around its neck had appeared in this area. Some thought it was a tame bear with a gray collar of some kind. Others said it was a freak and actually had a white ring of fur around its neck.

Joe Szydlo solved the riddle when he shot the bear. The white ring was paint. It is believed that the bear, in its raids on garbage and other pails, had got his head into a paint bucket, probably tipping it over on his head. The bear could wipe the paint off its face with its paws, but must not have been able to wash his neck.

Eight Tractors Plant Two Fields in One Day

TAYLOR, TEXAS — Recently a tornado ruined crops west of Granger, destroying stands of corn and other crops, including those of Louis Hanzelka and Julius Cepcar.

Working almost as fast as the tornado, six neighbors with tractors volunteered to help Hanzelka and Cepcar replant the two farms They showed up bright and early in the morning, and by night the fields had been plowed and planted.

The eight tractors were manned by Hanzelka and Cepcar and Paul Repa, Albert Repa, Adolph Naizer, Willie Pekar, Louis Hajda and Huat Gourbec. After the fields were put in shape the ground was planted to cotton and feed.

Miner Wants Army To Bomb Mountain

WHITE SANDS, N. M.—A gold prospector who owns a mountain near where the V-2 rocket tests are being made has petitioned Lt. Col. H. R. Turner, commanding officer of White Sands proving ground, to aim a rocket over his way and blow up the mountain. It would save him a lot of digging, he says.

Colonel Turner has revealed that they will not be able to oblige the prospector.

VETS AND AVIATION

Thousands of wartime dreams are certain to crash, many aviation writers predict. And yet we find veterans getting most of the new jobs in aviation, not only as pilots but also as maintenance men, clerks, and in traffic control. Many vets are creating jobs for themselves in aviation. But government estimates indicate that even 10 years from now the number of persons employed in the industry will not equal the number of men and women who, while in the services, were hopeful of making aviation a peacetime career.

HELICOPTER FALLS

Many people have asked: "If a helicopter's engine konks out, can the craft be landed?" The question was answered recently at Dayton, Ohio, when an AAF helicopter dropped from 9,000 feet without damage to the craft or injury to the pilot. With its engine dead, autorotation, or free-wheeling of the rotor blades, allowed the pilot, Capt. Irvin C. Steiner of Wright Field, to land his helicopter safely in a cow pasture.

GOVERNOR WON'T FLY!

Col. Roscoe Turner, the air speed king, has a project in mind for this summer—to make Gov. John C. Vivian of Colorado get his feet off the ground!

"Once I can get his feet off the ground and demonstrate what a wonderful thing it is to travel by air, I think I can change his whole attitude," Turner promised. "He'll become so air-minded it will be a great thing for the state."

A survey of army and navy air forces showed around 1,000,000 were interested in postwar occupations related to flying. Present direct employment in aviation is around 300,000, of whom 185,000 work for aircraft manufacturers, 55,000 for the scheduled airlines, 10,000 for the federal government, 20,000 for airports, and the rest in a variety of jobs.

gers, etc. Likewise, Florida leads all states in the variety of soils, crops, fishes, trees, flowers, herbs and birds. And Florida is big in area. An automobile to reach Key West from Pensacola, by way of Jacksonville, must drive 100 miles farther than Jacksonville is from Washington, D. C.

Florida pineapples are real, too. And the fields of cotton, tobacco, peanuts, hay and other crops are substantial. Poultry raising is a large and growing industry. Florida has nearly a million and a half cattle — both dairy and beef types, and many more ranges and pastures are available. Its ranches are measured in thousands of acres, with cowboys riding herd on Brahman and other steers! There are 10 million acres of good land as yet undeveloped in Florida.

Industry in Florida is an actuality too. The "playground" is being utilized for workshops and factories, shipyards and mills. Its paper mills are producing, and new ones being built. Florida cement plants are always busy. Florida factories make everything from glassware and cotton goods to furniture and ships. Approximately 10 per cent of the fish business of the United States is centered in the Peninsula State. The only commercial sponge fishery in the United States is in Florida.

Mine and Forest Products.

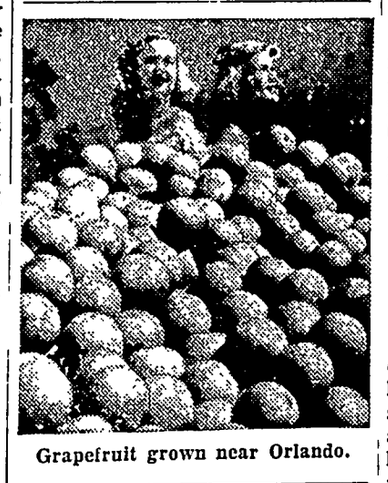
Nature gave Florida phosphate, limestone, sand, kaolin, clay and cement. Its lumber industry is great and growing greater. The Florida tidewater red cypress is known as "the wood eternal." Florida's yellow pine is produced in volume for a variety of uses. Turpentine and rosin, "naval stores," are liquid gold from Florida pines. Tung orchards are a new and vigorous industry for the state.

Millions of Americans visited Florida for the first time during the war. They were the men and women of the military and naval forces who were trained at Florida bases — Pensacola, Valparaiso, Camp Blanding, Orlando, Tampa, West Palm Beach, Miami, Key West and many others. Now that the war is over, many of them are returning to Florida where they will make their homes, enter business, and help develop industry.

Less than 75 years ago Rockledge was the most southerly settlement on the east coast. Fort Pierce was in the heart of the Indian country, and Indian river was a wild, almost unknown area, the haunt of wild fowl and flamingoes. St. Petersburg was non-existent. Okeechobee, the largest body of fresh water in all the southeast, was scarcely more than a semi-legendary lake somewhere in the heart of the Everglades. There was not a farm, plantation, settlement or town throughout all the district between Jupiter and Biscayne Bay and the Gulf of Mexico.

Yet St. Augustine is the oldest town in America!

Those who see only beaches, beautiful hotels and resorts, palm trees and moss-draped oaks may say: "This is Florida!" And quickly another may retort. "And so is this!" And he will be pointing to agriculture, livestock, industry and substantial homes Railroads, harbors, waterways, airports and broad highways bring both Floridas — the playground and the home ground — within 48 hours of any part of the United States.



Grapefruit grown near Orlando.

America's re-discovered land offers its magnificent mansions, Spanish architecture, rich historic lore, scores of delightful towns, miles of farms and ranches, dozens of factories and mills, airports and smooth highways, to everyone. See Florida's east coast; visit its west coast. And in between the coasts, see the Everglades — the strangest, most unique, most mysterious, of natural land formations on the continent.

West Coast Settled Before East Coast

Although much is heard about Florida's east coast, the west coast on the Gulf of Mexico is equally notable. From 10 to 30 years before St Augustine was founded, there were Spanish settlements at Tampa Bay, Charlotte Harbor and Pensacola. Much of the interior of western Florida had been explored and oranges had been introduced before either the Dons or the French had erected their first fort on the east coast.

On the romantic Gulf coast of Florida is historical Tampa and its famous spring, Espiritu Santo, where De Soto slacked his thirst.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

NEW NATIONAL ANTHEM

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Joseph P. McNarney, who is doing a better job as commander of occupied Germany than most people think, likes to sing. And when he comes up to Berlin for his regular visits with the other Allied commanders, he always engages in a song fest with the Russians.

As a result, the Russians have adopted a new song which they virtually regard as the American national anthem. They sing it on any and all occasions. They think it brings pride and pleasure to the hearts of Americans; and the Red army in Berlin, at least, is anxious to please Americans.

Actually, the song may bring great pride and pleasure to General McNarney, but other Americans privately are getting a bit weary of it. The Russians have learned the English words, and to the tune of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," here is what they sing as the new American national anthem:

"Three cheers for the Sam Jones
Junior high school,
The best junior high in Toledo."

The fact that they have learned the words illustrates a point which some of our top-bracket statesmen don't always realize—namely, despite our difficulties with the Soviet government, we have no quarrel with the Russian people. Not much has been said about it, but relations between the American and Soviet armies in Berlin have been extraordinarily good. At first, the Russians were suspicious, didn't want any fraternization of their troops with ours. But that suspicion has largely disappeared. The Red army is a large, unwieldy, badly disciplined, very human cross section of the Russian people, and that part of the Red army which is in Berlin likes Americans.

PRUSSIAN JUNKERS

Robert Murphy, political adviser to General McNarney in Berlin, has secretly sent a bitter complaint to the state department because the Russians have redistributed the estates of the Prussian Junkers in the Soviet zone of Germany. The Russians have broken up some 10,000 large estates among about 275,000 peasants. Despite the fact that the Potsdam agreement specifically called for breaking up large estates, Murphy has warned Washington that this land reform in the Russian zone is endangering the western type of democracy we want.

WE DIDN'T DEFEAT JAPAN

Most people won't believe it, but in Czechoslovakia, a country not unfriendly to the U. S. A., the people have no idea that the United States had anything to do with defeating Japan. They think it was Russia that did it all.

Reason is that the Russian radio and propaganda machine has done a skillful job of propagandizing the Czechoslovak people, while we have done absolutely nothing to counteract it.

Reason we haven't told our side of the story is that congress has hamstrung the state department on shortwave broadcasting. The house appropriations committee cut the heart out of the state department's appropriation for propaganda, especially radio broadcasting.

MAILMAN SULLIVAN

Too little attention is paid in this politics-ridden capital to the quiet, unassuming officials who consistently do a bang-up job.

One of them is Assistant Postmaster General Gael Sullivan. Coming from Chicago and trained under Mayor Ed Kelly, Sullivan at first looked like a pure political appointee. In six months, however, he has become one of the most effective members of the little cabinet.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Both the Chinese Nationalists and the Chinese Communists are bursting to learn what's in the script for "The Life of Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen," a new movie to be made by Producer Lester Cowan. Perhaps General Marshall could use oriental curiosity to persuade both sides to get together. . . . Assistant Secretary of the Navy John Kenny is the latest to knife President Truman's atomic control policy. Kenny testified on Capital Hill that he was personally in favor of giving the military greater control over atomic energy—which was directly contrary to his commander-in-chief. . . . British Tories are urging ex-Prime Minister Winston Churchill to resign as Tory leader of commons and devote himself solely to writing his memoirs. They seem to feel he can be more useful in private life.

MERRY GO ROUND

It got little publicity, but President Truman pulled an A-1 man out of the navy when he made Comdr. Jim Reynolds a member of the National Labor Relations board. Reynolds is brother of famed War Correspondent Quentin Reynolds, has been doing a good job handling the navy's labor relations. . . . Harold Ickes had his first censorship difficulties when the Washington Star didn't like what he wrote about Senator McCarran of Nevada, and omitted that particular column.

One of us wondered how the Louis-Conn RKO fight films would get over since there wasn't a real blow struck in Round One and not much fighting in the following rounds until the finish.

"The movies will be awful dull," said a fellow.

"They'd look a lot better," said a wag, "with Lana Turner!"

Gracie Allen, the fight expert of Burns & Allen, was among the Working Press section in Row A. . . . When the 6th round ended, she ho-hum'd: "Only nine more rounds to go!" . . . Sherman Billingsley was the guest of Prof. Runyon at the ringside. The Stork man was thrilled about getting a "free" seat. He bought $1,000 worth of $100 ducats, which he gave to friends. . . . After round two (in which Conn irked the champ with some fancy hoop-la) Louis gave Conn the most refrigerated glare since Sonja Henie iced Dan Topping. . . . When Income Tax Collector Nunan met heavy taxpayer Ann Sheridan, she groaned: "Hullo, boss." . . . As the gambling wiseacres put it: "Never bet against a champion—until he loses."

Admiral Halsey was irked over an editorial in a mid-western paper, which rapped his former Comdr., Harold Stassen. . . . The editorialist inaccurately stated that Stassen "hid behind Halsey's skirts."

"That's the damndest tommyrot I ever heard of," barked the Admiral. "It was just the other way 'round! I was far behind Stassen's ship when the Japs dropped bombs on it —killing 75 of Stassen's crew!"

Gen. Eisenhower has a new style of answering politicos who are trying to get him to give some hint on whether he'd consider running for President on the Repub ticket. He refers them to his wife, who says: "I don't like politics." . . . While Uncle Sam sends vast hunks of our fleet to Bikini for destruction—the British continue to build up their navy. . . . The king without a throne (Leopold of Belgium) will figure in a story out of Switzerland where he plans to white-wash his war record with some sort of defense. . . . The National City Bank has purchased a plot of land in Sao Paulo (Brazil) and paid more for it than they paid for their Wall Street headquarters. . . . A Boston firm recently bought a million and a half surplus knives, forks and spoons from the gov't. Then they stamped them: "Stolen from the U. S. Army." They sold like mad to war vets who like to boast.

A group of Soviet engineers have arrived in the U. S. "to study public works systems," under the tutelage of the Federal Works Agency. . . . They'll visit Chi, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. They are "interested" in bridges, streets and highways. . . . Is dot zoh? . . . If the Army-Navy merger goes through (which insiders believe it won't), Stuart Symington will be Secy of Nat'l Defense . . . Lots of big shots are reported loaded with Mexican gold. They keep it to circumvent the ruling about possessing American gold coins. . . . You'd be amazed at the number of big-shot American writers and others who pay no taxes by living in Cuba —and continue selling pieces up here. And for good reason, too. Authors often use four years to write a book, and if it's any good, it is a best-seller. Then they are taxed heavily the year they are paid—not the four years devoted to doing the work.

Houses Now Selling for Double Their True Worth

ARE YOU one of those who are willing, under press of circumstances, to spend $6,000 to $7,000 out of your war savings to buy or build a home, and out of low grade materials too, and in 6 to 10 years see it deteriorate in value something like 65 per cent?

. In other words, are you willing to spend $6,000 today for a home, and in 10 years sell it for $2,100, and take a loss of $3,900? At any rate, whether you are willing or not, that's what likely will happen under present inflated values of homes and home construction. That's what happened after the last war, and that's what government, in the face of overwhelming opposition by the real estate lobby, is seeking to prevent after this war. It is having little luck so far.

And you may be lucky if you don't lose the whole thing. After the boom and bust period which followed the last war, millions of home owners who had purchased at inflated prices, not only lost their equity, but they saw the mortgage foreclosed and their homes go into the hands of insurance companies and other real estate mortgagors.

Farmers were in the same boat. The only difference between now and after the last war is that now more land at inflated value is being purchased for cash than 25 years ago. Thus the purchaser of high cost farm land today stands a better chance of evading the mortgage foreclosure . . . that is, he may save his land, but suffer the loss in value.

Home Prices Jump 65%

In a nation-wide survey recently completed by presidents of Federal Home Loan banks, regional managers of Home Owners Loan corporations, insuring officers of the Federal Housing administration, all constituents of the National Housing agency of which Mr. Wilson Wyatt is administrator . . . these results were disclosed:

As between 1940 and 1946, low-priced homes, homes selling under $6,000, have gone up 65.1 per cent, medium priced homes, $6,000 to $12,000, have gone up 57 per cent, raw land has jumped 60.1 per cent and fully prepared building lots have upped 61.8 per cent . . . and the report disclosed that this inflation held true in small towns and large cities alike . . . and some of these communities showed real estate prices skyrocketing as high as 100 per cent.

The Pacific coast region led the parade of price rises with an average increase on low-priced homes of 96.3 per cent, while the Middle Atlantic region showed the smallest, at 44 per cent.

Some of the answers to this inflated value of homes and home construction are seen in the Wagner-Ellender - Taft bill which the real estate lobby is opposing tooth and nail as "socialistic." The bill, however, is a long-range bill and will not answer the immediate problem, as the veterans' housing bill with its attendant subsidies seeks to do.

Looks to Future Needs

This long-range measure, foreseeing a continued emergency demand for new housing for many years to come, provides for the expenditure of some 6.8 billion dollars in public money for slum clearance and public housing, both urban and rural development, offers federal loans where they cannot be obtained by private loan, and provides for easy purchase or fair rental. Despite the determined opposition, this bill sailed through the senate without even a roll-call record vote when the measure was passed.

It appears to this writer that the result of this impartial survey shows clearly that without regulation inflation comes upon the heels of widespread demand. In this instance, the greater demand is in low-cost homes, and that's where the greatest degree of inflation rests . . . 65 per cent as compared to 57 per cent for the next bracket. It is for this reason that OPA and Housing - expediter Wyatt have been demanding price control of these homes and subsidies to partially provide incentive for material supply, and to ease the burden of costs with public money.

It appears, too, that instead of preventing inflation in the real estate market, which is already here, the objective now is to hold it from going farther out-of-bounds, if this can be done in the face of all the obstacles which must be overcome.

We have the certain lesson of the last war in front of us. We have the facts of the present to go upon and yet our psychological make-up is such that our fur is rubbed the wrong way when we are told through governmental regulation to do this or not to do this. What we want, we want now.

Of the dozen or more varieties of snow classified by scientists, the oddest is sand snow which has been observed in the Arctic regions by explorers. Consisting of fine particles, this snow, when falling at very low temperatures, takes on the characteristics of sand, becoming so hard and rough that neither sled nor ski can glide on it.

CO-OPS Are Hired Hands

Years ago, power for farming operations was furnished by horses and mules, and farmers themselves produced the hay and oats to feed them. Today, tractors and trucks furnish the power for farming . . . and through their Co-ops, farmers have drilled oil wells, built pipe lines and refineries to produce the synthetic "hay and oats" for their iron "horses."

When farmers sell through their co-ops at a saving, and ma further savings through their farm supply purchasing co-ops, they lowering the cost of farming operations. Their co-ops are merely tensions of farm operations -- hired hands that handle the many p blems which come up far from the farm but which affect the farme annual income tremendously.

Businessmen, too, have co-ops to do a similar job for them -- socations through which they purchase necessary supplies, or in so cases the merchandise which they sell, at a saving. Co-ops operated farmers and co-ops operated by businessmen are both an essen part of the free-enterprise system helping to build the kind of Amer we fought a war to protect.

Sportsmen Benefit By Observing Game Laws

Iowa sportsmen who enjoy an afternoon fishing in the lakes and streams of the state this week were urged to observe the sports laws and regulations designed for their own protection.

Ellis Hicks, Iowa State College wildlife specialist, agrees that few fisherman willfully break the game laws. But there are many who don't take the trouble to learn the rules or are careless in their observance of them.

"We should keep in mind," Hicks says, "that regulations often vary as to the kind of fish to be taken, legal fish weights and the length of the fishing season among the many lakes, streams and reservoirs in the state. This is necessary because of the variation in fish populations, available feed and other management practice.

Learn Regulations

"If each sportsman takes the responsibility of learning the regulations governing the water in which he's fishing, there'll be less breaking of the rules."

Copies of regulations, Hicks says, can be obtained from the local conservation officer, State Conservation Commission and often from the local agency selling the fishing licenses.

Fishermen who ignore catch limits are hurting themselves. And one deplorable practice is to take two or more catch limits in one day. The only result of such practices can be a closing of the season on such fish in future years.

Undersize Fish

Hicks also urged fishermen to handle undersize fish carefully and return them to the water with a minimum of injury. The hands should be wet, and if possible the hook should be removed while the fish is in the water.

Using undesirable fish for bait should be avoided. Hicks points out that young dogfish (called mud minnows) sometimes are used for bait. Invariably live bait escapes of may be dumped into the lake when the fishing party is over. The population of the unwanted dogfish is then on the increase.

Sportsmen are encouraged to report unusual conditions to their local conservation officer. When stream flow decreases, many fish often are stranded and die, unless prompt action is taken to save them.

A splendid report was given by them at the Bingham Boosters Club on Thursday at Clarice Nelson Schleuger's home. Other club leaders may make arrangements with the girls or Hazel Grimes in regard to a time when they could report at their club meetings.

IOWANS CONTINUE TO BUY U. S. BONDS

Hancock Countians Buy $42,101 In June

Sales of U. S. Savings Bonds for June in Iowa totalled $16,357,220.00 Roger F. Warin, State Director of Iowa for the U. S. Savings Bonds Division, announced today. Of the $16,000,000 in sales $9,222,027 were in Series E Bonds, and $6,462,200 in Series G Bonds.

Warin indicated that he was pleased with the June totals although inasmuch as the Treasury Department had put forth a special campaign for the month, totals could well have been higher, he said. Sales for many intrim months during the war ran at approximately the figure sold for June.

"Iowans should step up their bond buying considerably if they are to really show their buying ability and if they really want to make the best investment possible today," Warin said.

"Our sales record for June indicates that wise investors are continuing to buy Savings Bonds in an increased amount while on the other hand, there are thousands of Iowans who are not buying and who should be buying. Most of these people who are not buying are those that need to form habits of thrift during these times when income is high."

Hancock County people purchased in June $35,00 in E Bonds and $17.100 in G Bonds for a tatal of $42,101 for the month.

THRESHING BEGINS!

The past week saw most of the oats crop cut and shocked, or combined. This week some farmers have begun to thresh.

The oats this year is not quite as heavy as that of last year, but is of good quality and weighs out from 30 to 36 pounds per bushel. Yields so far have been reported from 30 to 60 bushel per acre, with a few exceeding that mark.

Corn in North Iowa is tasseling and is looking very good with prospects of a bumper crop.

Hancock County has had a bumper hay crop and prospects are good for a bumper crop soy beans.

DIRECT FROM BIKINI:

An Eye Witness Account Of Atomic Bomb Blast

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Washington Correspondent.

ABOARD USS APPALACHIAN, OPERATIONS CROSSROADS—From a military standpoint the explosion of the fourth atomic bomb was a huge success but as a spectacle worth traveling 8,000 miles to see it did not live up to its advance billing. From the standpoint of efficiency and precision the plutonium bomb was dropped squarely in the target area. The advance weather predictions held true. It was dropped on time to the second. The air drones were sent through the cloud area and shepherded back by their mother ships. The boat drones were sent into the area of radio activity and brought back via radio control. The cameras clicked and the instruments built especially to measure the results of the blast worked.

But to those of us here aboard the Appalachian, who had been orientated and lectured day after day for the past two weeks, who had interviewed scientists and scientific writers, the bomb burst and the atomic cloud were a disappointment.

The recapitulation of the damage showed the troop transports Gilliom and Carlisle sunk; the destroyer Lampson capsized; heavy damage was done to the submarine Skate, the light cruiser Pensacola, the carrier Independence, the Jap cruiser Sakawa, and the German pocket battleship Prinz Eugen. Light to negligible damage was caused on the Jap battleship Nagata, the battleship Nevada, the oiler No. 160 and LCM No. 1. Small fires were started and later extinguished on the destroyer Wilson, the Pensacola, the transport Briscoe, the Nevada, the carrier Saratoga and transports Niagara, Bladen, Banta, Butte, Cortland, Bracken and Faun and the battleship New York. Heaviest damage was caused on the Independence and the fire which burst into flames on her stern was more dramatic to watch than the bomb burst insofar as this writer was concerned.

Because the atomic cloud did not reach the heights achieved in previous drops was not considered as reflection upon the efficiency of the bomb. Reasons for the relatively low cloud given were that water absorbed much of the heat energy and the difference in atmospheric structure caused a slower rise.

It may be that those of us who stood along the starboard rail of the Appalachian were expecting too much. We had been led to believe from many sources to expect drama and adventure and excitement. Let me assure you there was no drama and certainly no excitement. I confess that as I pulled the polarized plastic goggles over my eyes as we heard the signal "bomb away" I did feel excited and tense as I awaited the blast. It came as I saw it, well above the horizon, a huge orange ball.

It might have been a fireworks display on the Fourth of July, although not near so dazzling. I watched the cloud appearing like nothing more than a huge cherry ice cream soda. Cream white on the surface but deep inside the hues were pink and rose, and it boiled and seethed up through a cumulous natural cloud which hid it from our view I felt a slight "pft" in my ears but felt no heat blast. Seconds later the sound of detonation came like a distant peal or roll of thunder that's all, but then we were 18 miles away.

Ten minutes after the blast the cloud had mushroomed up to a height of 26,000 feet and was approximately 12,000 feet across the top. The trade winds soon broke it up and it was pushed westward where it gradually leveled off and dispersed as our ship steamed slowly along the seaward side of Bikini island.

We could see the ghost fleet in the lagoon through our binoculars. Fire amidship showed on the Saratoga. The Salt Lake City was ablaze. There appeared to be a small fire aboard the Nevada. These fires made a smoke haze over the lagoon, but it soon cleared away and as I look toward the lagoon now there is little indication of a fire anywhere.

We are changing course now, following the Mt. McKinley, Admiral Blandy's flagship, apparently with the intention of entering the lagoon. Television receiving sets in the ward room of the Appalachian registered the blast from cameras installed on the island, then they went out of commission.

The carrier Independence likely suffered more damage than any other capital ship to its superstructure and all planes which were atop its flight deck were carried away. There was superficial or superstructure damage to other ships of the 73 in the target fleet but to me the pathos of the thing was emphasized when I saw the sturdy masts of the old Nevada brilliant in its orange paint, standing there still staunch and true despite the atomic bomb.

There was no wind, no waves and no thunderstorm. No trees were damaged on the island. There was no tidal wave and no earthquake. In fairness there was no prediction from the navy or army officials that any of these things might happen. The navy frankly said they didn't know what would happen. These wild predictions were made by scientists or scientific writers. Also, in all fairness to the officers of joint task force No 1, the bomb, which looked to small to the lay writers, may actually have been big.

Scientifically of course there can be no adequate judgment of the results until the instruments have been read, the damage on the various ships actually determined and measured. In the light of the objectives, the navy and the army had in mind the actual effect of the bomb on naval construction, navy and army material, armament, ordnance and other equipment.

Admiral Blandy, commander of the task force, issued a statement in which he said he was highly pleased with the whole operation; with the bomb drop and with the efficiency of the bomb. There are several aboard the ship who saw the Nagasaki bomb drop and the drop at Los Alamos, N. M. They declared this bomb appeared to be smaller, judging from the flash and the atomic cloud which in the case of Nagasaki soared to a height of about 55,000 feet.

There is no doubt that the force of this terrible energy is like nothing ever known on earth before but the distances out here are so great that the energy was dispersed and dissipated over a vast area. For instance, at Nagasaki the area of total bomb damage was in six square miles, or an area of about a mile and a half radius, while the distance of the Nevada from the shore of Bikini lagoon was about three miles. And the lagoon itself is 10 miles across and 25 miles long. It must also be remembered that as this story is written for transmission in time to get it to you there has been no actual assessment of the real damage. There may be more as we enter the lagoon and can visually assay the damage.

Precision Marked Operations Crossroads

By PAUL FELTUS

When "Dave's Dream" took to the dawn sky on Kwajalein Atoll, the long-planned and vast machinery of the Army Air Forces role in Operations Crossroads began to move with the precision of a great war mission.

The operation had been planned, but this time there was a new thrill of anticipation for they were dealing with the force of atomic energy.

The schedule for every one of the hundreds of planes and ships had been timed to the second. Everybody knew just what to do as the command plane headed for the target area of Bikini lagoon.

The vast network of communications was set in motion. The weather man had said, "This is the day," and General Ramey had said, "Let's Go." Then the planes began to roll.

Congress Methods to Be Revamped

Few Legislators Authors Of Bills They Introduce

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

A bright young railroad executive who has his cum laude in law from a famed university was sitting with me in Burt's the other day.

Burt's is a sort of greenroom for radio folk and others who move and speak and have their being in what is euphemistically referred to as Washington's Radio center. Inspired (or infuriated) by the presence of so many of the few who say so much to so many, my friend launched forth into a tirade on the responsibility of the publicist.

"You can't play baseball according to football rules," he said, shaking a menacing fist at me, "and that is what Washington officials are doing. You studied political science 30 years ago. I studied it only 20 years ago. And you know perfectly well that the present generation is not following the rules laid down by our founding fathers. You ought to tell the public about it.

"Now maybe the principles of our government are wrong. I am not defending them. But I am saying that we are deserting them. Rule of the majority, a republican form of government operated by the representatives of the people, is a travesty, when legislation is jammed through by minorities. And I mean bureaucrats as well as lobbyists."

This happened when the senate was neck-deep in the final debate over the OPA and my friend claimed congress was revolting against what he called the high pressure methods of the administration. Since the congress was tearing the administration measure to shreds at that moment I pointed out that while it was true that congress was sore at Stabilizer Bowles for what they called propagandizing, the example was not a very good one. So he proceeded to develop his theme with specific references all too familiar to me and my colleagues of the microphone and typewriter.

Town Seethes With Lobbyists

You, too, are familiar with the power of the "pressure boys" as my friend Kenneth Crawford called them in his revealing book by that name. Crawford estimated there were 6,000 active lobbyists in Washington when World War II started. There are many more now. Speaker Rayburn said the town was "seething" with them.

We all remember the seven-digit sum of money contributed to a campaign fund which came out of the members' dues of one great labor union. True, the head of the union later quarrelled with the president whom he had helped elect because the president refused to take his orders. Nevertheless, this example illustrates what "big money" attempts, and sometimes succeeds in doing.

We know, too, that when the entire economy of the country was locked to a dead center by strikes in two essential industries, coal and transportation, and that when the government itself gave orders, those orders were disobeyed. Minority rule was operating then. Minority groups nullified the wishes of the duly-elected representatives of the people.

My friend, with all his vehemence, with his allegiance to management, made no claim that the demands of the railroad men, the coal miners, were unjust. He merely said that in order to obtain what they considered justice, the powerful leaders of the organizations to which they belong were able to play baseball according to football rules—temporarily at least.

The theory that the creation of the laws of the land has been taken from the hands of the elected representatives of the people was put forth by Crawford in "The Pressure Boys" seven years ago when he said: "It is improbable that a single important law enacted in the last 10 years has been written by its congressional sponsor or its nominal author. Administration bills are prepared by New Deal experts in executive departments. Legislation independently inaugurated is almost invariably prepared in the office of a lobbyist. Congress maintains a legislative drafting service which writes bills for committees, but it seldom is called upon by individual legislators for assistance in writing any minor private bills."

LaFollette Bill Would Revamp

Thomas Mechlin, writing on this subject in the current Virginia Quarterly Review, touches on the subject of readymade legislation. He tells how a lobby "gets its own staff together and knocks out a bill which the front office would like to see made a law eventually. It then runs the draft over to a large law firm which has one of its members in congress. Although the congressman cannot personally represent the client, the method used in submitting the proposed legislation through the 'body' of the firm takes care of that. . . . If the lobby is well-organized, it will exploit high-powered publicity from then on out."

I am constrained to admit that much in all of these assertions is true. But I would like to mention three hopeful signs on the horizon, minuscule though they may be. Two were measures introduced but not acted upon in this session of congress. They will be presented again and have a good chance of passing.

One is the LaFollette measure for revamping congress, one provision of which increases the technical assistance available to members. The second is a bill introduced by Representative Sabath of Illinois, which provides for an all-inclusive investigation of lobbies. Most congressmen don't like lobbyists and Sabath's bill, as Mechlin admits, was a crystallization of this feeling.

The third indication was a resolution introduced during the OPA fight by Senator Taylor (D., of Idaho) authorizing the publication of a document on how each senator voted on every measure. He said that the people are becoming more aware of their political responsibilities, that politics is no longer solely in the hands of politicians, ward-heelers and lobbyists.

Congress is sensitive to the need of a restoration of majority rule, but the only real hope lies within the majority itself. Unfortunately, the giant sleeps.

South Dakotans Are Visitors

Two recent visitors to Washington, Mrs. Evelyn Baker and Mrs. James Magee of Custer and Belle Fourche, S. D., can tell their friends back home in the Black Hills region that while they were here they took in three events which might set the tone for all such future events.

The ladies, winners of a radio contest to honor women who did their bit during the war years, visited Washington during the week when three top-drawer government officials, all close friends of Harry Truman, were sworn into new jobs.

The swearing-in of a cabinet officer used to be a rather modest affair. The swearinee, his family, a few friends, and his office staff, a few of the press, usually gathered in his new office, and the whole affair was over in about the time it takes for bride and groom to say "I do."

True, Fred Vinson and Lewis Schwellenbach did travel to Capitol Hill for their inaugurations as treasury and labor secretaries respectively. But those events occasioned no such hoopla as did the ceremonies which made Monday—Tuesday — Wednesday Washington news one late week in June.

Mrs. Magee and Mrs. Baker and five thousand other spectators, plus the navy band, gathered on the White House lawn to watch Mr. Vinson take over his new office as chief justice of the United States; they saw John Snyder's big moment made bigger when President Truman strolled from the White House to the treasury portico to watch his St. Louis crony take the oath as head of the treasury department; and they observed tall, young-looking John Steelman's swearing-in as reconversion director.

Having observed these impressive occasions, the Black Hills visitors could appreciate the widely-whispered remark of Undersecretary of Navy John Sullivan. (Sullivan got his swearing-in done quietly and traditionally on June 18.) As Sullivan congratulated John Steelman after the rose garden ceremony, he asked, "Well, are you the last of the June brides?"

Days of 'Easy Payments' Said to Be on Way Back

CREDIT: Payments Easier

The old days of "a dollar down and a dollar every time we catch you" are not back yet, but time or "easy" payments have been liberalized on many items. It is expected that charge accounts will continue to rise also with relaxation of the 30-day rule under which all bills had to be paid by the 10th day of the second month after purchase.

Under regulation W, federal reserve system measure controlling credit, many items have been listed under group A which required a down payment of one-third and 12 months' maximum maturity. Attic ventilating fans, automobile batteries, tires and inner tubes have been removed from group A. Many household appliances are expected to be removed within a short time. Furniture is still under control when sold on credit.

RUSS ENVOY: Says No War

The new Russian ambassador to the United States, Nikolai V. Novikov, in one of his first statements promised that the Soviet Union "will never start a war against the United States or anyone else."

While he insisted that all differences between the two major powers could be ironed out, he cautioned that solutions for many world problems will require time and patience.

COMMUNISTS: In State Department

Charges of Communism in the U. S. state department is "more a matter of alarm than of fact," Dean Acheson, under-secretary of state, told the house foreign affairs committee in Washington.

He denied that 300 of the state department personnel had been fired because of Communistic leanings, as intimated by Representative Cox (D., Ga.), on the house floor. They were let go for economy reasons, he said.

Of all the lists submitted by members of congress and other persons, raising the Communist issue against various permanent department personnel, he said, accusations against but one employee have been substantiated, and this person has been discharged. The employee was not identified.

DEGNAN CASE: Killer Found?

The entire United States was shocked last January when little Suzanne Degnan was found slain near her home in Chicago. The case proved to be one of the most stubborn police, the FBI and others ever attempted to solve. Now, they believe they have found the killer.

William Heirens must face the music. He faces 21 burglary and 4 assault charges, to say nothing of the evidence piled up connecting him with the kidnap-murder of Suzanne.

Heirens, police said, once confessed the Degnan murder. But more often he steadfastly has denied every crime of which the police have accused him. He was a student at the University of Chicago.

ATOM BOMB: And Human Beings

The extent of heat damage to some of the more distant parts of the target fleet in Bikini lagoon, where the atom bomb test was made July 1, showed human survival would have been doubtful. Ships a mile from the center of the blast were burned and blackened as though by a tremendous blast furnace.

Anyone on the decks of these ships would have burned to death in an instant, those who inspected the damage believe While some animals survived on most ships, the fate of human beings might have been different. Studies of animals' injuries may show whether enough crewmen could have lived through the blast to operate the stricken ship. Making the study is Dr. Carl Compton of the Massachusetts institute of technology.

U. S. FILMS: Shown in Paris

They were gayer than ever in "Gay Paree" when the first "new" American films to be imported to France under the terms of the French loan made their appearance. Well, maybe the films weren't exactly the latest but—

The pictures shown during the opening week included "Citizen Kane," "Kitty Foyle," "Too Many Husbands" and "Dangerous Adventure." All are in English with French subtitles dubbed in.

The new movies made their appearance in the middle of a bitter attack by some French writers on what they termed the "assassination" of the French movie industry.

SHADES OF BRYAN

Silver Ratio 16-1 May Prevail

WASHINGTON.—The senate has tacked a rider to the post office appropriations bill which would boost the price of silver to 90.3 cents an ounce for the next two years. After that the treasury may begin buying the white metal at $1.29 an ounce.

If the senate bill comes through conference and becomes a law, the old William Jennings Bryan ratio of 16 to 1 may yet prevail. Before the devaluation some years ago, the price of gold was $20.67 an ounce. One-sixteenth of $20.67 is $1.29.

Silver producers of the western part of the United States have always resented the old ratio of about 32 to 1, which was the relationship between the two metals when Bryan made his famous "Cross of Gold" speech. New mines had been opened and silver had become more abundant. The silver producers have tried for years to restore the old 16 to 1 ratio which prevailed before 1873.

The only stickler now is that gold is priced at $35 an ounce. Even if silver advances to $1.29, it will not be up to the coveted 16 to 1 ratio which westerners believe is the proper balance in a world where bimetallism is used.

While most countries are now off the gold standard, silver is still used in almost every country. In some countries, such as India, nickel and other metals are used. For many years the U. S. treasury did not purchase silver in quantities sufficient to hold prices up. The silver purchase act of 1934 was designed to aid the white metal regain some of its old prestige.

North Dakota Man Traps 200 Snakes From Single Den

CHAMBERLAIN, S D —Although Bryan Menzie of the soil conservation office is not particularly fond of rattlesnakes, he carries pictures of them around with him. Also, he likes to tell of how he captured more than 200 of them in one den on the Bill Stanton ranch, seven miles north of Chamberlain.

Jackly, who is a rattlesnake authority, designed two traps which were built by Bruce Campbell and Merle Thompson. The snake traps were set and the catch in them totaled more than 100 rattlers in recent weeks. Last fall over 125 rattlers were taken from the same den. It is the picture of these well-filled traps that Menzie carries around to show his friends.

Paul Bunyan Plow Makes Furrows 6 Feet Deep, 3 Wide

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—California now boasts of the largest plow in the world, a Paul Bunyan model if there ever was one. It plows a furrow three feet wide and six feet deep and requires four heavy duty tractors to pull it. It turns over three-quarters of an acre every hour.

The reason for such a plow is that much good land in the San Luis Rey valley was covered by sand during a flood in 1916. The gigantic plow was built to dig deep into the ground and turn up the good soil and bury the sand. The fertility of the land is thus restored and ready for farming.

The cost of bringing the rich soil to the surface is from $50 to $100 an acre.

House Cost $1,700 In 1903; Sold for $5,000 in 1946

ORD, NEB.—Mrs. Mary Hill, now a resident of Ogallala, Neb., returned here recently to sell her former home which she and her late husband built in 1903 at a cost of $1,700.

She had no difficulty in finding a buyer for the house she lived in for 41 years. She sold the property for $5,000.

"WHAT GOES UP—"

Land Prices Soar

Released by WNU.

Is speculative ownership of land becoming the "No. 1 Enemy" of future farm prosperity? Are land prices due to tumble as they did after World War I? Will the cost of land go so high that the farmer cannot make a profit? These are questions that are being asked from California to Maine.

Land prices have already soared 71 per cent above the 1935-39 averages. They are approaching the boom levels that followed World War I. Many bankers are frankly worried lest the crash and deflation of the early 1920s be repeated.

Government figures show farm land prices during World War II more than doubled in Indiana, North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Colorado and Wyoming.

Increases of more than 90 per cent have been recorded in Ohio, Michigan, Georgia, Mississippi, Arkansas and Montana. For the country as a whole, farm real estate values have jumped 13 per cent in the past year.

From the beginning of World War I to the inflation peak in 1920, land prices jumped 70 per cent. Prices at the start of World War II were lower than in 1914, but the increase this time is already 71 per cent, although the actual prices are not yet at the 1920 peak.

Higher Land, Less Profit.

Farm sales are continuing at the high level they attained during 1945. The number of farms resold after a limited period of ownership has increased, indicating speculation.

Farmers who have a "yen" to acquire additional acreage, says a statement by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee, should bear in mind that the higher the cost of land goes, the harder it is to show a profit, even at present prices received for crops.

"With sons home from the war and with more and better farm machinery in immediate prospect, many farmers figure it would be a profitable move to work much more land than heretofore," the statement points out. "If they will remember the bitter aftermath of World War I's land boom, when food prices were even higher than they are today, they will see the hazards of such a move.

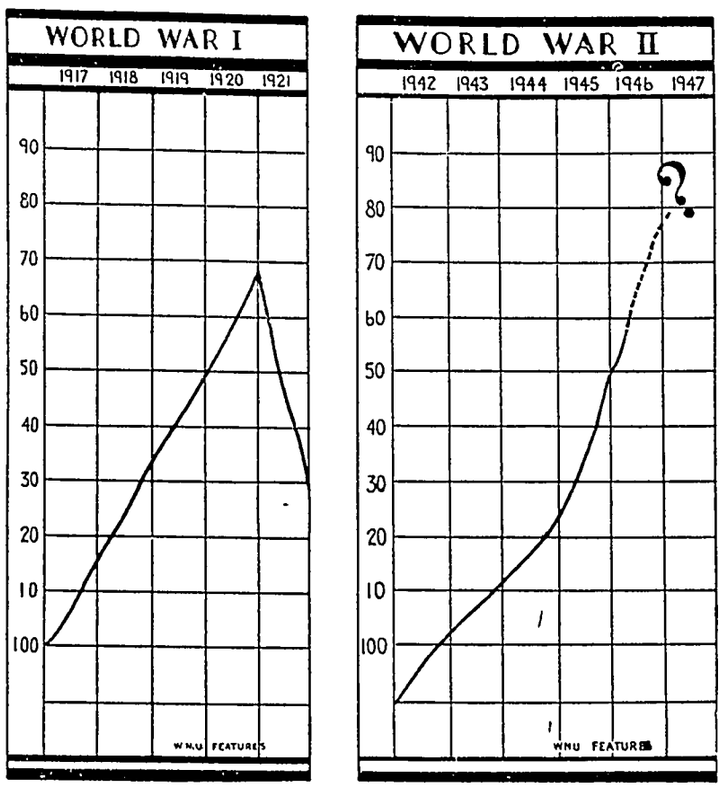
"Sooner or later the present world food emergency will be solved and the mammoth demand for American food products will end. Then American farmers will have to compete in world markets. The only way they can do this successfully is to produce crops at a lower cost per unit. In such a program, the steady use of fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash will be a major factor. More bushels per acre can, and will, mean more food from less land.

Increase Yields, Not Acres.

"The wise farmer will be the one who does not buy more land, but who increases the crop-yielding capacity of his present acreage by soil improvement measures. He will study the most practical uses of plant food. He will consult agronomists at state college and agricultural stations for the most effective methods of fertilizer application, the analyses best suited to his particular soil and crop conditions and the quantities to use."

This advice to farmers to improve their present holdings rather than to acquire greater acreage, was corroborated by the committee on farm land prices of the American Bankers association which urged member banks to admonish would-be farm buyers "go slow," to discourage borrowing to speculate in farm lands, and to tell veterans of "the hazards inherent in excessive land prices."

"Country bankers," a committee spokesman said, "are fully cognizant of the dangers inherent in the present farm land price situation. They are urging farm owners now to reduce their debt and to plan savings for farm improvement during these years of high income, because when conditions return to normal and American agriculture is in competition with other countries for world markets, it is probable that farm earnings will not support prices at current levels."



LAND PRICES . . . Went up during and after World War I—and then came tumbling down. Prices have not gone as high in World War II as before, but they are soaring. These charts show same trend as in 1914 to 1920.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

No Community Is Safe From Polio Epidemic

Areas that have been free of infantile paralysis outbreaks for a number of years may be more vulnerable to the disease than those with recent epidemic experience, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. public health service, recently stated.

Discussing "cycles of epidemics" in the June issue of Hospitals magazine, official publication of the American Hospitals association, Dr. Parran said such theorizing had no scientific basis but was founded on presumptive evidence, adding:

Dr. Parran

"Many observers have theorized that as an epidemic spreads throughout the community, it reduces the number of susceptible individuals to a point where the epidemic can no longer maintain itself. Until a new group of potential victims grow up, which may be from four to six years, that community should be less vulnerable to attack."

Dr. Parran said there was danger in "relying too strongly on this theory" since recently exposed areas may be "lulled into a feeling of false security" while localities which have been free of the disease for several years "may become unduly alarmed."

"The safest procedure by far," he advised, "is for all communities to prepare for epidemics."

Dr. Parran's article in the AHA magazine was one of 10 on infantile paralysis timed to reach more than 3,500 member hospitals throughout the country before onset of the polio epidemic season, usually ranging from late June to September.

The other articles provide information on methods of treatment, organization of community resources, the key position of the general hospital in the over-all care of poliomyelitis patients, and the role of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in financing polio treatment at general hospitals.

Dr. Parran said that all communities should inventory their facilities for the treatment of polio, including hospitals which normally do not accept patients suffering with contagious diseases, and he added:

"Such pre-epidemic planning is necessary if adequate care is to be given to all who contract the disease. Under the guidance of those officials charged with the community's health and with the substantial support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and its local chapters, every community in the United States can be prepared to meet epidemics of poliomyelitis without fear or panic."

Woman Has Churned 10 Tons of Butter

EVERTON, MO.—Mrs. Gala O. Fletcher of Everton, by actual account kept in an old ledger, has churned 21,000 pounds of butter by hand in an old-fashioned brass-bound churn in her 78 years. She explains that she has been churning butter since she was four years old when she had to stand on a wooden box to grasp the dasher handle.

"It would be quite a lake if all the cream I have churned should flow into one pool," she said recently.

The churn she uses is a century old and she has worn out many a home-made dasher in it. She keeps the cream only a short time before she churns it so that the butter she makes will be sweet.

After the butter is churned she places it in a large earthen crock which has been sunning for several hours. Then she starts working it with a circular movement, using a flat wooden paddle. That works the milk from the butter in about 10 minutes. She puts the butter away for several hours and then works it again to get out the last of the milk drops. The finished butter is a golden ball.

In order to have the best buttermilk, Mrs. Fletcher leaves flakes of butter floating in it. After 75 years' experience she believes she understands all phases of butter making.

Contentment among cows is as important to good butter as the right kind of feed, she believes.

New Matches Can Be Rain-Soaked and Still Light

Matches which can be submerged in water for four hours and still light have been announced by a U. S. match company. It is stated the matches will withstand innumerable drenchings and still function, and will be a boon to farmers, hunters, fishermen and others who often get caught in showers.

These water-resistant matches were developed during the war to provide a sure-fire light for members of the armed forces under the wettest conditions of amphibious and jungle warfare, but will soon be available to civilians.

Accepted by the war department in 1943 after rigorous tests, millions of the water - resistant matches were shipped from the factory to fighting fronts. Most of the service water-resistant matches were packaged in the familiar nickle-size boxes for the armed forces, but another type, a tiny waterproof light little more than an inch long, was also produced for emergency kits.

The water-resistant matches for civilians will be sold in packages of eight boxes of pocket size, each box containing 40 matches. These new matches, which "shed water like a duck's back," carry a money-back guarantee if they fail to light after a four-hour submersion.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

BIG BUSINESS AND TAXES

WASHINGTON.—Juciest gravy in the current tax legislation is the continuance of the carry-back of unused excess profits credit. The senate finance committee, always friendly to big business, not only knocked out the excess profits tax last year, but retained carry-back refunds. This permits corporations whose current earnings do not proportionately match their 1936-1939 earnings, to claim adjustments in their 1946 tax payments.

This is one reason some firms didn't worry too much about prolonged strikes. General Motors alone will probably hit the treasury for a refund of 80 million dollars. To head off this drain on the treasury, Rep. Cleveland Bailey of Clarksburg, W. Va., Democrat, introduced a bill last January to repeal the carry-back provisions. On January 23, the house ways and means committee asked the treasury for a report.

Recently impatient Rep. Wilbur Mills of Arkansas, Democrat, proposed that congress act independently, without waiting for the treasury report. He pointed out that large credits can be claimed by corporations which actually make more money this year than they did in any of the years from 1936 to 1939, simply because their capital investment is now larger.

Mills charged that many large corporations are taking advantage of this loophole, and as a result the taxpayer foots the bill for the expansion of private industries. He also listed a long series of "abuses and transactions which will no doubt be resorted to in order to create carry-back refunds or tax credits."

KANSAS ATOMIC STRAW

The Eastman Kodak company has been having trouble as a result of the first atomic bomb test in New Mexico—one year ago. Eastman found that, for some mysterious reason, some of its film was turning black before exposure. Finally experts discovered that the film had been packed in straw which came from western Kansas.

After the Los Alamos bomb test, radioactive dust from New Mexico settled on Kansas wheat fields, and is still so powerful that the Kodak company has had to stop using Kansas straw for packing film.

TRUMAN WRITES A VETO

President Truman was convinced that the half-breed price-control bill would not work. The Taft amendment, he especially argued, was absolutely impossible, and he cited accountancy experts of various big manufacturing firms, all of them against OPA, who branded the Taft cost-plus formula as likely to bring chaos to industry.

"I just have to put what I consider the country's welfare first," the President told his congressional leaders. "Let's not fool the country and give them something that won't work."

When they told him that they would not be able to persuade their reluctant colleagues to pass any sort of price-control bill, the President replied:

"If it's this or nothing, then we'll just have to take nothing."

Among other things, the President figured that during the chaotic period sure to follow if the polyglot price-control bill were passed, congress would claim it was his fault for not making the bill work, when, in actual fact, the bill was unworkable. He felt also that if congress did dare to go home without a price-control bill, things would be hotter for them in their districts than in Washington. He also warned that in this case he would call a special session of congress.

WHO WON THE WAR?

It is now getting close to a year since the end of the war with Japan and yet the strategic bombing survey for Japan has not been made public. Inside reason is a vigorous backstage tug-of-war between the army and navy which boils down to the basic question: "Which of them won the war in the Pacific?"

Civilian members of the survey staff, however, summarize the situation:

1. Heaviest damage to Japan was inflicted by U. S. submarines. They had just about shut off all Jap supplies toward the end of the war and Japan was paralyzed.

2. Next greatest damage was done by long-range army land-based planes.

3. The navy's carrier - based planes were important, but ranked second to the B-29s.

Rocket Ascended Over 44 Miles, Above Stratosphere

In the United States, the first man-made object to pass beyond the stratosphere was a rocket fired secretly at White Sands, New Mexico, on October 25, 1945, says Collier's. Developed by the GALCIT organization of the California Institute of Technology, this rocket, the starting weight of which was 680 pounds, was propelled by liquid fuel to a height of 235,000 feet, or over 44 miles, according to the radar equipment that measured its flight.

DON'T TAKE CHANCE, KNOW SWIM RULES

Don't Swim Without A Good Partner

It's down to the "ole swimming hole" for a cool swim. But before you go be sure it's an hour or two since you've eaten your last meal. And never go swimming alone.

This word comes from Dr. Germaine Guiot, head of the Department of Physical Education for Women at Iowa State College. And she's afraid there will be the usual number of water accidents for vacationing Iowans this summer unless they heed to a few rules of water safety.

She says to swim only in supervised places, preferably, or in waters familiar to you. That goes for rivers, sand pits or swimming pools. To be on the safe side, you should know every hole and how deep the water is where you swim. Above all, don't try to buck dangerous river currents.

It's better to underestimate the distance you're able to swim rather than overestimate it, Dr. Guit points out. And she says to get out of the water when you've reached the tired point.

If a person accidentally falls into the water, give him a board or something that will stay afloat to hang on to. Then send for a boat and a qualified lifesaver immediately.

And if you've been working in the fields under the hot sun all day, Dr. Guiot throws a word of warning your way. Never go swimming, particularly in water that is cold, until you've cooled off and rested a bit. Severe cramps have been the cause of many a drowning.

Results from spring turnip plantings this year were rather favorable, but normally turnips do best as a fall crop. Turnips may be planted up until August. The rutabaga is closely related to the turnip, but it requires a longer, cooler season to mature, and for this reason the rutabaga is not too well adapted for Iowa.

Keep most vegetables chilled from the moment they are harvested until they can be prepared for eating. Vegetables should not be allowed to wilt between harvest and use. Both nutritive value and eating quality are lost when vegetables stand in summer temperatures.

Harvesting and handling vegetables at the correct stage in gardening that is too often neglected. Perhaps it is more common for vegetables to be harvested over-mature than when immature. Gardeners have it within their power to really enjoy vegetables at their maximum deliciousness. Fresh vegetables shipped in, commercially frozen or canned vegetables, commonly, cannot compete for top quality with well-grown, carefully selected produce from home gardens.

Removing suckers form sweet corn is a waste of time. In fact, yields have been reduced by suckering, especially if the suckers were of good size when removed. Yields in sweet potatoes also may be reduced as much as 50 percent or more by pruning the vines. Vines should be allowed to develop fully for the best production of roots. When leaves are removed from the plants, the amount of food produced is limited. Naturally, there will be less food stored in the roots, making a smaller yield.

It will pay to water the seedlings in the first summer plantings. Beets and carrots especially should be given attention to nurse them through the critical, tender seedling stage. Seedlings only require about ¼ inch of water. Later they must be given ½ inch to 1 inch of water. This means the ground should be soaked to a depth of 4 to 6 inches.

WHO ARE THE TAMA INDIANS?

Thousands of spectators at Iowa Centennial celebrations this summer have watched the ancient ritual dances of these genuine native Americans — listened to the throbbing rhythm of their drums—peeked into the wickiup tents on their temporary camps on unfamiliar city streets.

Other thousands will be guests at the traditional Indian Powwow near Tama, Iowa Aug. 15-18 an event of more than ordinary significance this year because 1946, in a special way, is a Centennial year for the Tama Indians, too.

Yet few modern Iowans are familiar with the historic background of this colorful clan. The question, "Who are the Tama Indians?" is often asked, and headquarters of the Iowa Centennial Committee delved into history books today to provide the answer.

The Tama Indians are Mesquakies—decendants of the first Redman with whom the earliest white settlers of Iowa came into contact. In the early years of the Nineteenth century, the Mesquakies (Foxes), with their allies the Sauks, claimed two-thirds of Iowa as their own.

Although they made war on rival Indian tribes, the Mesquakies and Sauks soon became friends with the white men along the old frontier. Still, the pressure of the pioneer migration was great and in 1842, against their wishes and only after much talk, the Indians agreed to give up their land. If they would move to Kansas within three years, the government promised annual payments of comfortable sums of money

In the late months of 1845 and the early months of 1846, the Mesquakies and Sauks packed their possessions and slowly trailed off toward the setting sun. But they were homesick for Iowa's prairies and valleys, and history records 1846, not only as the year that Iowa entered the Union, but also as the year the Mesquakies started coming back to Iowa to live.

Month after month, Indian families straggled back to the Mesquakie settlement on the Iowa river west of the present site of Tama.

They could not legally own land, and the government ruled that they could not receive the promised payments unless they went to Kansas and stayed there. But the people of Iowa did not object to the return of these friendly Redmen; the state Legislature passed a law permitting them to live in Tama County.

Pickings were slim for the Indians, even after Gov. James Grimes in 1847 authorized the purchase of an 80-acre plot of ground for them. At last, in 1867, their hardships were relieved when James Harlan of Iowa, then U. S. secretary of the interior, decided to give the Tama Indians their share of the government's payments to dispossessed tribes.

Since that time, the band has grown and prospered. By 1869 the Mesquakies owned 400 acres of Tama County land; today, their holdings cover approximately 3,300 acres, and some 500 Indians live in modest wooden houses in the little colony.

At home, the Tama Indians now live much as their white neighbors do. They go to school, work in mills and stores, raise crops and livestock and hunt and fish. Many of them own automobiles, radios and power washing machines. The tribal patriarch, 92-year-old James Poweskiek, wittles bows and arrows for sale to tourists.

Wickiup tents and native costumes are reserved for great occasions. But on these occasions, especially numerous this year, the Indians deck themselves in feathered headdress and colorful, beaded robes and moccasins and stomp and shout again in the war and friendship dances of a hundred years ago.

The farm labor supply is tight but there is a promise of it improving during the latter part of 1946.

Artisans Ply Trades In Mexican Market

As a welcome oasis in the urban mechanization which is enveloping Mexico, thousands of Mexican artisans still cling to the trades and crafts popularly known as "hand work," whose secrets have been handed down to them for generations. Oblivious to the accelerated rhythm of progress surrounding them, many natives occupy "puestos" or stands, in the great markets of the city, or on the sidewalks, while some of them have established more elegant clientele in private businesses.

Industrialism, with its immediate consequence of mechanization, has not made an imprint on the spirit of these Mexican workers, who are still dedicated to traditions. Impassive and stolid, they continue weaving blankets which protect them from the cold in the identical manner which monks taught their grandfathers in the old school for "meztizos" of Tlaltelolco.

The progressive rise in rents, and other demands of modern living have caused many workers to establish their "puestos" on the streets. Crude painters, shoemakers, basket and textile weavers, and artisans of all Mexico's trades and crafts are among the picturesque vendors. An open-air writer's service is a popular post, where a busy typist composes letters for customers, either business communications or love letters.

Chinese First to Fashion Pure Porcelain

As early as the third century of the Christian era, Chinese potters were making the distinctive product that became known to the world as "china" or porcelain. This ware is distinguished by its quality of transmitting light, its flawless whiteness, its hardness, and the characteristic sound it emits when struck.

China's potters had found a remarkably pure white clay which they called kao-ling, from the high hill where it was first discovered. This clay, now known as kaolin, they used with powdered quartz and feldspar to make the hard paste from which they shaped tiles, dishes and ornamental objects.

The key to the secret was found by Germans in 1709. They learned how to make a fine, hard paste porcelain from silicates of aluminum. Production began at Meissen in 1710, and the city soon became the porcelain capital of Europe and the seat of manufacture of the so-called Dresden china. Clay comparable to the Chinese variety was discovered in Saxony; near Limoges, in France; and in Cornwall, England, and these discoveries furthered the manufacture of true, hard-paste porcelain.

Baking in Glass

You may set your oven temperature 50 degrees Fahrenheit lower than your recipe calls for when you bake in glass. For instance, yeast bread baked in a glass loaf pan, would take a temperature of 350 degrees for the first 10 minutes instead of 400. For the last 50 minutes, the temperature should be 300 degrees, for bread in glassware, instead of 350. A chocolate cake that ordinarily bakes at 350 degrees bakes better at 300 in glassware. Do a mince pie at 400 degrees rather than 450. Vegetable oven dishes require a lower temperature in glassware also. Scalloped potatoes, for instance, are better when cooked at 335 degrees than at 400. The temperature should be reduced, too, for any meats prepared in the oven in glassware. Veal loaf is a good example. Instead of the 2½ hours at 385 degrees required in metal, use a 325-degree setting when you prepare it in glassware.

Watch for mites and lice now in poultry. Paint the nests and roosts with creosote for mites, and dust with sulfur or sodium fluoride for lice.

'Clay Pigeon' Made Of Pitch, Limestone

Clay pigeons are neither clay nor do they resemble pigeons. The modern trap target is made of molten pitch and pulverized limestone and looks more like a deep saucer than anything that flies with wings. The name clay pigeon is an anachronism dating back to the early days when a clay target was introduced to replace live pigeons released from traps.

George Ligowsky, inventor of the first clay target discovered that a clay target frequently would not break when struck by shot pellets. Some of his successors substituted pitch with no greater success. In winter pitch became so brittle, it broke in handling, and in summer became too soft to be thrown from a trap target.

The modern clay target used by skeet and trap shooters attains speeds up to 60 miles an hour in flight and spins at the rate of 5,000 revolutions per minute. In flight it is a combination of a gyroscope and an airplane wing. A target has its own nomenclature. The flat top is called the poker chip, the circular rim about the chip being ledge, and the rounded part that leads down the side, being the dome. The flat side is known as the flange. One of the most popular targets has 16 scorings on the underside which help break it into pieces even if lightly touched by even a few shot pellets. A perfect hit which "smokes" a target reduces it to a cloud of dust.

Easter Island Not Part Of Lost Continent

Although Easter Island in the South Pacific remains probably the most profound mystery in archeology, all its weird prehistoric culture is less than 800 years old. There is no evidence that the strange little volcanic island, whose shores are guarded by a circle of stone giants with scowling faces and empty eyes, is the remnant of a lost continent where once flourished a great civilization, says Dr. Alfred Metraux, anthropologist.

When the island was first discovered by Europeans in the 17th century, it seemed impossible that the apparently somewhat degenerate Polynesian inhabitants could be the same people who had carved those great statues, some towering 80 feet high. Almost equally great a mystery even today are wooden tablets with a "hieroglyphic" writing in which, it is claimed, certain striking similarities have been found to "hieroglyphs" on stone tablets more than 5,000 years old found in the Indus valley.

Machine Darning

Specialists recommend machine darning for holes, tears and thin places in towels, sheets, aprons, overalls, children's play clothes, plain underwear, men's shirts, and women's house dresses. Hand darning is preferable for fine garments and hosiery. To darn by machine, use fine mercerized or cotton thread which matches the color of the garment, or better, is slightly darker. Adjust the length of the stitch to suit the cloth. The finer the weave, the shorter the stitch. Loosen the thumbscrew on the top of the machine to release the pressure on the presser foot enough so the cloth can be moved back and forth when stitching, or tie a strong cord around the machine to hold the presser foot up slightly. Stitch across the place to be darned, pulling the material slowly backward and forward, and from side to side with both hands. Follow the grain of the material, or stitch on the diagonal if the fabric has a twill weave. Use an embroidery hoop to hold the cloth smooth during darning.

The Iowa Centennial

1846 — 100 YEARS — 1946

Three days after Christmas—1846, President Polk sat down at a White House desk and signed the bill which made Iowa the 29th state. On the road to statehood, Iowans served under the flags of England, France and Spain.

Iowa's 1846 population was slightly over 9 hundred thousand, most of them farmers who already learned that Iowa corn grew taller. Times were hard. Corn and oats sold for 10c a bushel, wheat for 20 cents. "Wildcat" currency produced financial headaches, but men like Ansel Briggs—first governor who maintained his capital at Iowa City, supplied the inspiration — made Iowa grow.

This summer, over two and a half million Iowans are celebrating the Hawkeye State's 100th birthdy.

In September 1854, eight years after Iowa became a state, the first white settlement was made in Hancock County, by Mr. and Mrs. Anson Avery. They located on Section 29 in Avery Township.

Garner was platted in 1870 by John Mabee and H. J. Klemme platted the town of Klemme in 1889.

On August 8, 1939 the town of Klemme celebrated its "Golden Anniversary" with an outstanding celebration. Old time spinning wheels, ox yokes and many old time items and old time photographs were displayed in the store windows. Folk from far and near came and enjoyed the "Big Doings."

Changing the subject, these cool evenings remind one of fall, and in the fall our housewives "clean house." Perhaps you will need a few pieces of New Furniture, or some Rugs or Linoleum. They are scarce, but our Store is still a good place to trade for all kinds of Home Furnishings.

Little El Salvador Limits Presidential Term

El Salvador, which drew the international spotlight by amending its constitution to limit presidential office to one term of four years, compares with Maryland in area and population. Smallest and most densely populated of the six Central American republics, it supports 1,830,000 people on its 13,176 mountainous square miles. El Salvador lies on the Pacific side of the Central American group, 350 miles northwest of the Isthmus of Panama.

El Salvador is an agricultural country with half its cultivated land devoted to corn, and only a fourth of the acreage to coffee; but coffee is the country's big money crop and has accounted for as much as nine-tenths of the export trade. Next to Brazil and Colombia, El Salvador is the largest exporter of coffee in the Western hemisphere.

Before the war exports of Salvadorean coffee had reached nearly a million bags a year. United States consumption had gradually increased from a tenth to more than half the crop; and during the war coffee imports expanded further. For two months of the year a large part of El Salvador's population is required to pick the cherrylike fruit.

Keep Children From Accident Hazards in Home

Playing with matches and building bonfires, carelessness with the handling of electrical appliances, overturning scalding liquids and hot grease, and open fires are among the chief causes of accidental burns of children and some of them contribute to accidents to older people as well. To prevent such accidents, remove all fire hazards possible.

When cooking, turn boiler and frying pan handles toward the back of the stove so they will not accidentally overturn. In serving hot soup or coffee be sure it is far enough from the edge of the table not to overturn.

Do not leave a child alone with electric or gas appliances. Do not permit children to play with any sort of heating devices. Above all, never permit children of the home nor visiting children to handle matches. Protect open fires with fenders or metal shields to prevent children from falling into fires and to prevent clothes from catching fire. Treating clothes to make them fire resistant is an added safeguard.

Vitamin C Vital

In wintertime, we all need a good supply of vitamin C, for besides its value in keeping us free of scurvy and similar troubles, it is helpful in warding off colds. We all know that tomatoes and citrus fruits are good sources of vitamin C. Tomato juice or canned tomatoes may be a better source of the vitamin during winter than fresh tomatoes which have been picked green and only partly sun-ripened. Oranges, grapefruit, lemons and tangerines are all good sources of the vitamin in winter. Another excellent source of vitamin C is raw cabbage, and this is both low in cost and popular in mixed salads or as coleslaw. Cranberries are rich in vitamin C, particularly if they are used raw. Cranberries run through the food chopper raw and mixed with ground citrus and apple, with sweetening to taste, make a fine raw salad or relish that can be kept for several weeks in the refrigerator. Apples also contain some vitamin C.

Southern Industry

In 1904, the south's share of the country's wage earners employed in manufacturing industry amounted to only about 16.2 per cent. By 1914, this share had risen to 16.5 per cent and it continued to mount to 17.9 per cent in 1929 and to 20.8 per cent in 1940. Likewise, in terms of value of manufactured products, the south's share of the country's total rose from about 12.6 per cent in 1904 to 14.1 per cent in 1929 and to 17.4 per cent in 1939. Although prices fell considerably between 1929 and 1939 so that the value of manufactured products in the country as a whole slumped from 70,137 million dollars in 1929 to 56,843 million dollars in 1939, the value of southern manufactures declined only from 9,996 million dollars in 1929 to 9,917 million dollars in 1939, indicating a considerable gain in volume. Gross farm income of the south, because of the fall in prices, decreased from 3,797 million dollars in 1929 to 2,833 million dollars in 1939.

Egypt's Lifestream

The Nile has been the lifestream of Egypt alike under the Pharaohs, the Ptolemys and the kingdom of today. In the midst of barren desert the mighty river flows through a wide, green valley in which fine cotton and grain are cultivated. This fertility is possible because of a phenomenal flood, whose waters originate more than 1,000 miles to the south, and which annually inundates Egyptian land bordering the Nile. After flood waters subside a rich loam sediment is left. Second in length only to the Mississippi-Missouri river system, the Nile extends through 35 degrees of latitude, flowing through Belgian Congo, Uganda, Ethiopia, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt. The Nile river basin has an area of 1,082,000 square miles.

Tenderizing Hormones

Hormones may come into some use to "tenderize" old hens and staggy roosters before they go to market, experiments suggest. An animal physiologist reveals that when birds are treated with these hormones unusual amounts of subcutaneous and body fat are deposited. Such layers of fat cause the meat to become more tender and may cause the treated birds to put on slightly more body weight than the untreated ones. Treatment starts two or three weeks before the birds are marketed. The method is still confined to laboratory work and much additional work will need to be done before it can be used on the backyard chicken flock. Research is in progress at experiment stations in California and Oklahoma in addition to Illinois.

Some Thoughts About Unionized Baseball

That uneasiness in the bleachers these days is due to apprehension among the fans as to how unionized baseball, still being talked of, will change the national game. Up to now it has been regarded wholly as a sporting event in which nothing counted but athletic supremacy, physical fitness and skill with a ball and bat. Now it may become tied up with the rights of man, economic equality and the war between capital and labor.

No matter how good a pitcher may be, the question may become: "Can he go the route on a picket parade?"

We may look at a sensational shortstop grabbing them from all angles and merely wonder how good he is in a double header between management and the working man. Even as we rise to cheer an outfielder for spearing one at the fence we may find ourselves thinking: "A fine outfielder, but has he communistic leanings?"

And how is baseball going to benefit from a lot of arguments over whether Abner Doubleday or Samuel Gompers was the great trailbreaker of baseball and which was the greatest figure on the diamond, Bob Wagner or Honus?

Mr. Twitchell said he was greatly worried, too, whether, once organized, a player would stand for booing. "When I boo Leo Durocher will I not be booing the CIO and the AFL? Can I yell 'Gwan, ya big bum!' at Hank Borowy without having it interpreted as applying to the Baseball Guild?" he asked.

"It looks bad," sighed Mr. Twitchell. "I'm afraid we may see double headers of the future played on forums of the air!"

Explaining the American Scene

"The country is going haywire," said Citizen A. "It has no sense about money. How can we get anywhere with such screwball economic thinking? (He excused himself while he phoned in a $500 bet on a nine-year-old horse that had never been in the money.)

"Everything's snafu," agreed Citizen B. "People are crazy. What's become of their common sense?" (A phone call interrupted him. Somebody was offering him a house for $30,000 that he could have bought for $17,500 a year ago. He grabbed it at once.)

"The trouble with America is that everybody's on a bender," said Citizen C. "The way they're tossing their money around is awful. I can't understand it." (He would have pursued the subject, but he had to see a man about a seat for an outdoor fight that could be had for $300 if he acted fast.)

Whatever became of that much publicized drive that America was going to make against the black market?

GROWING PAINS

With summer here, you go scurrying to that big box in which your last summer's clothes have spent a lonely winter. Eagerly you try on that cute pinafore, those dirndl skirts, that cotton date dress, but, either they've shrunk or you've stretched, and something has to be done. Well, here's how to do it!

Waist Not, Want Not — So the waistline of that dress or pinafore is too short? Just rip the skirt and waist apart and convert into a two-piece midriff style. It's the few inches of skin in the middle that does the trick.

Side Splitting — So you look too round in those last year's shorts? Split the side seams, cut little eyelets up both sides and lace with plaid shoe laces. Now, you won't split when you sit down.

Hem Lines — Don't worry about the discoloration around your skirt where you let down the hem. Just cover it with a few rows of ricrac braid. And, if there's no hem to let down, add a dust ruffle of eyelet embroidery Two ways to make a short story long!

Skimp and Sew — You can be right in fashion if you cut off the skirt of that last year's dress way above the knees and cut out the sleeves What you have left is called a "skimps" in all the fashion magazines and it's the smart thing to wear for a play dress Bring it up to date with a wide leather belt. Well, as the bobby sock said to the toe—"I'll be darned if I let you through."

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

You know you shouldn't call Johnny up. It's been over a week since your last date and it's HIS move next. But you can't resist the temptation to talk to him—so you make all kinds of excuses. Maybe he's been too busy with his summer job; maybe he tried to get you when the line was busy; maybe he'll call just as soon as you go out. So you find yourself ringing his number, and, before you know it you're trying to explain why you're calling and wishing you hadn't. A girl does so much better on the telephone when she's on the receiving end.

JESUS AND REVERENCE FOR SPIRITUAL VALUES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:7; Leviticus 19 12, Matthew 5 33-37; Mark 7:5-8; 8 34-36

MEMORY SELECTION—But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6 33.

Reverence is not an incidental thing which we may or may not choose to have in our lives. It is vital. Reverence toward God and the things of God will result in respect for all values in life. It will balance our thinking, speaking, and our acting toward our fellow men as well as toward our God. Our lesson calls for

I. Reverence in Worship (Exod. 20:7; Lev. 19:12).

The Lord rightfully expects from us a proper attitude toward him. If we worship him as we should, we shall find that other matters fall into their proper relationships.

Essential in true worship is reverence for the name of the Lord, for that name stands for all the qualities and characteristics of God. This means that there must be no taking of the name of the Lord "in vain." Our use of the word "vain" carries the meaning of "useless, without purpose or meaning." This is part of what is in mind in this commandment, for the name of Jehovah is sacred and is to be reverenced as standing for the eternal God.

It is never to be used carelessly, or for a frivolous purpose. All too often we tell jokes or stories which have no real purpose or meaning except to elicit a laugh, and in them we use the name of God. We all need to exercise care at that point.

The Hebrew word translated "vain" has the additional meaning of "evil" and falsehood." Men are so bold that they may even use the name of God to support themselves in a lie. God hears and will in no wise hold them guiltless.

II. Reverence in Words (Matt. 5: 33-37).

The Sermon on the Mount (so-called), from which this portion of Scripture is taken, is difficult to interpret to the satisfaction of all. Some disregard its evident application to the kingdom and, attempting to apply it in the midst of an ungodly generation, fall into such inconsistency that they abandon the effort and regard the teaching of the passage as impossible idealism.

Others, who rightly interpret the passage as presenting the laws and principles of life in the kingdom of God, when it shall be fully set up on earth with Jesus as King, fail to make any application of those principles to life. This is also an unfortunate error.

We who follow the Lord Jesus are not to swear by either things sacred or things that might be called secular. Perhaps he has in mind that our lives should be so true that men will not need to have any kind of oath to be assured of our sincerity and honesty.

Swearing should be entirely beyond the pale with Christian men and women. It is all too common with both men and women. One fears that this is true not only in the world, but among professed believers in Christ. Let us stop it!

III. Reverence in Works (Mark 7:5-8).

Words which do not issue in works are worse than meaningless. They lead to acceptance of a formal religious system which is dangerous. "It gives a sense of religious satisfaction which is very superficial, but of some apparent value. It carries with it no high ethical demands. It helps a man to feel religious without being either ethical or moral. It does not probe or arouse. It soothes and calms" (W. R. White).

Who will deny that much of the church life of our day has reached that same sad state of "much ado about nothing"—talk, talk, talk, and no honest disposition to deal with sin, or to seek holiness of life. The Lord hates it, and it is a vain exercise as far as spiritual results are concerned.

IV. Reverence in Will (Mark 8: 34-36).

Here true reverence shows itself in recognizing that God's will is "good and acceptable and perfect" (Rom. 12:1).

Following the Christ of Calvary calls for a willingness to say no to self (literally, to deny any connection with self-life) and to follow through with him on the path of shame and crucifixion. No self-will and no compromise are permissible to Christ's disciples.

Foolishly to attempt to hold one's life for self is to lose it. That painful loss has left brokenhearted, wrecked lives all along the path of man's history. But why should anyone do it?

Equally foolish is the one who supposes that this world has anything to satisfy the human soul. Assuming the possibility of the impossible—that is, attaining the whole world as one's own possession—to do so at the cost of one's soul would be an indescribably poor bargain.

Ringing Coins

The fact that a silver coin will ring when dropped on a hard surface is not conclusive proof that it is genuine.

Counterfeit coins have been so made that they ring perfectly, a notable example being a U.S. 50-cent piece, thousands of which were put in circulation in the East before their counterfeiters were finally apprehended in 1942.

Sportsmen Benefit By Observing Game Laws

Iowa sportsmen who enjoy an afternoon fishing in the lakes and streams of the state this week were urged to observe the sports laws and regulations designed for their own protection.

Ellis Hicks, Iowa State College wildlife specialist, agrees that few fisherman willfully break the game laws. But there are many who don't take the trouble to learn the rules or are careless in their observance of them.

"We should keep in mind," Hicks says, "that regulations often vary as to the kind of fish to be taken, legal fish weights and the length of the fishing season among the many lakes, streams and reservoirs in the state. This is necessary because of the variation in fish populations, available feed and other management practice.

Learn Regulations

"If each sportsman takes the responsibility of learning the regulations governing the water in which he's fishing, there'll be less breaking of the rules."

Copies of regulations, Hicks says, can be obtained from the local conservation officer, State Conservation Commission and often from the local agency selling the fishing licenses.

Fishermen who ignore catch limits are hurting themselves. And one deplorable practice is to take two or more catch limits in one day. The only result of such practices can be a closing of the season on such fish in future years.

Undersize Fish

Hicks also urged fishermen to handle undersize fish carefully and return them to the water with a minimum of injury. The hands should be wet, and if possible the hook should be removed while the fish is in the water.

Using undesirable fish for bait should be avoided. Hicks points out that young dogfish (called mud minnows) sometimes are used for bait. Invariably live bait escapes of may be dumped into the lake when the fishing party is over. The population of the unwanted dogfish is then on the increase.

Sportsmen are encouraged to report unusual conditions to their local conservation officer. When stream flow decreases, many fish often are stranded and die, unless prompt action is taken to save them.

FARMERS ASKED TO UP WINTER WHEAT ACREAGE

Iowa farmers this year are being asked to increase their winter wheat acreage 8 percent above what they planted last year.

The new 1946-47 Iowa wheat goal announced this week by the Production and Marketing Administration calls for 200,000 acres of wheat in the state.

Last year the goal was 150,000 acres, but farmers planted a total of 185,000 acres. The production from this acreage is estimated at 3,241,000 bushels. The national wheat goal is 17 percent above last year's planted acreage.

A. J. Loveland, stats head of the Production and Marketing Administration, pointed out in announcing the goals that the need for increased production of wheat was especially apparent this year. Food needs both at home and abroad are expected to continue the remainder of this year and at least through 1947.

The 2000,000 acre goal is the highest acreage planted to wheat since prewar years when the average for the 1937-41 period was 524,000 acres. A part of this average resulted from the drouth plantings of 1937.

IOWA RABBIT SEASON OPENS AUGUST 1

The first open season on protected game begins August 1 when cottontail and jack-rabbit hunting becomes legal throughout the state. The daily bag limit is ten and there is no possession limit. Rabbit populations in the state last season were high except in a few localities and preliminary reports from observers indicate that the upward trend beginning in 1940, when this popular game animal reached a "cyclic" low, is continuing. During the past hunting season it was estimated that some 2,400,000 rabbits found their way into hunter's game pockets. Although the rabbit season opens August 1, heavy hunting of cottontails ordinarily does not take place until after the first general snow.

COCKLEBURS ARE POISONOUS TO PIGS

Cockleburs in the two-leaf stage are poisonous to pigs. Dr. K. W. Stouder, Iowa State veterinarian, says the burs often sprout and start to grow in low areas or around the edges of ponds. To prevent poisoning, the burs should be kept cut off or the hogs fenced out of the area.

RESULTS OF COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS SEARCH

Chest x-rays revealed healthy lungs for 29 persons in Hancock County according to reports sent recently to family physicians on the county-wide tuberculosis conference which was held March 25 at Garner.

Three cases of tuberculosis were reported, two were in the beginning stages. One case of miliary tuberculosis was listed. Two scoliosis cases, one cervical rib, one case of broncriectasis, and two heart conditions, for which further study was recommended, were included in the findings. A total of 33 x-rays were taken.

The first phase of the program started on March 1 when Flossie McBride, public health nurse, began a canvass of persons believed to have been exposed to tuberculosis. She took 101 case histories, and upon advice, 16 persons visited their family doctors for the tuberculin test.

Four skin tests were positive indicating a need for an ex-ray examination of the lungs. Twelve of the tests were negative.

Twenty-five persons were x-rayed for the first time at the conference, while eight x-rays were taken of persons who had been examined previously and for whom another film had been recommended.

This is the sixth annual case-finding program, sponsored by the Hancock County Medical Society, Hancock County Tuberculosis Association, Iowa Tuberculosis Association, and Iowa Department of Health. Local Christmas Seal funds helped finance the cost.

Physicians explain that the program is conducted to find tuberculosis cases in the early symptomless stages while chances for complete recovery are best. Prompt discovery and treatment of tuberculosis cases also halt the spread of the disease to others in the community.

Less Number Of Farms In Hancock Co.

AVERAGE HANCOCK FARM 181.1 ACRES

75,238 Hogs Were Raised In 1945

There were 1,964 farms in Hancock County on January 1, 1945, according to a report of the Bureau of Census, received by Paul Henderson, county extension director, this week. This compared with 1,998 farms on April 1, 1940, the date of the last census.

The average size farm increased from 178.7 acres to 181.1 acres the cenus figures show. The average in crops shifted from 248,945 in 1939 to 256,100 in 1944.

Wartime influence on the number of livestock on farms is indicated in the upward trend of most classes. There were 50,813 cattle of all kinds on farms January 1, 1945 compared with 42,677 on hand in 1940. The change in cows and heifers two years old and over was from 19,605 to 19,620.

All hogs and pigs on farms increased from 41,708 in 1940 to 75,238 in1945, while the number of sheep and lambs changed from 8,741 in 1940 to 9,296 in 1945. Cattle and calves were enumbered on 1,865 farms; hogs 1,767 and sheep on 331 farms.

There were 14,000 cows and heifers milked this year compared to 16,305 being milked in 1940. Farms reporting milk cows this year numbered 1,817 while 1,887 farms reported in 1940. Milk produced by cows in 1944 totaled 7,994,873 gallons compared to 7,887,529 gallons in 1939.

Most farms have chickens, the census report shows. On 1,876 farms there were 452,594 head on January 1st while the corresponding figure for 1940 showed 1,901 farms with 357,966 head of chickens on hand. Flock owners raised 834,735 head in 1944 and produced 3,601,416 dozens of eggs. In 1939 the number raised was 620,587 and number of eggs produced was 2,382,693 dozens. The 16 turkey raisers in the county produced 12,111 head in 1944 compared with 46 producers who raised 7,240 in 19399.

In 1944 $1,391,857 were spent for feed for livestock and poultry. In 1939 only $318,899 were spent.

HOLD DITCH LETTING

Hancock county supervisors established drainage district No. 143 petitioned for by Fred L. Meinecke and others in Ellington township, at a meeting at Garner Monday. A letting on the construction of the district will be held at the courthouse in Garner August 12. Engineer William Henschen estimated the cost of the project at approximately $9,300.

PERMITS ON STORED GAME EXPIRE

All wild game held in storage under permits issued during the 1945-46 hunting season expired June 30, and conservation officers have been advised to see that the time limit is enforced in their territories. Game birds or animals legally taken under non-resident licenses outside the state may be held indefinitely provided the game is properly identified.

Keep dusting or spraying potato vines to control leaf hoppers. A dust or spray of DDT is very effective.

Washington Not Always Glamorous

World's Greatest Capital Has Its Seamy Side Too!

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—A boy joined the staff of a four-page paper of which he was one day to become editor. The office was a rattle-trap building whose notable characteristics, he later said, were "sewer gas, rats, dirt, overgrown rowdy newsboys who had to be held in check by a long whip and firearms," and it was "positively dangerous at times to go into the alley which they infested, leading to the composing room."

The town as the boy had grown up in it was a straggling overgrown country village "with zigzag grades, no sewerage, no street cars, no water supply except from pumps and springs, unimproved reservations, second-rate dwellings and streets of mud and mire."

That doesn't sound like the nation's capital whose budget for the coming year is $76,755,009—but that was the way it was in 1858 as described by the editor of the Washington Evening Star, Theodore Noyes, who died early this month. He joined the paper in 1877.

Except for the Australian capital of Canberra which arose almost as Camelot at a wave of Merlin's wand, there is nothing to compare with the bizarre history of a city whose site was based on a political deal and no city which has gone through more vicissitudes than this Baghdad-on-the-Potomac.

No city was ever more magnificently planned, or more discreditably neglected in its early days, as Mr. Noyes' description indicates. Today, as the undisputed capital of the world, it still has to battle with a grudging congress for its budget. It remains the chief city of the greatest democratic republic whose 938,000 citizens have no voice in their own government and whose citizenship itself is a bar to the basic privilege of a democracy—the ballot.

Mr. Noyes was, as is the newspaper he served, a Washington institution. He will be remembered for his long campaign to give Washington a vote in congressional and national matters.

Rats Were Menace To City's Health

Some time ago I had occasion to mention the invasion of Washington by rats and how the city hired a modern Pied Piper who has done an effective, if silent, job. This was brought to my mind recently when I encountered a fat, black cat on my way to work early one morning. The cat had a guilty look, and I had a hunch he had spent the night in riotous living and was merely sneaking in to change his collar.

However, the cataclysm caused by the rat-invasion in which, believe it or not, a baby's hand was eaten brought hasty action and I see that it was considered worthy of comment by experts, including the editors of the magazine of the American Museum of Natural History.

The campaign began when a case of typhus which is spread by fleas and mites on rats, was discovered. Traps set in the neighborhood caught a number of rats whose blood was typhus-infected. The United States Public Health service got busy, shocked to learn that the scourge of Europe two centuries ago was a possibility right here in our fair capital.

An expert was called in. He first sealed up all points where commercial transportation entered the city. Then 300 traps were set up in the zone where the infection had been found. Five days later the traps were taken in and the area was thoroughly dusted with DDT, the insecticide which the army perfected.

Next red-squill bait was distributed. It kills rats, but not pets or children who might pick up the bait. In places where there was no danger to human beings the deadly "1080" was distributed. The campaign was successful. Meanwhile, a clean-up of potential rat-breeding premises was started with court orders to enforce it. Today Washington has a complete scientific rat-control program which will cost us about $75,000 annually.

However, it still leaves a few rats for energetic cats.

When People Vote, They Win

The June "Economic Outlook," published by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, contains an article entitled "When the People Vote—They Win." That might be interpreted in more ways than one. The article points out that an "off year" is so designated politically not only because the presidency is not at stake, but because the politicians know that general apathy on the part of the voter has marked those elections in the past: 1938 (off) thirty million voters went to the polls; 1940 (on) fifty million votes; 1942 (off) twenty-eight million; 1944 (on) forty-eight million.

The CIO takes the attitude that what the people as a whole want is what they (the CIO) want, and that the people get what they want when they vote for it. They say: "Mass registration and mass voting is the best guarantee of liberal progressive government."

They might also add that if you want conservative rather than liberal progressive government, you have to vote for it, too. In any case you can't get what you want unless you go after it. The "Outlook" prints a table showing how the vote shifted in certain districts in off-years. The table showed that when the vote fell off, it was the Democratic vote. Districts which swung from Democratic to Republican candidates in most cases shifted with a decrease in the total vote . . . "the Republican vote remaining relatively stable, while the Democratic vote dropped sharply."

Does this prove that Democrats are sleepier than Republicans, or that the Republican is a creature of habit?

War Profiteering Will Be Scandal

The juicy scandal uncovered by the senate war investigating committee in which "profiteering at its worst," as Senator Mead called it, was exposed, is, I fear, only the beginning.

Any moment I expect to hear an explosion in connection with surplus property. War breeds waste, and the cloak of patriotic endeavor as Samuel Johnson indicated even more bluntly, often covers skullduggery.

The same thing happened after the last war, and on a smaller scale, after all wars. But what is probably making people squirm all over Washington is the revelation of the fact that telephone wires were pretty generally tapped, and heaven knows what may be in the FBI files. It is a strange thing about the telephone. People have just come to take for granted that because you can't see anybody on the line, nobody is there.

I wouldn't be surprised to learn that telephone conversations with most of the government departments are being recorded right now. I have reason to believe that when the question of installing these recorders in the White House was brought up, it was flatly turned down. White House employees have a long and excellent record for fidelity. Of course they are carefully screened, and when the campaign to get everybody fingerprinted (an excellent idea if you have nothing to conceal about your past and no plans for an over-adventurous future) was begun, the White House employees voluntarily came forward and offered their thumbs, fingers and hands for the ink-pad.

The senate galleries were full. It was a scorcher of a day and a filibuster was going on. The senate chamber is air-cooled. What caused the crowd? The heat or the stupidity?

Pretty Goldwyn Girl Georgia Lange (who visited Washington with her five pulchritudinous pals of "Kid From Brooklyn") stepped up to a newsstand and moved a paperweight off the face of the cover girl on the July Coronet. Why? I asked her. Because it was her face.

I never saw a purple bear, I never hope to see one—but I'd like to see that little silver-blue fellow, born recently in the Bronx zoo.

Truman Sets Jaw, Shows That Job Irritates Him

TRUMAN:
Temper Short

Maybe it's hot weather, but President Truman's temper is considerably shorter than it used to be. This was evident recently when he spoke out at a press conference stating that John O'Donnell, a reporter, had spread "another lie." (Incidentally, O'Donnell once received an iron cross from FDR.) Other displays of irritability have been noticed by those close to him. Is it his health? No, says his doctor; it's just being President.

"I don't know of any President who kept so many appointments," said Col. Wallace Graham, the President's physician.

Mr. Truman wakes himself between 5:30 and 6:00 each morning, showers, shaves and dresses without the aid of a valet, and goes for a mile walk. He sometimes splashes in the White House swimming pool, but never plays golf or engages in any game more strenuous than pitching horseshoes. He may keep eight or ten appointments of 10 to 20 minutes each, see visitors, legislators, foreign diplomats, head a reception line and do some work in his office, all in an afternoon and evening. He sleeps soundly too.

But sometimes these days, he's a little irritable! Maybe he's just like the rest of us.

INVISIBLE DEATH:
Surrounds Bikini

Some of the things that happened at Bikini atoll when the atomic bomb exploded are still a mystery, correspondents aver. The A-bomb rays, for instance, clung like a secret weapon or invisible death around that South Pacific area for hours and days—and even longer perhaps.

The blast of x-rays and invisible alpha, beta and neutron rays that hit ships from the atom bomb were more crippling than the blast that smashed down and the heat that wrecked some. One of the navy's "drone" ships, which went pilotless into the cloud and returned, was unsafe to approach for more than three days. It is believed that had there been pilots in the planes they would have been killed. Mice that flew into the cloud changed color. White mice became brown. Hair usually turns white or gray when exposed to radioactive rays. All the drones brought back evidence of extreme radioactivity in or near the cloud. This invisible ray attack was worst at about 15,000 feet altitude. The roof of x-ray is placed at about 2,000 feet, so the other rays were different.

So far the scientists have made no report. But newsmen are asking: "Could human beings have lived on airplanes and ships after the blast?"

COTTON:
Crop Is Bigger

There were 18,316,000 acres of cotton in cultivation on July 1, or 3.2 per cent more than a year ago, the department of agriculture has estimated.

The acreage in cultivation July 1 and the percentage of the 1945 acreage, respectively, by states included:

Missouri, 310,000 acres and 116 per cent; Virginia, 20,000 and 105; North Carolina, 530,000 and 102; South Carolina, 950,000 and 98; Georgia, 1,235,000 and 98; Florida, 23,000 and 100; Tennessee, 600,000 and 99; Alabama, 1,510,000 and 107; Mississippi, 2,420,000 and 106; Arkansas, 1,600,000 and 107; Louisiana, 900,000 and 104; Oklahoma, 1,120,000 and 95; Texas, 6,350,000 and 104; New Mexico, 116,000 and 99; Arizona, 145,000 and 94; California, 359,000 and 113, and all other states, 18,000 and 99

WHEAT QUOTA:
To Europe Passed

The United States was ahead of its quota of wheat shipments to Europe in the first six months of 1946, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson reported a few days ago. He reported to President Truman that 50,000,000 bushels were shipped in June, bringing shipments for the year up to 397,000,000 bushels.

COAL LAND:
Good for Farming

At Altoona, Pa., tests have shown that stripped coal fields, properly backfilled, are better farm land than before the coal was removed. It was the opinion of the state mine inspector that practically all of the land can be restored for agricultural purposes, either for cropping, grazing or planting orchards.

Record '46 Corn Crop Forecast

WASHINGTON.—The largest crop of corn ever raised in the United States, and near record production of wheat and oats has been forecast by the department of agriculture. The department stated the current outlook for total crop production has seldom been surpassed. Except for 1942, the reported condition of all crops is the best in seven years.

Continued favorable weather is necessary to bring this prospect to realization. Indicated corn crop is 3,341,646,000 bushels, compared with the preceding record of 3,203,000,000 bushels harvested in 1944 and with 3,018,410,000 bushels in 1945.

Winter wheat crop of 857,163,000 bushels would be a record and although spring wheat promise is only 232,929,000 bushels, the total wheat harvest looks like 1,090,092,000 bushels based on present condition.

Production of oats is estimated at 1,471,026,000 bushels, compared with 1,547,663,000 bushels harvested last year, which was the largest oats crop ever raised. Barley production is placed at 230,278,000 bushels, against 263,961,000 bushels last year and 1935-44 average of 289,598,000 bushels.

Corn Peak in Prospect.

In commenting on the report, the department said the nation's corn cribs will have more corn in them this year than ever before if the all-time high production indicated by July 1 prospects materializes. The expected yield an acre of 36 bushels on the 91,500,000 acres for harvest which is virtually the same as last year, would also be an all-time high. Measured by the 1935-44 average, the 1946 acreage for harvest is only a trifle less but the prospective yield an acre is 8.0 bushels more and the production over a fourth larger.

Acreage and yield an acre changes from last year fall into simple patterns. A big wedge of states extending from Kansas and Oklahoma northeast to the New England states show either increased acreage or no change while almost all states outside the "wedge" show decreases. Another broad wedge of states extending from South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas southeast to Virginia and North Carolina shows good to excellent yield prospects. Outside this "wedge" prospective yields show wide variations.

Badger Is Known as the 'Co-Op' Town of Iowa

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK
WNU Features.

It's as easy to say as "Buster has the mumps." In fact "Co-operative" should be either the first or last name of the little town of Badger, Iowa, (population of less than 400 in 1940). The first co-operative program in this center of Lutheran background was the stock and grain association, started almost 40 years ago.

Although this organization met with difficulties and opposition during the first few years, it survived by realizing its advantages of co-operation as a community builder. By 1914, the association had been reorganized as a Farmers Grain Elevator company which has operated efficiently and successfully ever since.

Another venture of long standing is the Co-Operative Telephone company which has been going for more than a quarter century, and then a petroleum co-operative organization in 1930 with a capital of $6,000. The latter firm does hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of business annually, since it deals in farm machinery as well as petroleum products.

A Co-Operative Bank.

Another similar development is the co-op credit union started in 1939 "out of necessity, to provide the Badger community with needed banking services." Although opposed by the banking interests of Iowa at the outset, this group persisted wisely, although slowly, until the bank which it operates is one of the safest and most stable in Iowa, according to the state bank examiner.

Finally, there is the co-operative food store handling meats, groceries and electrical appliances. Its carrying ABC co-op labeled goods assures patrons of quality and safety according to government grading standards. Folks know they aren't likely to get gypped in this or other co-op trade and relations that characterize Badger.

Other co-operative possibilities are being considered by Badgerites. Entertainment for the teenagers and a playhouse for young people are being talked about. That's the way it seems to be done. A few people get the idea, throw it out to others, and all get together and discuss it as a possible development of, by and for the community. In this way, the people meet their major needs to the extent that problems and difficulties that spotlight most rural communities are seldom heard of in Badger.

When wanting a hunch on how a producer or consumer co-op can be made to work in a rural center, write or go to Badger.

Cop Is Shocked By Autoist Who Asked for Fine

GREELEY, COLO.—The telephone on the police desk rang. It was a Greeley woman who wanted to tell the police that she had just run through a red light at a downtown intersection. She explained that she had driven into the intersection before she noticed the light had changed and "had to go on through" even in violation of the law.

"I'm sorry," she explained. "I'll come right down and pay my fine."

Desk Sergeant Irl Timken got the shock of his life by such a call. He excused her from the fine and commented that "if all drivers were that conscientious we wouldn't have a traffic problem."

Man Remembers Dentist After Decade Passes

SUMNER, WASH.—Most toothaches are forgotten in 10 years, but Dr. C. L. Tolefson, a local dentist, recently received a check from a man he had treated a decade ago.

The dentist had forgotten all about it, when a letter with a money order came. A search into the office records disclosed the name of the patient and the forgotten date.

The letter explained that the man had bought a money order several years ago and was going to send it to the dentist. At that time the packing plant where he worked closed and he lost his job. He cashed the money order in order to live. But after several years, and attendant prosperity, he had the money to spare, and "hoped the doctor would forgive him for the delay."

Boy, 15, Operates A Farm and Dairy

AUBURN, WASH.—Jimmy Marshall, age 15, operates a 60-acre farm here without help and intends to build up a good herd of purebred Jerseys. In addition, he's a good athlete and a good scholar in school.

Last January an accident brought death to B. L. Marshall, Jimmy's father. There were 12 cows to be milked night and morning and spring work had to be started. Jimmy, though just a curly-haired youngster with an engaging grin, took over the farming, the dairying and raising hogs.

Yes, he intends to keep right on farming. He likes it. And he is well on his way to success.

Climbs 273 Steps Each Day—to Knit

ERRATA, MISS. — Mrs. Merle Lucille McDaniel has to climb 273 steps to get up on top of the world, but the quiet she gets for her knitting makes it worth the long pull.

Mrs. McDaniel is a fire watcher for the forestry department. Her office is a cabin perched atop a 120 foot tower.

The tower originally was built at the start of the war as a lookout post, a lookout for enemy planes. Her husband got the job of spotter. However, it wasn't long before the war department deemed a Japanese invasion of southern Mississippi as unlikely. So Mr. McDaniel went back to railroading and Mrs. McDaniel took over the post for the forestry department.

She keeps regular office hours atop the tower, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Most of the time she just knits and reads. But a few minutes every hour she scans her 20 mile territory with binoculars.

Bicycling Cat Returns with Four Kittens

ROYALTON, VT.—Abbie, Royalton's bicycling cat, is back home again after a year's absence—and she brought with her four beautiful kittens.

Nearly a year ago Abbie, who was accompanying Mrs. Homer Russell and children on a bicycling tour, disappeared near the Russell's summer home in Maine. Through a newspaper story Abbie was located about two miles from where she disappeared.

No Wedding Honking

MONESSEN, PA. — No more "wedding honkings" or other excessive tooting of automobile horns will be allowed in Monessen. It's against the law, a new ordinance provides. Excessive tooting of automobile horns henceforth will draw police punishment under the new law, which also requests that newlyweds "find a quieter way to display their joy."

Northern Pacific railroad laid its rails across the Panhandle in 1880-82, and the Union Pacific—Oregon Short Line — crossed the southern part of the state in 1882-84. Its mines and forest were opened commercially, and Idaho was no longer a wild frontier.

When Idaho became a state in 1890 its valleys were soon homesteaded by sturdy stock from the Middle West. For each mining camp that became a ghost town, a new community appeared, built solidly on the development of Idaho's great natural resources. Idaho settled down, at last, to build its kingdom.

The northern part of Idaho reclaimed logged-off land, to become one of the most productive areas in the West. "Idaho white pine—and plenty of it" is the slogan of its lumbermen, and yellow pine grows broad and tall. Idaho's mines yield countless minerals, with more being discovered each year.

The Snake River valley and its drainage area has prospered under irrigation and reclamation, while lands beyond the irrigation ditches have been utilized for wheat and other grains. New irrigation projects are being opened, and Idaho's agriculture and livestock industries are thriving.

Idaho potatoes, famous all over the civilized world, are grown in desert soil enriched by centuries of sagebrush and other desert growth and touched by the magic of irrigation. Even cull potatoes are now utilized and made into industrial alcohol, or fed to livestock. Sugar beets thrive and alfalfa grows luxuriantly. Cattle and sheep are fattened on rich pastures and in feed lots, and dairy herds are found everywhere.

Only recently has Idaho come into prominence as a playground and recreation spot for people who are weary of make-believe life in cities. It offers year-around skiing, hunting, fishing, swimming, boating and other sports. Pheasants, ducks and geese are plentiful. There are antelope, deer, elk and other big game in abundance to assure the sportsman of his kill. From dog races at Ashton when the snow is deep, to summer boating on Payette lakes or fishing Pend d'Orielle, no other state exceeds Idaho in sports of the great outdoors.

New York capitalists and Hollywood movie stars have found in Sun Valley in the Sawtooth Mountains one of the world's finest recreation spots. In winter, skiing is the outstanding sport, with tobogganing and big game hunting following. In summer, the mountain streams nearby offer varieties of trout, the gamiest fish of them all. Lakes and woods in the Stanley Basin afford boating, fishing, riding, hiking and camping.

Idaho is a state of mountains, valleys and deserts, with variety enough for everyone. The mountain range include Cabinet, Coeur d'Alene, Beaverhead and Bitter Root in the north; Salmon River, Sawtooth and Lost Rivers in the center of the state, and the Bear, Blackfoot and Snake River mountains in the southeast, with the Tetons along the Wyoming line northward.

Shoshone Falls — 46 feet higher than Niagara—pours its flood over a horseshoe-shaped rim in Snake River canyon. Twin Falls is another majestic sight, and American and Salmon Falls are also attractive to visitors.

Idaho offers the unusual — the almost unbelievable — in scenic wonders. The deepest canyon on the North American continent drops almost 8,000 feet below the rimrock of the Seven Devils ranges of mountains. The Big and Little Lost rivers tumble down from mountain peaks to disappear into the porous volcanic desert, breaking into sunlight again as Thousand Springs in the Snake River gorge. Recent volcanic action is offered at Craters of the Moon, and Mount Borah, highest point in the state, carries coral limestone on its crest, lifted from the sea which was once three miles below.

The state of Idaho remains a part of the Great Northwest, rich in resources, sure of its future. The frontier spirit still lives in countless ways within its borders, ready to mount to thunderous zest in the development that seems sure to come.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

Rural Water Systems

By W. J. DRYDEN, WNU Farm Editor.

First consideration of a water system should be to furnish an adequate supply of pure water. Every well should have a water tight curb extending from several feet below the ground surface to at least a foot above the surface. As a general rule the water from wells 75 feet or more in depth is safe, unless contaminated by surface water.

A lot of grief in later years may be prevented if proper planning is undertaken in the installation or development and improvement of a farm water system. Aside from sanitation, first consideration must be the elimination of work—of water and water waste carrying.

Each farmer will be confronted with his own unique problems. Lack of electricity, hilly land, unstable water supply and the distance of water systems, may all play an important part in the selection of the particular water system to be installed. The plans shown here were developed at Texas A. and M. college. With slight modifications they can be adapted to any farm need.

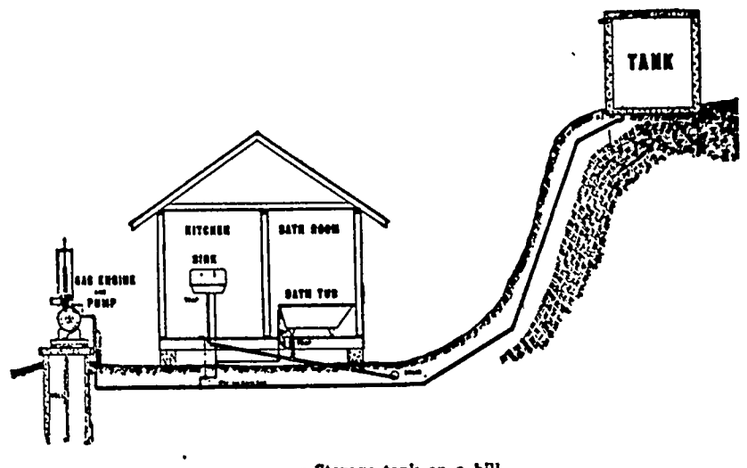
When enlarging the system or installing a new one it is well to give first consideration to future needs. Will it be practicable to include irrigation as part of the future functions of the water system? Should water flush system be added to the dairy barn? Should running water be piped to the chickens, the hogs, the cows and other animals? Should running water be provided in the dairy barn for the cows? These are only a few of the questions that must be answered before the system is started.

If running water is to be installed in the house, the capacity must be available so that each member of the family will be able to use from 40 to 50 gallons a day. This seems like a lot of water, far more than used when the water had to be carried, but it is a fact that the consumption increases materially when running water is installed. This amount includes water necessary for all household uses.

In providing water reservoir space for cattle, it must be remembered that each sheep will use 1½ gallons of water a day; a hog two gallons, a horse or a steer will use 12 gallons and a milk cow will use 25 gallons.

The average farm will use a pumping capacity of 350 gallons per hour. For such a pumping system a 42-gallon tank will be the minimum size. A much larger size will be advisable if the flow of water is slow.

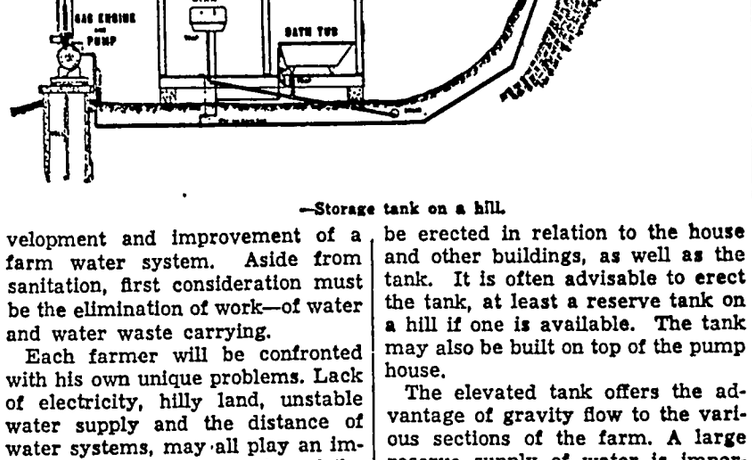
The location of the water supply will determine where the pump will be erected in relation to the house and other buildings, as well as the tank. It is often advisable to erect the tank, at least a reserve tank on a hill if one is available. The tank may also be built on top of the pump house.



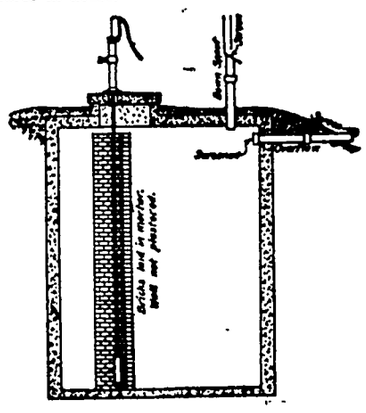
—Storage tank on a hill.

The elevated tank offers the advantage of gravity flow to the various sections of the farm. A large reserve supply of water is important on a farm to carry over periods of intermittent pumping and to make a sufficient quantity instantly available for fire protection. An elevated tank holding three to five thousand gallons is a common size.

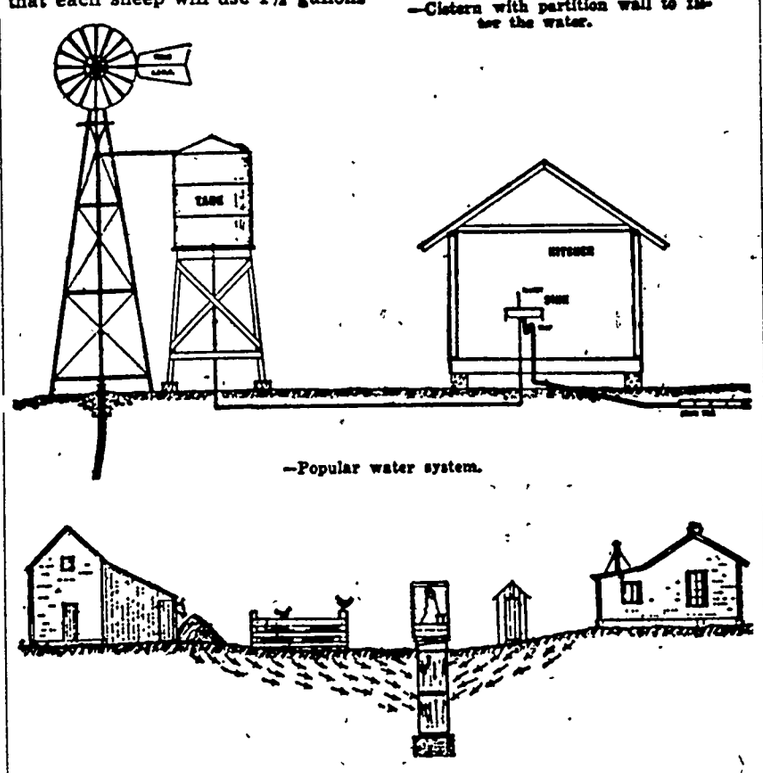
The water in an elevated tank may become unpleasantly warm in summer or contaminated by dust, birds, etc., unless the tank is housed or otherwise tightly enclosed. Except in very cold climates, a wooden tank will practically exclude danger of freezing when used with regularity.



—Pipe and fixtures in house.



—Cistern with partition wall to filter the water.



—Popular water system.

—Poorly curbed wells are dangerous.

Inside Story

It didn't take you long to solve the underwear problems brought about by midriffs and off shoulder necklines. Straggling slip and bra straps certainly don't add glamour when you want to make like a cover girl—and your slip would look pretty silly showing through the midriff middle of your playsuit or dress. Something had to be done—and you did it!

For Safe Keeping—Sew about a 1½-inch length of narrow baby ribbon to the insides of your dress or blouse shoulders. On one end sew a snap fastener and sew the other half of the fastener to the dress. Then snap the ribbon around your slip and bra straps and they'll stay in place no matter how many rugs you cut.

Half Measures—Here's new life for old slips. Cut off the worn top part; hem the waist top of the skirt. Insert elastic or a drawstring and you have a petticoat that leaves a midriff just as it finds it—bare to middlin'.

HIGH COST OF MOVIES

Out in Madison, Wis., the teenagers are picketing the movie theaters as a protest against the high cost of admission. They think that sixty-five cents is too high a price to pay —even for Van Johnson's freckles or Frankie's lower register. They're holding out for a 45-cent top, and they're backed in their strike against inflation by the Madison Youth Council. We'll let you know how it all turns out, but, in the meantime—better save your pennies because Gable's back and Garson's got him!

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8; Mark 2:23-28; Matthew 12:9-13.
MEMORY SELECTION—This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.—Psalm 118:24.

"The Sabbath was made for man," and was ordained of God for the good of man's body and soul. It was intended to be a day of glad fellowship with the Lord.

Since the Sabbath — the seventh day — was essentially one of rest and worship, the principles which surrounded it and directed its life may be applied to our day of rest, which is the first day of the week—the Lord's day.

That word "rest" sounds a little strange in this busy world of ours, and yet it is an important one. It means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, cessation of labor for the worn-out one.

God in his infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and he made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week.

I. A Day of Holiness (Exod. 20:8).

God gave his people a holy day to balance up their days of labor and to bring blessing to their souls. On that day he decreed that they should come apart from their labors, turn from secular interests and turn their hearts and minds to the unseen and the eternal. Man would become so engrossed in the things of this world that he would soon forget; therefore, God commands him to stop and worship. That should be sufficient to cause his people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy."

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family, but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who unnecessarily operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some neglect to do both.

This matter of keeping the Lord's day holy is one which has tremendous implications in the lives of our children. Many men and women who have had built into their own characters the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at divine worship have not only forgotten their own continuing need, but are destroying the interest of their children in church attendance.

It is serious enough to go astray in one's own life, but to lead one's children astray is an appalling responsibility. Let's keep the Lord's day as a holy day.

II. A Day of Helpfulness (Mark 2:23-28).

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt not's" that it was a day of fear.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who passed through his neighbor's field. The Pharisees contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the Sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

God's laws are helpful laws, and it is only when men pervert them, or add to them their own traditions and interpretations, that they become burdensome to anyone who is God-fearing and obedient.

III. A Day of Healing (Matt. 12:9-13).

Jesus made it clear that healing of the body (yes, and of the soul) was most appropriate on the Sabbath day; in fact, that is the very day for it.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of the Pharisees' professed concern for the Sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very Sabbath day, these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the Sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this Scripture as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

The desecration of the Lord's day in our time is a serious matter. Let us not contribute to it.

SOAK, BLEACH AND SUN TO REMOVE BAG LABELS

The labels on these cotton bags the feed, salt, flour and sugar bags you save will often come out with a bit of soaking. This word comes from clothing specialists at Iowa State College.

Labels on most bags, the specialists say, will come out if soaked overnight in heavy soapsuds, then washed the next day in warm soapsuds. However, it may take 10 minutes of boiling in the suds before the label will disappear entirely. Then, as a way of finishing up the bleaching, leave the bags out in the sun awhile.

If some labels seem particularly stubborn, you might try a regular bleaching agent on them or soak the bag overnight in kerosene or turpentine, then wash in soap and water.

And, according to the specialists, it's a good idea to remember which treatment works best for each manufacturer's bag, since labels may respond to different treatments.

Keep the fed and water in the shade on the range for young chickens.

BEEKEEPERS AND SEED MEN NEED COOPERATION

Now that Iowa beekeepers have sucessfully met the 18 percent increase in number of colonies this year, they are urged to get the bees located where they will be of greatest benefit in increasing legume seed production.

F. B. Paddock, Iowa State College apiarist, reminds beekeepers that the main purpose in boosting the number of colonies was their activity as pollinating agents. He points out that the value of bees in this respect is conservatively estimated at 10 to 20 times the value of honey and beeswax which they produce.

So far in Iowa the arrangement of getting bees for polinating clover fields has been largely a matter of individual effort, Paddock says. Although such effort may largely solve the problem, those who still need such service and those who have bees available are asked to contact Paddock's office at Iowa State College where arrangements will be made to get the beekeeper and seed producer together.

For the most legumes, three or four colonies per acre are ample for a good set of seed. This is true of alsike, white dutch, white and yellow sweet and Hubam clovers and alfalfa. Red clover apparently requires more, and Paddock says six to eight colonies should be arranged for an effective set of red clover seed. The bees must be located in or immediately near red clover fields which are to be pollinated for seed set. A quarter mile seems to be the maximum distance from which bees will work effectively in the production of red clover seed.

The effectiveness of the cooperation between the bookeeper and seed producer this year will be a big factor in the future desire for bees to increase legume seed production in Iowa, Paddock says.

LOIS ANN JACOBS SAYS TIMES WANT ADS PAY!

Lois Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Jacobs, had a "white elephant" that was of no further use to her and, being a very business-like girl, she decided to turn her doll buggy, which she no longer wanted, into cash.

Lois Ann wrote out her own want ad and brought it to The Times office and paid for it in cash. No sooner was the Klemme Times distributed when she received several telephone calls, one a long distance call and sold the doll buggy. She also disposed of a small wagon she did not want and now Lois Ann is really financially well off. She says that Times Want Ads sure pay!

Oliver Implements Klemme, Iowa

Hats Off to this Fellow...

HE fed us, our soldiers, our allies, and a lot of other people while we won a war. Now he's asked to keep the world from starving.

He's the American farmer.

He deserves the thanks and appreciation of everybody. He deserves it more than most folks realize because he increased his production by 30 per cent in five years without enough new tools to replace the labor he lost.

But, American farmers are disappointed—and they have a right to be. They expected that the end of the war would bring them an opportunity to replace their patched, repaired, weary and over-worked farm implements.

Of all of our shortages, that in farm tools and implements is the most serious.

Strikes have caused the shortages in farm implements—strikes in steel, strikes in coal, and strikes in the farm implement industry itself.

In the steel industry alone, the production of steel in the ten months following VJ day was 19 million tons short of expectations, enough to supply farm needs for at least five years. Most of the decline was due to strikes.

That is why the steel industry has not been able to catch up with the demand for new roofing, wire, fencing, tools and all the things of steel needed on the farm.

That is why the farmer is being penalized through no fault of his own. This nation cannot move ahead under the threat of ever-recurring labor strife.

Steel mills need all the scrap iron and steel they can get. Farmers can help increase steel output by sending worn-out machinery, etc., on its way to the furnaces. AMERICAN IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE, 350 Fifth Avenue, New York 1, N. Y.

NEW OUTDOOR MAPS READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

The State Conservation Commission's new and revised Outdoor and Highway map is now ready for distribution. The new maps have a full scale up to date highway map on the face with a centennial cover design. The opposite side has five maps of importance to outdoor recreation enthusiasts including a map of the best fishing waters, public shooting grounds, game distribution, state parks and reserves, and trout streams.

The new issue of forty thousand maps was printed because of a continuous public demand that has exhausted the original forty thousand. The maps may be secured by writing to the State Conservation Commission, 10th and Mulberry, Des Moines 8, Iowa.

TAR NOSES TO CONTROL GAD FLY PEST OF SHEEP

Pine tar spread on a sheep's nose will help prevent an infestation of the dreaded nose fly or gad fly in the animal.

Iowa State College livestock specialists remind sheep raisers that the damage from the nose fly will show up this winter, and deaths in the flock can result if the infection is heavy.

The nose fly, which appears in greatest numbers now, resembles an overgrown house fly.

During the winter months the developing larvae set up irritation that results in running noses, dizziness and occasional deaths in the flock.

Pine tar, used as a repellent, is about the only known remedy, and the livestock specialist urge farmers to smear the noses of all sheep at regular intervals.

One way to get the tar applied is to build a cover for the salt box. Holes 2½ to 3 inches in diameter are cut in the cover and lined with cloth or burlap When tar is spread around these openings, the sheep treat themselves.

Jimmy Durante at Yale

Jimmy Durante was a guest at the Yale commencement exercises the other day. The Yale classic festivities coincided with the opening of Jimmy's latest movie "Two Sisters From Boston" in the college town. Both Yale and the picture people made the most of it. No result was announced officially, but observers say Yale lost another close one.

Believe it or not, the class of 1913 adopted Durante. And in one of the class costumes "The Schnozzle" paraded in the traditional commencement parade, did his stuff at the annual ball game and was photographed being welcomed by Pres. Charles Seymour of Yale and Mrs. Seymour, a distinction not recorded by the photographers in the case of Trygve Lie, secretary of the United Nations, and many notable Americans present for honorary degrees.

Proving that by the scale of cockeyed values existing in this screwball age there is no limit to how far a radio celebrity and Hollywood star may go.

News that Jimmy Durante would be a Yale commencement figure drew out greater crowds than any commencement in years and there are those who insist that the closing line of the famous old Yale theme song was rendered "For God, for Country and for the Schnozzle."

"I never realized them Yale scouts was even watchin' me," said Jimmy. "I admit I never stopped Harvard or Yale, but on the other hand I kept Notre Dame from getting on the Yale schedule.

"I was always a Yale man at heart, even if my soul belonged to the University of Hard Knocks and my body to good old Crossley Ratings. Blue is my favorite color and I'll see that it gets a break in television.

"I was cut out to be a college man, but in my youth I could never get much practice in punting and drop kicking on account of them low ceilings in Greenwich village nighteries. My first words as a baby were 'Boola Boola.' I was christened James but my folks called me Elihu for short. And I was shorter than most kids.

"Yale was in my blood. I could feel it thumping there, but not getting nowhere. Maybe it was on account of the good blocking by Harvard and Princeton.

"I wanted the higher education but I was particular. I said it's Yale or nuthin' with me. Yale lost that one too!"

Love and Flagpoles

America must be getting back to normal. A couple were married on top of a flagpole the other day.

Marshall Jacobs, a professional flagpole sitter and Yolanda Cosmar, the girl of his choice, went through the wedding ceremony of the year at Coshockton, Pa. The wedding numbers were announced as "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "I Love You Truly." We would have recommended "Don't Fence Me In" and "Upsie Daisie."

Evidence of a return to daffiness in this country is most comforting. And we needed a demonstration of true and unswerving love and devotion. When a bride goes up to the top of a 176 foot flagpole for her man that is it.

Why America Is Great

"I have seen magnificent universities in America. I have seen its wonderful laboratories and its museums of which old European culture would be proud, and I have also seen Lions' club luncheons where full-grown men, imitating lions, roared upon command. It is a curious country." — Ilya Ehrenburg, visiting Russian writer.

We know a Lions' club, Ilya, in which a college dean leads the roaring and a laboratory chief tosses his head while he roars like a Nubian species.

What this country needs is a good five cent dollar.

He wished, however, their child, Rebecca, could one day say: "My mother's name was on the very last atomic bomb!"

O'Malley copied it word for word and then handed it in. . . . The editor glared, read and barked: "I could do a better job than this when I was in the newspaper business six months!"

Household Hints

The stems of roses and other cut flowers should be cut regularly and slantwise with a sharp knife under warm, running water. Keep the bottom stem under water while the cut is being made.

To prevent ugly marks on your floors apply wax to the casters on your furniture.

Sew loose buttons on at once. Takes only a moment and prevents your losing the button.

Colored chenille spreads should never be washed with other cottons even if they are color-fast. It is important, too, that the machine or tub be well washed first, for lint from other cotton clings to the chenille tufts and gives them a dull look you won't like.

When washing hollow handled knives do not allow them to remain too long in water as this might loosen them.

To avoid cloudy iced tea never pour hot tea over ice or place it in the refrigerator. Let the tea cool in room temperature first.

Southern Iowa gardeners can expect crops of turnips, kohlrabi, endive, winter radishes and Chinese cabbage to mature before frost if planting is done now. Vegetables have been observed going to flower and seed in some gardens. This is a waste of good garden space and soil fertility. All areas in the garden should be kept producing. Keep planting.

Town and City gardeners, in particular, should be saving all healthy plant refuse, such as cabbage leaves, carrot tops, discarded bouquets, pulled weeds not gone to seed and leaves for the compost heap. Since barnyard manures are becoming increasingly scarce, garden soils will become increasingly low in fertility. Decomposed material from the compost heap spaded in the garden in the fall or spring is a means of keeping garden soils supplied with humus. A leaflet on compost is available free from the Agricultural Extension Service, Ames, Iowa.

Some gardeners who have been saving seed from their beans for planting the following season may wonder why the bean plants and pods are so diseased. Beans are susceptible to various diseases, and some diseases can be carried over on the saved seed. It does not pay to save bean seed for planting in this part of the country. Using seed produced in western areas is the best way to avoid certain bean diseases.

Bean plants should not be disturbed in the garden while they are wet with dew or rain. Brushing by the plants in the row spreads disease. Foliage should be dry before you enter the bean patch. Tiny green leaf hoppers work on beans as well as potatoes. It is rare to find a garden free of leaf hoppers. Spreading of disease and weakened plants result. Until tiny pods begin setting, dust bean plants once a week with a mixture composed of 1 part lead arsenate and 10 parts dusting sulfur. After the first pods form, shift to dusting them with the non-poisonous rotenone.

Earworms in later maturing sweet corn can be avoided by applying a refined type of oil to the silks. Mineral oil may be used. Mark the spot on a medicine dropper from which 20 drops of oil will be delivered. Insert the oil where the silk emerges form the ear. The silks act as a wick to draw the oil in. The important point to remember is that the oil must not be applied to green silks. Apply just as the silks start to dry and turn brown.

Machinery is the cause of more farm accidents than any other source, and special care should be taken when working around it.

OATS ARE ONE OF BEST GRAINS FOR DAIRY USE

Iowa farmers who are short on corn and whose pastures may be getting short are urged to make maximum use of new oats in their rations for dairy animals.

Floyd Johnston, Iowa State College dairyman, says oats are one of the best all-around grains for dairy stock, both milking cows and young heifers and calves. He feels that too many farmers may undervalue oats in their feeding programs. When fed as part of a concentrate mixture, oats probably are equal to corn in feeding value.

For the farmer who has new oats and some corn available, Johnston recommends a summer milking mixture of equal parts of ground corn and ground oats. For each 10 pounds of this mixture, a pound of a protein supplement, such as soybean meal, should be added.

If the corn supply is extremely limited, as it is on many farms, the amount of oats can be increased to 6 or 7 parts to each 3 or 4 parts of corn. The same proporation of concentrate should be added.

And in cases where no corn is available, an emergency ration of equal parts ground oats and bran can be used for short periods.

Johnston says the corn and oats should be ground to prevent feed waste. Much of the whole grain when fed passes through the animal. Calves, however, can be fed whole oats until they are 6 or 8 months old.

POSTOFFICE LISTS UNMAILABLE ARTICLES

It is the desire of the Post Office Department that prohibited matter be kept from the mails, and one of the best ways to accomplish this result is to let the patrons know what material is unmailable. Much can be accomplished by giving information to high school students and others of impressionable age, as well as adults who have not had the matter brought to their attention.

It is not possible in a communication of this kind to mention in detail all types of unmailable matter. The following list, however, is representative of the types more commonly dealt with:

1. Intoxicating beverages.

HANCOCK COUNTY PLANS FOR SOIL CONSERVATION

The commissioners of the recently organized soil conservation district in Hancock County have completed and submitted the county program to the soil conservation service. This program is required before the soil conservation service can give techical service in the district.

The elected commissioners, S. A. Barber, W. J. Rasmuson and Ben Riemer, included the following in the program: the areas of different soil types in the county, the reason for organizing a district, steps taken in its organization, the present land use or cropping system, climatic conditions, an estimate of the investment in drainage in the county and recommendations and objectives of the district.

General recommendations as made by the commissioners include the following: plow under second crop of clover on at least sixty percent of the acreage, put manure on land needing it most, soon after it is produced, when an interilled crop follows an interilled crop special winter cover crops should be soon in at least twenty-five per cent of the cases.

Of all farms in the county the following percentages need the practices shown on some part of their area to make the recommended rotations successful—limestone on 25 per cent, Commercial fertilizers on 100 per cent, grassed waterways on 11 per cent, contour farming on 4 per cent and strip cropping and terracing on 2 per cent.

Permanent pastures need a great deal of improvement and renovation. Drainage —maintenance of public drainage, cleanouts — maintenance between cleanouts, weed control — tree control — proper planning of private tiling systems. Land use — proper rotations — fertilizers — erosion control on some farms — weed control on all farms. Maintenance of organic matter through rotation and addition of grasses sown with legumes. Tenancy as it pertains to and effects land use. Peat and muck management. High lime area management.

The natural lakes of Hancock county need to be improved. This will require the cooperation of the Iowa state conservation commission as well as the farmers owning land around the lakes. Need to help and encourage a more complete permanent record of the public and private drainage. Cooperation with the army engineers on the survey and program being formulated on the Iowa river to make it a better public drainage asset. In so far as possible to give priority assistance in farm conservation planning to farmers in the neighborhood or the watershed groups.

In order to accomplish the above objectives the Hancock county soil conservation district commissioners will seek the help and cooperation of other agencies including agricultural adjustment administration, soil conservation service, farm security administration, state conservation commission, state highway commission, county board of supervisors, vocational agriculture instructors, schools, civic groups, commercial organizations, and other organizations that can make a contribution to the objective of this program.

OBSERVES 100th BIRTHDAY

Wright county's oldest citizen, a resident of Goldfield for the past two years, Ben Bjornson, observed his 100th birthday last Saturday. His 100th anniversary occurred in the same year Iowa is celebrating its centennial. Mr. Bjornson was not born in this state, but has been a resident of Iowa for 80 years.

Mr. Bjornson was born near Clyman Dodge county, Wisconson, July 27, 1846. He came to Iowa in 1865 and settled on a farm near the Boone river northwest of Goldfield. — Kanawha Reporter.

NEW OATS MAY HAVE TO CARRY HOGS FOR WHILE

Iowa farmers who are short on corn may need to count heavily on this year's oat crop to carry spring pigs until new corn is available.

E. L. Qualife, Iowa State College swine specialist, says the new oats should be worked into the ration gradually. Piggy sows being prepared for fall farrowing can be carried through the rest of the summer on pasture with a ration of 95 percent ground oats and 5 percent supplement, self-fed.

Growing pigs that weigh between 50 and 125 pounds will do well on a ration of 70 percent ground oats, 20 percent corn and 10 percent supplement. Quaife says the heavier hogs should not get more than 50 percent oats, along with 45 per cent corn and 5 percent supplement.

When oats are fed in large quantities they should be ground to medium fineness. A constant supply of fresh drinking water should be closed to the feed when oats are self-fed.

Oats make up the entire ration of the growing pig, a part of the ration should be dry self-fed and additional amounts should be soaked and fed as a wet mash. The oats should be soaked for 12 hours before feeding.

MOST BARN FIRES OCCUR IN AUGUST

Protect With Lighting Rods And Make Sure They're In Good Shape

Unless steps are taken to prevent it, much of the valuable hay and grain going into the barns this month is destined to be destroyed by fire, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

Statistics show that August is the peak month for farm fires, with one-third of all Iowa barn fires caused by lightning striking unrodded barns. Beaty says that from 50 to 100 barns burn annually as a result of lightning, with an annual loss of more than $1000,000.

Rods Record

In protecting barns against lightning, Beaty says lightning rods are the best answer provided so far. Their value is indicated by the fact that 28 percent of the fires on unrodded buildings are caused by lightning while the loss with rodded barns is less than 4 percent.

Of course, the rods must be maintained in proper working order to be effective. In many instances, Beaty says, the rods are so defective that they actually are a hazard instead of a safegurd.

Protect Ground Cable

To make sure the rods are offering the protection needed, Beaty suggests checking the entire system to make sure there are no broken connections, ground rods or damaged lightning terminals. To prevent damage in the future, he advises setting a post alongside the ground cable so that a wagon or animal can't readly damage the rod where it enters the ground.

FOLLOW THESE RULES TO PREVENT SOFT PICKLES

It may be the fault of the cucumber that your pickles aren't perfect but chances are you waited too long before pickling them. Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist at Iowa State College, says a delay of more than 24 hours after picking cucumbers is the reason for many a "hollow pickle."

And according to Miss Graham, soft pickles are due to bacterial spoilage. You can keep bacteria from growing by adding more salt to the brine solution during curing or by increasing the amount of vinegar. The vinegar should be a pure apple cider vinegar. And watch particularly that pickles aren't over-cooked in the vinegar. This may cause soft pickles, too, she warns.

Another "pickle problem" that of fading, also begins with a poor cucumber. But even a good cucumber will be a faded or dull colored pickle if it's had too little curing.

Prevention, Miss Graham says, consists, first, of selecting good quality cucumbers. Secondly, use the correct concentration of brine. She recommends 1 cup salt to a gallon of water. Leave the pickles in the brine until the bubbles disappear. Or break apart to see if it has become dark and clear throughout. She points out, however, that some darkening of the pickles may be caused by iron present in the water.

Pickles, usually fruit pickles, will not shrivel if they're placed in a weak salt, sugar, or vinegar solution at first, then gradually increase the strength of the solution. Or bring the product to a slow boil, boil quickly, cool and allow to stand several hours or evernight in the syrup to plump.

$6,000 IN LIVESTOCK PRIZES AT NORTH IOWA FAIR

Approximately $6,000 in livestock prizes, a top-notch stage show, 2 days of auto racing, a rodeo, a horse show and harness racing are expected to add up to the biggest North Iowa fair ever when Mason City revives its prewar district exposition, August 30 to September 3.

Emphasis is definitely on district competition in the livestock events, including the junior shows, judging from the premium list just released by Secretary Harold Palmer.

In the junior division the district premium list adds to more than $2,200, and the county to approximately $1,400. The open class livestock premiums include more than $1,000 for the beef shows approximately $750 each for dairy cattle and swine and $360 for sheep.

District special premiums for junior livestock judging and demonstration total more than $1,100 in addition to the livestock money. Premiums for the poultry, agriculture, horticulture, pantry stores, dairy products, textiles, schools and women's projects will add another $1,000 in the open classes.

Entertainment definitely is back on a prewar basis at the district fair with Barnes-Carruthers musical extravaganza booked for Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings before the grandstand. The revue plays in the South Dakota state fair immediately after the Mason City dates and then moves to the A-1 Canadian circuit.

The Saturday and Labor day auto races will be National Speedway attractions featuring Emory Collins and other great stars of the dirt tracks.

The harness races will be held Sunday afternoon and the horse show Monday evening with Clyde Miller's rodeo finishing out the attractions Tuesday afternoon and evening.

On the midway the North Iowa Fair will present showdom's newest and brightest attraction, the Gem City Shows with over 50 rides, shows and concessions.

No admission charge will be made at the gate Friday, entry day, the grandstand charge Friday evening being the only one for that performance. Throughout the other 4 days the gate admission charge will be 25 cents. The gates open at 8:00 A. M. daily.

"You can get rid of those loafing cows"

NO, SIR, the farm is no place for loafers. Doesn't make any difference whether it's men, cows or chickens My Dad says you can't afford to feed anybody that isn't doing a job for you. You gotta give the feed to the best animals.

That's why we don't get too friendly with the Bossy who spends most of her time eating . . . and not much time giving milk. We put her on the market and have the feed for the good cows.

Klemme To Share In Funds Unloosed By Supreme Court Decision

Estimates place the drag coming to Klemme's street fund from the $6,000,000 of gasoline taxes collected during the last year by the state treasurer from an 1% tax voted by the last legislature, at $1,172.16. The state fund will be available soon as the result of the unanimous Iowa supreme court decision, made recently, upholding the constitutionality of the law and validity of the tax collection.

The law provides that three-fifth of the funds thus collected be used for county secondary road constructoin funds, on basis of population; and the remaining two-fifths be apportioned to the cities and towns, also on the basis of population, to be used "for the construction, reconstruction, repair and maintenance of roads and streets."

It is estimated that with $2,400,00 available for cities and towns, the towns would receive, on the basis of the 1940 census, $2.22 for each resident. Klemme's population was placed at 528 by the 1940 census.

For the first time in Iowa history, Iowa cities and towns will receive a specified proportion of gas tax collected from users of streets and highways, for the use on streets within an incorporated city or town.

It should also make it possible for counties to build and maintain better secondary roads.

The test case was started May 24, 1945 by L. V. Carlton of Johnson county, who attempted to enjoin the state treasurer from collecting the additional tax. The treasurer was ordered to collect the tax, but to deposit the proceeds until determination of the suit.

The unanimous decision was written by Justice W. L. Bliss of Mason City.

The bomb which leveled Hiroshima and has since been echoing in the Pacific did something to congress that could not have been done before the explosion. It induced the senate to loosen the public purse strings to the extent of voting to subsidize a national scientific research foundation.

Scientists don't have many votes, so the persuasion couldn't have come by way of a lobby. The public imagination had been stirred. Suddenly the layman realized that science was a powerful factor in war. He realized too that perhaps men who could smash the atom and make it smash the enemy, might learn how to use the powers of the sleeping giant—atomic energy—for the good as well as the ill of mankind.

At this writing congress has not completed action of the bill but probably will have done so by the time these lines are read. The idea of a national research program seemed very good to me. Therefore, I was somewhat surprised to hear a pharmacological authority of my acquaintance say that passage of this legislation "would be as destructive in the field of science" as the bomb was in the midst of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. He made the observation in a group, several of whom were scientists. His hearers appeared to echo his sentiments—sentiments which I later learned he had set forth in the recent Bulletin of the American Association of University Professors. He (Dr. Theodore Koppanyi) said: "In an analysis of the bill, a basic wrong immediately leaps to the eye. This is the assumption that scientific research can be 'initiated' or 'prescribed for.' If this assumption could be grounded, the natural sequel to a national research foundation would be federal foundations to 'initiate' and 'prescribe for' the composition of music, the painting of pictures, the writing of poems, and the establishment of social controls and education, for science is probably the most personal and individualistic of all human endeavors. No agency, however authorized and directed, can develop a national policy for scientific research."

Difficult to Pass On Projects

The theories and ways of thinking of scientists, Dr. Koppanyi explained (and his colleagues agreed), are as diverse as the world itself.

"How can we set up a court with the power to pass on what is good and what is not good for science?" he asked, and then he turned to me with this question: "Would you approve of having a member of your profession—a commentator or newswriter—appointed by a President of the United States, as head of a similarly selected group of your colleagues who were made privy to private government information, which was barred from other speakers or writers?"

Naturally I said: "No." (That would be the end of the freedom of the press and radio.)

Then Dr. Koppanyi concluded: "You can spend a lot of money and get no return. But if you trust in human ingenuity, motivated by desire of public service, the love of science, recognition, and maybe selfish aims alike, you will have done more for basic science than you could ever do with billions of dollars of federal money."

Social Science Study Lags

Spokesmen for the so-called social sciences (the study of people, of individuals and groups) were loud in criticizing the omission from the bill of provisions for research in this field.

An engineer spoke for the social scientists in these words: "We've gone miles ahead in our study of inaminate things, in physics, chemistry and the other sciences that deal with inorganic matter, compared to our advancement in the study of human beings—why they act the way they do under given conditions, their relations to other individuals and to groups, and the action of the groups in relation to each other."

He spoke of the recent pogrom in Kielce, Poland, where the Jews were attacked and killed. It all started from a false rumor, a planted rumor. The very same thing, the engineer pointed out, touched off the riots three years ago in Detroit. Those are known facts but there is very little public knowledge of what causes such action, how it can be prevented.

Possession Is Law to Russ

Russian expropriation of Austrian property and her delaying tactics in the setting of the peace conference date seem to be predicated on the theory: Why start any discussions of who gets what if you can operate on the old theory that possession is nine points of the law?

Possession is an important factor. Take the recent experience of a Philadelphia horse. Around midnight one night a horse walked into a residential district and began devouring gardens of dahlias, morning-glories, snapdragons and other flowers. The infuriated householders tried to shoo the horse away, but he kicked at them and went right on expropriating the bourgeois blooms. However, in the good old American tradition, a policeman appeared with a rope and lassoed the beast. He was removed to the police stables where he couldn't exercise a veto on this purely procedural process.

This subversive tendency in the animal world was revealed in another part of Philadelphia at about the same time. Returning from a week-end, a householder and his family who had started a counter revolutionary campaign against what they thought to be a harmless mouse, found a large-sized rat in the trap they had set. The rat with the trap attached as a minor incumbrance went right after the family which climbed tables and chairs. This time when the cop came he felt aggressive warfare justifiable and finished the rat with his reactionary night-stick.

Congress' Work Is Never Done

Congressmen invariably come to work January 14 brisk of step, bright of eye, confident they'll have all the bills passed, all the necessary business disposed of by July 1 at the latest, so they can go home to their fences.

The old timers, of course, know they are just kidding themselves.

Business is never completed by July 1, though they work from sun to sun for, like woman's, congress' work is never done. Consequently, fishing trips, motor jaunts, and important electioneering have to be postponed while house and senate members labor in Washington heat to complete last-minute legislation.

This year, it was the OPAgony that fevered congressional brows late into July. Debate was so furious, night sessions were so frequent that I wasn't surprised when I heard a man in the visitor's gallery of the capitol ask: "Why did they wait so long to get at the OPA bill? Seems to me they always have a lot of stuff left to do at the end of a session that they could have taken up earlier. Do they always let it go so long that these closing days sound like a rowdy jam session?"

I reported this remark to a man who knows Capitol Hill, as you and I know the short-cut home.

"There are no jams in congress," he answered as he inhaled another tablespoonful of the famous senate restaurant bean soup.

"Not even on OPA?" I modestly needled.

"No," he said, "but I'll admit they came to a near-jam when they had to work like the dickens to get the bill to the President before the OPA expired. But they did get it to him (he was talking about the first OPA bill)—and it was better than a lot of people had expected. That was no jam."

Chester Bowles has passed from the Washington scene, his head bloody but unbowed, and full of thoughts of further battle. We'll see what happens in the next senatorial elections in the Nutmeg state.

PROTEST STRIKES . . . In protest against soaring prices following end of OPA controls, buyers' strikes were planned throughout the nation under instigation of unions, veterans' groups, consumers councils and other organizations. Typical is this scene showing St. Louis housewives picketing a dairy in protest against the entire dairy industry in St. Louis, where milk prices have risen 15 per cent and butter 23 per cent.

NEWS REVIEW

Wheeler, Veteran Senator, Defeated; Talmadge Wins

POLITICS: Beat Wheeler

Political observers studied the campaign in the Democratic senatorial primary in Montana for a clue to the cause of defeat of the veteran Burton K. Wheeler, with a variety of reasons appearing to contribute to his downfall.

Since the rugged veteran led the non-interventionist cause before Pearl Harbor, the Japanese attack on the U. S. and the swing of American sentiment toward effective world co-operation were seen to have acted strongly against him. But because of the closeness of his defeat, the CIO-PAC fight against him, the opposition of the powerful railroad brotherhoods and the diversion of the main strength of the Democratic organization to his opponent, Leif Erickson, could have weaned enough votes away from him to spell defeat.

Winding up 24 years of senatorial service, Wheeler said: ". . . . The people of Montana have been very good to me. . Those who voted in the Democratic primary have relieved me of a great responsibility and a lot of work. . . . Probably I have lost many supporters because I did not go along blindly with a Democratic administration in the last few years, but I could not sacrifice my principles. . . ."

Return Talmadge

Georgia's gubernatorial election shared the national spotlight with Montana's senatorial race, with fiery, red-suspendered Gene Talmadge making his bid for a fourth term on a platform of "white supremacy."

Despite the fact that his No. 1 opponent, James V. Carmichael, rolled up an impressive popular vote, Talmadge took an early lead in the decisive unit voting in which winners are determined by the number of counties they carry.

Against a background of a U. S. Supreme court decision opening Democratic primaries in the South to Negroes, and another court ruling forbidding segregation on interstate buses, Talmadge conducted a vigorous "white supremacy" campaign. With Georgia's state administration under retiring Gov. Ellis Arnall making no effort to curb the colored vote, more than 100,000 Negroes flocked to the polls, separate booths being set up in some election stations.

INVENTORIES: Hit Hoarding

Hitting at the withholding of merchandise from the market in anticipation of higher prices, Civilian Production administration drew up stringent inventory controls on manufacturers of electrical appliances and other scarce goods.

At the same time, CPA disclosed that exports may be limited if shippers move out a flood of goods at high prices to badly depleted foreign markets. Restoration of OPA price control would make such a step unnecessary, it was said.

Under CPA regulations, inventories of finished goods would be restricted to 30 days. Included are refrigerators, furniture, washing machines, electric ranges, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, cameras, asphalt and tarred roofing, insect screen cloth and galvanized ware.

JUSTICE: Free Spy Suspect

The jury had just returned a verdict of not guilty on five charges of spying against 30-year-old Nicolai Redin, Russian naval lieutenant. Elated by the finding, the stocky defendant rose to his feet, crossed to the jury box and shook hands with the seven men and five women.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury," he said in heavily accented tones, "I want to thank you for the fair trial I have received here in America." Then shaking hands with Judge Lloyd Black, he declared: "The friendship between our two countries has existed and will exist."

Redin's acquittal followed Judge Black's censure of the prosecution for building up the international aspects of the case, with their implications of U. S. and Russian differences. Arrested in Portland, Ore., last March as he was about to board a ship for Russia, he was charged with obtaining and attempting to transmit secret plans of the new 14,000-ton destroyer tender, USS Yellowstone.

SET-ASIDE TERMINATED

Wheat Sale Requirement Ends

Producer wheat set-aside requirements, under which it was mandatory for wheat farmers to sell half the grain from the 1946 crop that they took to elevators or warehouses for storage, have been terminated by the government. The set-aside provision had been inoperative since June 30, final effective date of grain ceilings.

Action to eliminate the requirement preceded final vote on the senate version of the new price control bill, which as it now stands, makes it mandatory for the government to issue certificates protecting producers forced to sell their grain through a government order against a price rise in the next nine months.

Favors Revision.

No announcement was made regarding other provisions of the set-aside, contained in an amendment to war food order No. 144, and overall wheat control regulation. However, it is known that officials in the department of agriculture favor changing the set-aside to the terminal level in place of country level if congress returns ceilings to wheat.

The set-aside became effective last May, and unofficial estimates place the amount of wheat purchased prior to July 1 under this procurement plan at about 37 million bushels.

Ends Obligation.

Removal of the producer part of the requirement automatically removes the department from obligation to any congressional directive guaranteeing farmers against a price rise, while retaining the machinery for siphoning off 250 million bushels of wheat for the export program as it is marketed.

If price control on wheat is eliminated, the government will have to set up new procurement machinery, officials admitted, but said that there is no change in the heavy export goal.

Indiana Industrial City Maps Extensive Improvement Plan

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK

WNU Features

Three-quarters of a century after its settlement on the Blue river, New Castle, Ind., attracted the Maxwell automobile factory in 1907. From 3,000 population then, the town "growed like Topsy," to its present size of 20,000. Activity of an industrial city settled down over the frame of a small town.

According to Scott Chambers, president of New Castle's City Plan commission, "this tended to change the sense of values of the people, who became more interested in getting than in giving, more in what they had than what they were." There were fewer music and art teachers in the town's schools in 1940 than in 1904.

Scan Civic Needs.

So, in 1942, there was held a civic clinic in the form of public meetings whereby more than 1,000 people helped to figure out what their town needed. Better housing, more adequate parks, auditorium, new hotel, airport, community center, physical and moral clean-up were on the list.

It all spelled a job for a planning commission. Speakers were engaged for civic group meetings. Reports of the talks were carried in local papers. The mayor named a commission. Members read good books and pamphlets for self-education and employed the services of qualified architects. All the forces went to work for a New Castle that "would give its people both the opportunity of an industrial city and the charm and ease of life in a small town."

Foresee Future Growth.

The program is based on analysis of problems and outline of purpose. While some of it is being carried out, the rest still is in the planning stage. With more than a dozen substantial manufacturing firms to its credit, the city looks to brisk business and well-balanced growth in the years ahead.

A place where parking facilities are adequate is being substituted for a business district where traffic jams the streets. Quarters that will permit good health and induce good citizenship are replacing blighted areas and local public works projects are part of a general scheme for community developments. There is no leaf-raking in new goals for New Castle.

WHEAT PILE . . . Standing on 30,000 bushels of wheat stored on the 5,120-acre wheat ranch of Ed Stallwitz near Dumas, Texas, is Craig Stallwitz, nephew of the owner. Lack of railroad cars necessitated piling up wheat on many Texas farms.

Two Elderly Fans Are Undeterred by Scooter Accident

MEMPHIS, TENN. — Although their first attempt at riding a motor scooter landed them in a hospital, two elderly Memphis women insist they will not desert the childhood sport.

When Mrs. Mattie Driver, 60 bought the scooter, she invited Mrs. Ida L. Frisby, 82, for a ride. The scooter got out of control and the women landed in a hospital, Mrs. Frisby with a shoulder injury and Mrs. Driver with a head cut.

Insisting that she had no regrets, Mrs. Frisby said, "I was doing something I'd always wanted to do."

"This won't stop me," Mrs. Driver bragged, adding that she intends to ride her scooter to Chattanooga as soon as she is released from the hospital.

Former WAC Sees Name as Casualty

BILLINGS, MONT. — When the war department recently published its list of World War II casualties, Mrs. Charles W. Bruder, former second lieutenant in the WAC, scanned the list with amazement for her own name was included among those officially declared dead or missing.

Mrs. Bruder, whose service was confined to recruiting duty in this country, blamed a mixup of service records in Washington for the error. She was released last December. Her husband also was an army officer, serving in the European theater.

IRATE OVER PROSTITUTION

WASHINGTON —Admiral Nimitz is trying to hush it up, but a hot row has broken out in the navy's chaplain division over alleged discrimination against chaplains with combat records, some of whom have been denied admission into the regular navy and others transferred to minor posts.

Four well-known chaplains already have resigned as a result of the dispute. They are:

Capt. William A. McGuire, Catholic chaplain of the 11th naval district at San Diego—a 29-year naval veteran who served as fleet chaplain at Pearl Harbor at the outbreak of the war.

Capt. Maurice Witherspoon, Presbyterian, former All-America football star at Washington-Jefferson college and one of the most popular chaplains in the navy.

Capt. William W. Edel, Methodist, who also chalked up a fine record as a combat chaplain.

Capt. Raymond Drinan, Catholic, former chaplain of the battle-scarred airplane carrier Enterprise.

In addition to the claim of combat chaplains that they are being relegated to minor roles while their non-combat colleagues get the top commands, many also are sore over the navy's failure to crack down on prostitution in Japan.

A number of Protestant and Catholic chaplains who served in the Pacific contend that the navy is abetting the growth of prostitution in Tokyo by an indifferent policy in regard to the Yoshiwaras.

These chaplains further charge that those who have fought prostitution in Tokyo have been disciplined for their efforts — among them, Comdr. O. B. Cook, who was transferred from Tokyo to Guam.

PAUL PORTER A-BOMBED

Chester Bowles, who stepped out of government after tough years of battling inflation, is a close friend of Paul Porter. The two fought side by side—Bowles as economic stabilizer, Porter as administrator of OPA. When Bowles resigned, Porter, left to fight the inflation battle alone, wrote a note.

"I now feel," Porter told his former chief, "like a native whom the navy forgot to remove from Bikini just before the atom bomb exploded."

FILIBUSTER AGAINST A-BOMB

It's Southerners who have the reputation for filibustering, but three northern Republicans are conducting a filibuster more secret and just as skillful as that of any Dixie Democrat. It's against the atom control bill—vital to the nation.

They know the house will pass the senate-approved McMahon bill for control of atomic energy if it comes to a vote; so for two weeks three Republicans have kept the bill bottled up in the military affairs committee by stalling at every turn.

The three filibusters are Parnell Thomas of New Jersey, Forrest Harness of Indiana and Charles Elston of Ohio.

Many committee members gave up an evening for a special session in order to complete the bill and give the U. S. a policy to back up Barney Baruch in the United Nations.

Half an hour after the time set for the meeting they lacked a quorum, and Ohio's recalcitrant Elston would not let them proceed. Only one more member was needed.

Finally Congresswoman Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut phoned that she was on her way to the committee room from her office five floors above. But while she was in the elevator, Elston grabbed his hat and left so there still would be no quorum.

Thus a dozen conscientious congressmen were forced to waste more than an hour, and Bernard Baruch was left high and dry before the United Nations with no law on the statute books to back him up.

IRKED OVER PALESTINE

It wasn't announced, but Prime Minister Attlee sent a confidential message to President Truman informing him that British troops had taken repressive measures against Jewish elements in Palestine. However, the message arrived only after British troops already had moved in.

Attlee asked Truman for a public statement of support, but the President was so irked at the way Attlee acted first and advised him afterward, that he phoned acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson and told him to issue a statement keeping American skirts clear of the British move.

Returned Veterans Aid Outlook For Elderly U.S. Farm Couples

Alabama Brothers Show Success in Postwar Venture

Return of veterans from the armed forces is aiding the financial outlook for many an elderly U. S. farm couple.

Take the Bowdens in Coffee county, Ala., for example. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bowden are 69 and 63 years old, respectively, and, because of their age, were not able to make the most out of the farm they were operating when their sons were in service.

Upon their return from the armed forces, Lynn and Oren Bowden shouldered the job of making a living for the family and increasing dividends from the farm. Their first objective was to buy the farm, thus raising themselves and their "old folks" out of the tenant farmer class.

Since many elderly farmers and their wives also are looking to their sons to take over the home farm, the story of the Bowdens is related to show what can be accomplished.

Actually the story has its beginning in 1936 when, as the elder Bowden frankly admits, "we were down and out and had to struggle to make ends meet." Unable to get credit from regular lenders for purchase of feed, seed, fertilizer, equipment and other farm needs, the Bowdens resorted to a government agency, now the Farm Security administration, to secure the necessary funds. Along with the funds came instruction in sound farming practices, which enabled the Bowden family to improve the efficiency of their operations.

A period of progress followed, but the advent of war disrupted all the family's plans. Both Lynn and Oren were called into service, resulting in an acute lack of help on the farm. Lynn, 44, veteran of both world wars, entered the army in 1940 when the Alabama National Guard was called into service. Oren, 31, also was a member of the National Guard and entered service early the following year. A temporary respite was gained when Oren was placed on inactive duty to help run the farm, but he later was called back into service.

SEEK EXPERT GUIDANCE—The Bowden brothers and their parents have proved that they are good farmers, but they frankly admit they don't know it all. Here James S. Pridgen, Coffee county, Ala., FSA supervisor, shows Lynn and Oren Bowden how to treat seed peanuts to prevent damp rot after they are in the ground.

Upon their discharge early in 1943, both brothers returned to the family farm. Intent on purchasing the 360-acre farm, previously rented by the family, the brothers arranged the necessary financing with Farm Security administration, which permits 40 years at 3 per cent interest for repayment of farm purchase loans. A major factor in the family's success was the diversified farming plan which the agency helped the family to map out.

Faced with a $4,800 debt, contracted in purchasing the farm, the Bowdens embarked on an ambitious farm program designed to wipe out the debt in shortest possible time. Within a year they had paid off more than half the debt. Today, only three years later, the final payment has been made to the government agency and the Bowdens are full owners of their land.

With 160 acres of the farm under cultivation, the Bowdens produce peanuts as the main cash crop. Carrying out their plan of diversified farming, they also have cotton, hogs and 12 head of beef cattle, principally of the Black Angus type. To develop their herd, they recently purchased a purebred Angus bull.

In 1944, the Bowdens marketed 20 tons of peanuts, $600 worth of hogs, and $60 worth of cattle. They had 15 other hogs left over for marketing by the end of that year as well as 12 stock hogs and 2 milk cows. Sale of chickens and eggs also added to farm returns.

Marketings the following year included 20 tons of peanuts, 4 bales of cotton and about $583 worth of hogs. After those sales, they had 24 Duroc shoats, 4 brood sows and 30 pigs on hand as well as their beef cattle.

The "old folks" are helping the veterans progress in their farming venture. The elder Bowden raises garden produce, selling $112 worth of cabbage from a few rows in his garden last year. Intent on increasing the returns, he has planted six 80-foot rows of cabbage this year. Mrs. Bowden also is active in work around the house and garden.

Size of the family also has been increased. After the last farm payment was made, Oren was married and brought his wife to the family farm home.

Today the Bowdens are considered successful Alabama farmers. Each member of the family does his proper share of work and all reap the benefits of good living on a well-operated farm. Furthermore, the elder Mr. and Mrs. Bowden can take more time to enjoy the peace and security of farm life now that their boys, like so many others, are home again from the war.

PIGS BOOST INCOME—Oren Bowden is hown here with brood sows and some of the young porkers which will be ready for market in the fall. Returns from cattle and pigs increase earnings on the Bowden farm, which is operated on a well-rounded diversified farming plan.

Loans to Veterans for Farm Purchases And Operating Costs Reach High Peak

Setting a new high in Farm Security administration loans to veterans, 5,400 ex-servicemen were financed in purchase of farm operating equipment or family farms within a two-month period, according to figures released by department of agriculture.

The loans, made during March and April, constitute nearly a third of the total number the agency has approved for veterans during the last two years, FSA Administrator Dillar B. Lasseter announces.

Declaring that the agency expects the record lending to continue, Lasseter reports that more than 20,000 veteran applications now are being processed in county offices.

More than 16,000 veterans already have received FSA assistance. Approximately 1,000 of them obtained farm purchase loans under terms of the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act from an earmarked fund set up by congress. The rest have loans to buy machinery and livestock or for other operating needs.

Soaring real estate prices and lack of productive farms for sale have handicapped veterans in their quest for farms, Lasseter says.

Guidance Plan Aids Farmers Getting Loans

Individual guidance in good farm and home management practices is provided by Farm Security administration with all loans, the department of agriculture emphasizes.

Each loan, the department reports, is based on a sound plan for farm and home management that is worked out by the borrower and his family. The plan shows items the farmer intends to raise, his estimated operating expenses and income he may expect to make.

A FSA supervisor, schooled in efficient farm methods, helps each family make and carry out the plan. He will supply information on how to select and care for livestock, plan crop rotations and put other good farm methods into practice. In most rural counties a home supervisor, trained in home economics, also is available to assist the family.

Main objects of the guidance plan, according to FSA, are to help the farmer "get the most income from his work, obtain a good living for his family and repay his loan."

CARES FOR CABBAGE . . . Most of the gardening on the Bowden farm is done by J. W. Bowden, 69, father of the Bowden brothers. Here he is working among his cabbages, which netted $140 in 1945.

New Jersey Farmer Termed Hardest Working Man in State

On the basis of the working day's length, the title of hardest working man in New Jersey can be conferred on the average farmer in the Garden state, declares the state department of agriculture.

Figures cited by the department show that as of June 1 New Jersey farm operators were working an average of 12 hours daily, which adds up to a 72-hour week, excluding time devoted to Sunday chores. During harvesting operations, particularly in July and August, longer working days are in store for farmers.

A farmer's week adds up to a 72-hour period contrasted to a factory employee's regular work week of 40 hours. Then, too, according to the department, whenever a day's work is lost on a farm the output of 12 hours is involved whereas only an eight-hour day is lost when a city plant shuts down.

No report of the number of hours per day worked by farmers can estimate the time spent on Sundays and holidays when, as on any other day, chores such as feeding livestock, milking and other jobs must be done on a farm regardless of the day of the week.

A year ago, when the war still waged, New Jersey farmers spent 12.2 hours a day at work.

Pineapple Potholder Is Easy to Crochet

NOT a bit difficult to crochet though it looks like it might be. The "scales" on this attractive yellow pineapple potholder are just simple shell stitches raised out a bit. The "spines" at top are crocheted leaves of green thread made separately and then sewn on top. It measures 7 by 5 inches, and you'll need to make two similar "sides" and sew them together over a thin layer of lining.

Iowa farmers who are short on corn and whose pastures may be getting short are urged to make maximum use of new oats in their rations for dairy animals.

Floyd Johnston, Iowa State College dairyman, says oats are one of the best all-around grains for dairy stock, both milking cows and young heifers and calves. He feels that too many farmers may undervalue oats in their feeding programs. When fed as part of a concentrate mixture, oats probably are equal to corn in feeding value.

For the farmer who has new oats and some corn available, Johnston recommends a summer milking mixture of equal parts of ground corn and ground oats. For each 10 pounds of this mixture, a pound of a protein supplement, such as soybean meal, should be added.

If the corn supply is extremely limited, as it is on many farms, the amount of oats can be increased to 6 or 7 parts to each 3 or 4 parts of corn. The same proporation of concentrate should be added.

And in cases where no corn is available, an emergency ration of equal parts ground oats and bran can be used for short periods.

Johnston says the corn and oats should be ground to prevent feed waste. Much of the whole grain when fed passes through the animal. Calves, however, can be fed whole oats until they are 6 or 8 months old.

POSTOFFICE LISTS UNMAILABLE ARTICLES

It is the desire of the Post Office Department that prohibited matter be kept from the mails, and one of the best ways to accomplish this result is to let the patrons know what material is unmailable. Much can be accomplished by giving information to high school students and others of impressionable age, as well as adults who have not had the matter brought to their attention.

It is not possible in a communication of this kind to mention in detail all types of unmailable matter. The following list, however, is representative of the types more commonly dealt with:

1. Intoxicating beverages.
2. Inflammable matter such as matches, lighter fluid, and other articles likely to cause fire through absorption of moisture, or self-ignition through friction or spontaneous chemical charges.
3. Ammunition and all other explosives.
4. Firearms, such as revolvers, which are capable of being concealed on the person.
5. Obscene matter.
6. Poisons.
7. Narcotics.
8. Extortion letters.
9. Lottery and fraudulent matter.

HANCOCK COUNTY PLANS FOR SOIL CONSERVATION

The commissioners of the recently organized soil conservation district in Hancock County have completed and submitted the county program to the soil conservation service. This program is required before the soil conservation service can give techical service in the district.

The elected commissioners, S. A. Barber, W. J. Rasmuson and Ben Riemer, included the following in the program: the areas of different soil types in the county, the reason for organizing a district, steps taken in its organization, the present land use or cropping system, climatic conditions, an estimate of the investment in drainage in the county and recommendations and objectives of the district.

General recommendations as made by the commissioners include the following: plow under second crop of clover on at least sixty percent of the acreage, put manure on land needing it most, soon after it is produced, when an interilled crop follows an interilled crop special winter cover crops should be soon in at least twenty-five per cent of the cases.

Of all farms in the county the following percentages need the practices shown on some part of their area to make the recommended rotations successful—limestone on 25 per cent, Commercial fertilizers on 100 per cent, grassed waterways on 11 per cent, contour farming on 4 per cent and strip cropping and terracing on 2 per cent.

Permanent pastures need a great deal of improvement and renovation. Drainage —maintenance of public drainage, cleanouts — maintenance between cleanouts, weed control — tree control — proper planning of private tiling systems. Land use — proper rotations — fertilizers — erosion control on some farms — weed control on all farms. Maintenance of organic matter through rotation and addition of grasses sown with legumes. Tenancy as it pertains to and effects land use. Peat and muck management. High lime area management.

The natural lakes of Hancock county need to be improved. This will require the cooperation of the Iowa state conservation commission as well as the farmers owning land around the lakes. Need to help and encourage a more complete permanent record of the public and private drainage. Cooperation with the army engineers on the survey and program being formulated on the Iowa river to make it a better public drainage asset. In so far as possible to give priority assistance in farm conservation planning to farmers in the neighborhood or the watershed groups.

In order to accomplish the above objectives the Hancock county soil conservation district commissioners will seek the help and cooperation of other agencies including agricultural adjustment administration, soil conservation service, farm security administration, state conservation commission, state highway commission, county board of supervisors, vocational agriculture instructors, schools, civic groups, commercial organizations, and other organizations that can make a contribution to the objective of this program.

Wright county's oldest citizen, a resident of Goldfield for the past two years, Ben Bjornson, observed his 100th birthday last Saturday. His 100th anniversary occurred in the same year Iowa is celebrating its centennial. Mr. Bjornson was not born in this state, but has been a resident of Iowa for 80 years.

Mr Bjornson was born near Clyman Dodge county, Wisconson, July 27, 1846. He came to Iowa in 1865 and settled on a farm near the Boone river northwest of Goldfield. — Kanawha Reporter.

NEW OATS MAY HAVE TO CARRY HOGS FOR WHILE

Iowa farmers who are short on corn may need to count heavily on this year's oat crop to carry spring pigs until new corn is available.

E. L. Qualife, Iowa State College swine specialist, says the new oats should be worked into the ration gradually. Piggy sows being prepared for fall farrowing can be carried through the rest of the summer on pasture with a ration of 95 percent ground oats and 5 percent supplement, self-fed.

Growing pigs that weigh between 50 and 125 pounds will do well on a ration of 70 percent ground oats, 20 percent corn and 10 percent supplement. Quaife says the heavier hogs should not get more than 50 percent oats, along with 45 per cent corn and 5 percent supplement.

When oats are fed in large quantities they should be ground to medium fineness. A constant supply of fresh drinking water should be closed to the feed when oats are self-fed.

Oats make up the entire ration of the growing pig, a part of the ration should be dry self-fed and additional amounts should be soaked and fed as a wet mash. The oats should be soaked for 12 hours before feeding.

MOST BARN FIRES OCCUR IN AUGUST

Protect With Lighting Rods And Make Sure They're In Good Shape

Unless steps are taken to prevent it, much of the valuable hay and grain going into the barns this month is destined to be destroyed by fire, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

Statistics show that August is the peak month for farm fires, with one-third of all Iowa barn fires caused by lightning striking unrodded barns. Beaty says that from 50 to 100 barns burn annually as a result of lightning, with an annual loss of more than $1000,000.

Rods Record

In protecting barns against lightning, Beaty says lightning rods are the best answer provided so far. Their value is indicated by the fact that 28 percent of the fires on unrodded buildings are caused by lightning while the loss with rodded barns is less than 4 percent.

Of course, the rods must be maintained in proper working order to be effective. In many instances, Beaty says, the rods are so defective that they actually are a hazard instead of a safegurd.

Protect Ground Cable

To make sure the rods are offering the protection needed, Beaty suggests checking the entire system to make sure there are no broken connections, ground rods or damaged lightning terminals. To prevent damage in the future, he advises setting a post alongside the ground cable so that a wagon or animal can't readly damage the rod where it enters the ground.

FOLLOW THESE RULES TO PREVENT SOFT PICKLES

It may be the fault of the cucumber that your pickles aren't perfect but chances are you waited too long before pickling them. Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist at Iowa State College, says a delay of more than 24 hours after picking cucumbers is the reason for many a "hollow pickle."

And according to Miss Graham, soft pickles are due to bacterial spoilage. You can keep bacteria from growing by adding more salt to the brine solution during curing or by increasing the amount of vinegar. The vinegar should be a pure apple cider vinegar. And watch particularly that pickles aren't over-cooked in the vinegar. This may cause soft pickles, too, she warns.

Another "pickle problem" that of fading, also begins with a poor cucumber. But even a good cucumber will be a faded or dull colored pickle if it's had too little curing.

Prevention, Miss Graham says, consists, first, of selecting good quality cucumbers. Secondly, use the correct concentration of brine. She recommends 1 cup salt to a gallon of water. Leave the pickles in the brine until the bubbles disappear. Or break apart to see if it has become dark and clear throughout. She points out, however, that some darkening of the pickles may be caused by iron present in the water.

Pickles, usually fruit pickles, will not shrivel if they're placed in a weak salt, sugar, or vinegar solution at first, then gradually increase the strength of the solution. Or bring the product to a slow boil, boil quickly, cool and allow to stand several hours or overnight in the syrup to plump.

$6,000 IN LIVESTOCK PRIZES AT NORTH IOWA FAIR

Approximately $6,000 in livestock prizes, a top-notch stage show, 2 days of auto racing, a rodeo, a horse show and harness racing are expected to add up to the biggest North Iowa fair ever when Mason City revives its prewar district exposition, August 30 to September 3.

Emphasis is definitely on district competition in the livestock events, including the junior shows, judging from the premium list just released by Secretary Harold Palmer.

In the junior division the district premium list adds to more than $2,200, and the county to approximately $1,400. The open class livestock premiums include more than $1,000 for the beef shows approximately $750 each for dairy cattle and swine and $360 for sheep.

District special premiums for junior livestock judging and demonstration total more than $1,100 in addition to the livestock money. Premiums for the poultry, agriculture, horticulture, pantry stores, dairy products, textiles, schools and women's projects will add another $1,000 in the open classes.

Entertainment definitely is back on a prewar basis at the district fair with Barnes-Carruthers musical extravaganza booked for Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings before the grandstand. The revue plays in the South Dakota state fair immediately after the Mason City dates and then moves to the A-1 Canadian circuit.

The Saturday and Labor day auto races will be National Speedway attractions featuring Emory Collins and other great stars of the dirt tracks.

The harness races will be held Sunday afternoon and the horse show Monday evening with Clyde Miller's rodeo finishing out the attractions Tuesday afternoon and evening.

On the midway the North Iowa Fair will present showdom's newest and brightest attraction, the Gem City Shows with over 50 rides, shows and concessions.

No admission charge will be made at the gate Friday, entry day, the grandstand charge Friday evening being the only one for that performance. Throughout the other 4 days the gate admission charge will be 25 cents. The gates open at 8:00 A. M. daily.

PLENTY OF MEAT NOW? BE READY FOR SHORTAGE

While heavy runs of cattle and hogs have been showing up on the nation's meat counters since the death of OPA, this "extra" supply won't last long, and the indication is that red meat will be extremely scarce for the next several months.

R. C. (Cap) Bently, Iowa State College market specialist, points out that much of the livestock coming to market since July 1 had been held by farmers who wanted to see what would happen to price ceilings.

"Now, instead of getting an even flow of livestock, many farmers have well cleaned up the accumulated backlog," Bently said. "We can expect that the bulk of the ready hogs have gone to market, and the same is true of finished cattle. Cattle and hogs left on farms are in strong hands, with farmers in no hurry to sell.

"If all the meat going into packer's coolers now is placed immediately in the butcher shops, there can't help but be a shortage later. Packers, however, have the storage space and may route part of their supplies to storage for release later."

The meat shortage will be acute until the grass-fed range cattle start moving to market and this year's spring pigs are sent on their way.

Keeping the grass short helps to control fleas on lawns. It sometimes is effective to saturate a burlap bag with kerosene and drag it over the grass.

Capital No Place For Hubby Hunters

Better Chance in Own Back Yard, Says Expert.

WASHINGTON. — Don't come to Washington, girls, if you want to get married.

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the district's Social Hygiene society, says you stand a better chance of finding those dreamed-of orange blossoms in your own backyard.

If you must leave home go where the men are—some industrial center such as Atlanta, Flint, Erie or Bridgeport, Conn., Everett advises.

"Washington may be the glamorous capital of the world, but it's slim matrimonial pickings for the girl from the four corners," he says.

He estimates there are about four marriageable women here for every marriageable man, making the nation's capital just about the poorest matrimonial mart in the country.

But because Miss Hopefuls persist in coming to Washington, Everett is continuously giving advice and lectures on how to land a man here.

Most of his clients are government girls. Some are sent to him by government agencies.

Others attend his lectures in government dormitory buildings, such as the vast Arlington Farms, or in other meeting halls.

The lantern-jawed Everett talks to them in a language as modern as jive. He draws on his experience as a former sociology professor at George Washington university and as a happily married husband who hasn't forgotten a wedding anniversary in 23 years.

He tells them that secretaries have the best chances of marrying. Next come the women in theatrical work, with stenographers third.

Good grooming goes farther and lasts longer than good looks, he advises. He stresses the importance of developing many interests.

Here, he explains, is a way to meet men: Go in for athletic games, take part in amateur theatricals, become a good dancer and vacation where there are some men to spare.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY PROVIDES NEW HOSPITAL BEDS

The American Legion Auxiliary, Gifford Olson Unit No. 256 of Garner, has just completed their campaign to secure funds for the purchase of several new regular portable hospital beds with matteresses. These new portable hospital beds with mattresses have been ordered and as soon as they arrive they will be housed in the American Legion Auxiliary meeting room at Garner, Britt, Kanawha, and Klemme and will be readily available for temporary use in homes of the residents of Garner, Ventura, Clear Lake, Britt, Wesly, Woden, Corwith, Crystal Lake, Hayfield, Kanawha, Miller, Klemme, Goodell, Thornton, Meservey, and the surrounding rural areas at all times without charge, except for transportation.

Mrs. E. H. Phillips, Unit President of the sponsoring organization stated that their subscription campaign for this year is completed. Officials and members of the Garner American Legion Auxiliary wish to express their thanks to the many residents who subscribed to magazines during their recent subscription campaign for purchase of these hospital beds with mattresses.

War on Cancer Gets New Urge

German Secret Microscope Offers Another Attack On Dread Disease.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Hopes of a new attack on cancer are given Veterans' administration doctors in the discovery of a 10-year-old Nazi secret in bomb-wrecked laboratories in Jena, Germany, says the United Press.

The secret was a little-known German "phase" microscope that was found among the ruins by an American army colonel, Arthur T. Brice.

Brice, former V.A. medical technical expert, brought the microscope back to this country along with motion-picture films of cell growth taken through the instrument.

V.A. officials here explained that the motion picture was significant because it showed the mysterious processes of the microscopic world of living cells "better than ever before" in medical history.

The instrument gives scientists their first clear view of how living cells subdivide and multiply.

Cells Multiply.

The chief characteristic of cancer cells is their unbridled multiplication, officials explained. The cells themselves and their pattern, or life, are different from normal body cells as far as anyone yet has been able to prove, they said.

If some fundamental difference could be proven between the life processes of cancer cells and other cells, they said, "a new method of attack on cancer might eventually result."

The living substance that Colonel Brice presented in motion pictures consisted of the sperm cells of a grasshopper. Their life was recorded on 16 mm. film.

Time was telescoped so that the evolution of 24 hours was flashed on the screen in a matter of minutes.

The "phase microscope" involves the complicated field of light waves.

Overlaps Light Rays.

The instrument overlaps light waves to defeat transparency without in any way interfering with the normal aspects of the object viewed.

It looks like an ordinary microscope except that between the light bulb and the stage on which the specimens are placed there is inserted an arrangement of discs and slits that overlaps the light rays.

Before the Nazi instrument was uncovered scientists had been able to study cells microscopically only by employing color to overcome transparency.

But this stain often killed the cell and always left a question of how much it affected their normal processes, officials explained.

Invade Dragon Valley To Find Ancient Lizards

WASHINGTON. — What ho, you reluctant dragon! The Smithsonian institution is looking for a couple of the 120-million-year-old fossilized type.

Named "polyglyphanadons," these lizards were chums of the last of the dinosaurs. The Smithsonian adds conservatively "they were probably quite gruesome in appearance."

The Smithsonian says that while the lizards were among the most ancient members of the lizard family in North America, the fossil bones already found are so well-preserved that it is possible "to get a fair appearance of the animals in life."

After digging around in Dragon valley, Dr. Gazin plans further explorations for fossil remains of other animals in the Bridger basin of Wyoming.

Nature Helps to Avert Civil War in Iran

TEHRAN, IRAN. — Civil war in Iran may have been delayed or averted by unfavorable flying weather which blocked the departure of the Azerbaijan "premier" from Tehran recently, central government officials said.

They credited the delay as paving the way for a resumption of negotiations.

The "premier," Jafar Pishevari, agreed to reopen negotiations on the return of the self-proclaimed independent province of Azerbaijan to the central government's jurisdiction, according to a central government translator.

The Iranian army has been on the alert for the last few days and reinforcements have moved to certain frontier stations.

British Silk Industry Is in Serious Position

SCARBOROUGH. — Britain's silk industry is in a "serious position," L. Gaskell, a representative of the National Silk Workers association, said.

Gaskell told the General Federation of Trade Unions that British silk manufacturers were refusing "thousands of pounds" worth of orders from North American and South American importers because of restrictions and taxes.

SPIDER MITES ARE KILLING EVERGREENS

Damage All Types of Trees This Year; Control With Spray or Dust

Spider mites are reported to be doing unusually heavy damage to all types of evergreens in Iowa this summer, with entire windbreaks being threatened in some sections, says Richard Campbell, Iowa State College forester.

The appearance of webbing on the terminal growth usually is the first sign of the spider mite's presence. If this growth is examined in the sun, small yellowish mites can be seen swarming over the webs and needles. Later the needles start turning brown, a condition which may spread over the whole tree causing it to die.

Can Use Water

For controlling mite damage, Harold Gunderson, Iowa State entomologist, recommends to spray them. A nicotine sulfate solution, consisting of 1 to 2 pints of nicotine sulfate mixed with 50 gallons of water in which 2 pounds of laundry soap have been dissolved, will give satisfactory results. Another effective spray can be made by mixing 6 pounds of wetable sulfer with 50 gallons of water.

Those who live in town where water pressure is sufficiently high often can get rid of the mites by hosing down the trees with a stream of water strong enough to knock the mites off. In the case of small trees, weekly dustings of sulfur will give satisfactory control.

Repeat Sprays

If sprays are used, they should be repeated every 5 to 7 days as long as the mites remain, Gunderson says. As many as five sprays may be required, although frequently two will do the job.

Evergreen branches which appear to have been killed this summer should not be cut out until next year, because they may recover. Where trees have weakened by mite damage, an application of superphosphate may help. From 1 to 10 pounds should be put on the ground and soaked thoroughly. Any fertilizer containing nitrogen should be used.

ELMER TWITCHELL ON RESTAURANTS

Either the wrong men are operating too many lunchrooms and restaurants in this country or else they're just too scared to speak to the help about things.

—*—

"I do my share of eating in middle class eating places," said Elmer Twitchell today, "and it is my conviction that most of the operators are glorified dog-wagon men. I am no chef myself but I could get up better dinners with an old broom and a bucket of switch-grease."

—*—

Elmer was quite sore. "What's become of the old-fashioned restaurant proprietor who wanted things right? Whatever happened to the chef who had pride in his work? Where is the old-fashioned bartender who knew how to mix a drink right?" he demanded.

—*—

"It's years since I have run across a proprietor who has a conscience, thinks it important to hold his trade and won't water the soup, cut down the portions more than necessary or feel upset if he discovers the potatoes have not been served cold.

—*—

"And I am not referring merely to the Grade B restaurant. Some of our best clubs are now employing cement mixers as chefs.

—*—

"I had a business man's lunch at a private club last week and I still can't figure if the manager and chef were former pig feeders or just a couple of boys who confuse human beings with seagulls."

—*—

Elmer wanted to be fair. "I admit it's hard to get foodstuffs," he concluded, "but it seems to me the boys should know what to do with it when they get it."

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:
"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."
Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:
"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."
So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize! Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Another familiar word from the Latin panis is pantry. Originally the word designated a place where bread is made or stored. Later, bread took on the extended meaning of "food in general," as "our daily bread; to quarrel with one's bread and butter (means of livelihood); to break bread with a friend (companion)." Thus, pantry came to have its present meaning: a room, closet, or shelf where foodstuffs or dishes or glassware are kept.

Strangely enough, the original meaning of the Anglo-Saxon word bread meant "a bit, morsel, or sop of any food." During the Norman occupation, most food words in English were replaced by words of French origin, as, soup, stew, fricassee, beef, pork, mutton, veal, venison, poultry, etc. But the French word for bread, "pain," somehow was not accepted by the English, possibly because their Anglo-Saxon tongues could not manage the French pronunciation pa(n), which has the flat "a" and the nasal sound

JESUS AND HOME RELATIONSHIPS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12, Mark 7:9-13; Luke 2 51, 52, Ephesians 6 1-4
MEMORY SELECTION—Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.

Home—that place so dear to the heart of each one of us—is even more precious in the sight of God. He is concerned about our homes and those who live in them.

Right relationship between children and parents have much to do with the peace and prosperity of a community and a nation. Experience has demonstrated that to be true, but even more basic is the fact that it is in accord with the promise of God.

One of the sad breakdowns in modern life is that of proper honor and obedience to parents by children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The problem of juvenile delinquency, or perhaps we should say more correctly, parental delinquency, is right on our doorsteps now. That means that the need for our lesson is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which we all receive its truth.

I. The Responsibility Stated (Exod. 20:12).

"Honor thy father and thy mother"—how good, and substantial, and right those words sound.

We are told by Paul that this is the "first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:1-3). The Lord was not making a bargain with man, or seeking to draw out obedience by a prize, but there is obviously a great reward in the observing of this commandment.

Then too as the children of God (if we are such) through Jesus Christ, the first and most important consideration to come before us is, What is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relationship between parents and children? His words are plain: we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience and affection.

But men do not wish to follow God's direction, so we see next

II. The Responsibility Evaded (Mark 7:9-13).

Such an important commandment naturally held a high place in the thinking of the community. To violate it involved a measure of shame which men sought to avoid. So the Jews of Christ's day devised a scheme which made it possible for a man to appear to be very religious even as he deprived his parents of the honor and help to which they were entitled by the law of God.

The man who did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could entirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban"; that is, dedicated by a vow to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing, and yet he could keep it and use it for himself.

Thus do men make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13) through their traditions. The method differs but the spirit persists even in our day.

Jesus made short work of such trickery and evasion. He declared their man-made creeds and traditions to be simply a means of making the command of God of none effect. Once more he condemns that formal religious observance which serves as a cloak for sin and selfishness.

III. The Responsibility Fulfilled (Luke 2:51-52; Eph. 6:1-4).

The manner in which children should be obedient to their parents and honor them in the home is beautifully exemplified in the life of our Lord, living as a boy in Nazareth.

In the home the growing youth finds the best place for normal, well-rounded development (v. 52). There is no substitute for the home.

The words of the Holy Spirit through Paul in Ephesians 6:1-4 stress the same truth and enlarge upon it.

This matter of honoring and obeying parents "is right," says Paul. It is the Lord's way, but it is also that which commends itself to every right-thinking person.

There is tremendously important truth on the other side of the picture. Parents are not to provoke their children to anger, to disrespect or disobedience.

May God help us who are parents that we may take to heart this part of our lesson. Our children are our most valuable possession.

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THERE are many details or important items in sport that are beyond all human understanding. And this doesn't only mean horses that run last in one race and then win the next time out. It doesn't mean a Billy Conn, who was completely fearless in his first Louis meeting, who had been completely fearless through his entire ring career, who was known as dead game and yet appeared to be in terror in the recent heavyweight title fiasco.

C. Keller

Suppose we take up the case of the New York Yankees. I happened to be in the immediate vicinity of the Yankees, the Red Sox and the Tigers for several weeks in Florida this spring.

Everyone figured, and this included Joe McCarthy, Bill Dickey and Larry MacPhail, that the one possible weak spot in the Yankee lineup should be their pitching. Spud Chandler—and then who did they have? Their defensive fielding was an established fact. This part couldn't miss.

What about the Yankee offense? Now you must admit that Joe McCarthy, Larry MacPhail and Bill Dickey are three rather smart operators as far as baseball is concerned. Offense? With Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Keller, Tommy Henrich, Snuffy Stirnweiss, Joe Gordon, Nick Etten, Phil Rizzuto, Johnny Lindell, Bill Johnson, Aaron Robinson, Bill Dickey—here was the last and least worry. The Yankees had their full share of fielding defense. But above all they had something more important—their attack—their offense—their power at the plate.

McCarthy, MacPhail and Dickey all admitted this. Nothing to worry about in the way of a run-making attack. Stirnweiss had led the American league at bat a year ago—.309. DiMaggio was a normal .340 hitter. Etten, Gordon and Henrich were at least .285 hitters. Keller was a .300 hitter. Rizzuto had been a .310 hitter. The team average should have been around .280 or .285.

Mystery of the Yankees

So what happens? Nearing the end of July the team batting average of the Yankees is under .238. They are far below the Athletics and the White Sox. Outside of Charlie Keller they stand with a flock of .233 hitters, taken as an average. Yet most of these players were once dangerous each time they moved to the plate. They were batters to be feared. Today almost any one with a right or a left arm still hanging on can stop them cold.

What has happened to the old-fashioned Yankee attack? Practically every member of the squad is a friend of mine. It isn't a matter of dissipation or lack of determination. They are giving the game all they have.

On a general average they are smart, intelligent, hustling ball players. They feel lower than MacPhail or Bill Dickey feel. Their reputations, which means their living, is at stake. But they can't hit.

You can understand one or two men moving into a batting slump. How can anyone explain practically an entire team taking the soapy chute at bat? There is no longer any question but that the tropical trip to Panama took a heavy toll. Those who went to Panama reported to St. Petersburg early in March in July condition. They were too far ahead of any training schedule. I don't believe this mistake will ever be repeated. Anyway it is only a part of the answer. It can't explain the entire story.

When 11 ball players, who should range somewhere between .280 and .340, drop below .240—experienced, veteran stars who have been through the fire before—you wade right up to your neck in what is technically known as a quandary—whatever a quandary is—trying to find the answer.

Look at the Red Sox!

You can't blame this on war years because in the same spring and summer interim, the Red Sox have placed five hitters among the first ten. The Yankees have had only one hitter—Charlie Keller—among the first 10.

The Yankees have been down slightly lower than the White Sox were in 1906, when they were known as the "Hitless Wonders." But the "Hitless Wonders" had Ed Walsh, Nick Altrock and Doc White who were pitching four and five-hit games.

If any three of the 11 Yankee hitters expected to bat from .280 to .340 had only moved up in the .280 class, many a ball game, now lost, could have been saved. This amazing reversal of form has the usually sane-and able Bill Dickey baffled.

Bill, being a veteran who has always used his head, can understand two or three members of a team in a three-months slump. But as he shakes his Arkansas head, he can't quite understand 10 or 11 from one squad forgetting what the old ash furniture means, and how it should be used.

White Wash

Ever since you saw Lana Turner's sizzling white wardrobe in "The Postman Always Rings Twice" you've been going around like a sleigh ride in July. And nothing could be more swoonsome with your coat of tan. After all, what's Lana got that you haven't got? Sorry, we can't give you the answer in this limited space.

Gild the Lily—Make yourself a pure white cotton dirndl. Wear it with a white off-shoulder peasant blouse. Cinch your waistline with a gold kid belt. Add a few bulky fake gold bracelets and you're all that glitters.

White Heat — Top your white shorts with a white T shirt, swim in an all-white midriff suit with side lacings; wrap yourself in a short white terry cloth beach coat. This summer, if it's White; it's Right.

High Lights—Even your accessories have gone White. You're piling white flowers in your hair; you're fastening your up-do with white combs and "stick" barrettes; your ballet slippers are as White as they're Light.

Flicker Fashions — You're even knitting yourself fuzzy white angora "bra" tops, like the one Ginger Rogers wore in "Heartbeat." Groovie as a movie—but 'finitely!

Play the Game.

It's a new one and it's called "Stinky Pinky." We haven't time to describe it in detail, so let's just start to play. If you don't get the drift, we'll snow again.

We ask, "What is a capable fur?"

You answer, "Able Sable." (See, it has to rhyme!)

We ask, "What is an experienced vegetable?"

You answer (if you're as smart as we think you are)—"A green bean."

We ask, "What is Sad Footwear?"

You answer (if you're not tired of the whole thing)—"Blue Shoes."

When you think of some other Stinky Pinkys please let us know.

How to Outbluff a VICIOUS DOG at night!

...as recommended by Lt. Comdr. Willy Necker, Wheeling, Ill.—noted dog trainer and judge at dog shows...and wartime head of U. S. Coast Guard War Dog Training.

1 The fact that 999 dogs out of a thousand are friendly, safe and lovable doesn't alter the fact that occasionally—through *mis*treatment, neglect or disease—a dog may turn vicious.

2 Such animals are dangerous. Especially at night! If cornered outdoors, at night, turn on your "Eveready" flashlight! Shine it directly at the dog's eyes, to blind and perhaps bewilder him. He may leap at the light, however; so don't hold it in front of you. Hold it at arm's length to the side. Most important...

3 Keep still. It's instinctive with most animals to attack anything that runs away or moves aggressively. If the dog refrains from attacking for a few seconds, you have probably won—but, if not, protect your throat. Use flashlight as club. Shout! If bitten, see a doctor as soon as possible.

4 For bright light, white light, effective light—insist on "Eveready" batteries. Your dealer now has them. Ask for them by name. For "Eveready" batteries have no equals—that's why they're the largest-selling flashlight batteries in the world. Yet their extra light, extra life, cost you nothing extra!

Some gardeners think they should leave onions in the garden until the tops are dead. Actually, onions may as well be pulled when most of the green tops have fallen over. Onions are mature at this stage, and they may not store well when left in the ground too long after they are mature. This is especially true if the soil is moist.

The onions should be pulled and, if the weather is fair, allowed to dry in the garden a day or so. They may be tied in bunches and hung in a well-ventilated room. If you wish, you may cut the tops off to within 1½ inches of the bulb, then spread them out in a corn crib.

Gardeners growing late potatoes that show green foliage should keep dusting or spraying every week or 10 days to control insects and increase yields. DDT is the up-to-date poison to use on potatoes. Three percent DDT in sulfur controls two most difficult garden insects, the tiny black flea beetles and green leaf hoppers. In addition, the less serious insects that sometimes bother potatoes are controlled.

Many gardeners believe their potatoes have the blight when it is really the potato leaf hopper. The leaf hopper could probably be found working underneath potato leaves in every garden in Iowa. These sucking insects cause the leaves to turn brown earlier than normal.

Potatoes should be dug shortly after most of the plants have lost their green color. There will be no foliage to keep the soil cool unless there are weeds. Vitamin content of the potatoes can be reduced in hot soil, and many potatoes can be lost by rotting if the soil is wet. Potatoes will stay in good condition in the soil, however, if weeds shade the ground and the soil stays dry.

Freshly dug potatoes must not be left to dry in the hot sun. They will sunscald easily. In the home garden, it is desirable to dig potatoes in the evening. Choose a cloudy day for digging and drying. To avoid possible heating, do not store potatoes in large piles.

On the farm, the corncrib is a good place to spread potatoes out. A light covering of straw should be spread over them. During summer and early fall, give potatoes a dry, cool place.

Unused cistern offer good possibilities for storing vegetables, fruits and other products. Investigating such cisterns might show that with a few changes you could have an excellent home storage. If the cistern is close to the house, a passageway can be made into the cistern through the basement wall. It is well to have a ventilator at the highest point in the cistern. This vent must be plugged up in dead winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lemke left today, Wednesday, on an extended auto trip to the northwest, west coast and will return home via. the south. They expect to visit many points of interest and will be gone for about three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lemke and children, Sharon and Larry of Des Moines; and Mr. and and Mrs. Clarence Lemke and daughter Pamela were entertained to a 7:00 o'clock dinner at the Walter Rosendale home Friday evening.

Mrs. Ernest Gerardi and daughter, Gracka Maria, of Wichita, Kansas, came last Wednesday for a visit at the parental Concrad Quandt home for several weeks. Mrs. Gerardi will take charge of the Quandt Cafe while Mr. and Mrs. Quandt are taking their vacation in the north.

Miss Norma Jean Brouwer, of Sheffield, a neice of Mrs. Harvey Barz came Thursday evening to assist with housework at the Barz home while Mrs. Barz is recuperating from an operation. Miss Brouwer was called home again Saturday evening as her brother, Duane, 16 was hit by a car and was taken to the Iowa City hospital to have a fractured knee cap taken care of. Reports are that he may return to the Hampton hospital in a few days as the operation was sucessful.

Some gardeners think they should leave onions in the garden until the tops are dead. Actually, onions may as well be pulled when most of the green tops have fallen over. Onions are mature at this stage, and they may not store well when left in the ground too long after they are mature. This is especially true if the soil is moist.

The onions should be pulled and, if the weather is fair, allowed to dry in the garden a day or so. They may be tied in bunches and hung in a well-ventilated room. If you wish, you may cut the tops off to within 1½ inches of the bulb, then spread them out in a corn crib.

Gardeners growing late potatoes that show green foliage should keep dusting or spraying every week or 10 days to control insects and increase yields. DDT is the up-to-date poison to use on potatoes. Three percent DDT in sulfur controls two most difficult garden insects, the tiny black flea beetles and green leaf hoppers. In addition, the less serious insects that sometimes bother potatoes are controlled.

Many gardeners believe their potatoes have the blight when it is really the potato leaf hopper. The leaf hopper could probably be found working underneath potato leaves in every garden in Iowa. These sucking insects cause the leaves to turn brown earlier than normal.

Potatoes should be dug shortly after most of the plants have lost their green color. There will be no foliage to keep the soil cool unless there are weeds. Vitamin content of the potatoes can be reduced in hot soil, and many potatoes can be lost by rotting if the soil is wet. Potatoes will stay in good condition in the soil, however, if weeds shade the ground and the soil stays dry.

Freshly dug potatoes must not be left to dry in the hot sun. They will sunscald easily. In the home garden, it is desirable to dig potatoes in the evening. Choose a cloudy day for digging and drying. To avoid possible heating, do not store potatoes in large piles.

On the farm, the corncrib is a good place to spread potatoes out. A light covering of straw should be spread over them. During summer and early fall, give potatoes a dry, cool place.

Unused cistern offer good possibilities for storing vegetables, fruits and other products. Investigating such cisterns might show that with a few changes you could have an excellent home storage. If the cistern is close to the house, a passageway can be made into the cistern through the basement wall. It is well to have a ventilator at the highest point in the cistern. This vent must be plugged up in dead winter.

OUTLINE CAMPAIGN FOR FLY CONTROL IN IOWA

Because flies are possible carries of infantile paralysis, as well as dysentery, typhoid, summer complain of infants and tuberculosis, a statewide move to halt the rapid increase of flies this summer was urged this week by Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist.

In mapping out a home fly-control campaign, Gunderson suggests these four steps:

1. Keep all garbage covered and emptied daily. This includes destroying all rotted or rotting fruit under trees or using a 10-percent DDT dust in areas where fruit has fallen and cannot be easily picked up.

2. Scatter thinly any straw, manure, grass clippings and weeds or put them into a compost pile and cover with tar paper.

3. Paint screens, screen doors and all ventrical surfaces in the home, such as drop cords and pull cords on window shades, with 5-percent DDT in oil. On farms, spray all buildings which house livestock with a solution of 2 pounds of 50-percent wettable DDT in 5 gallons of water.

4. Destroy flies by any other means available.

Rural pupils feel "at home" in the Klemme schools.

Lois Stille At State Meeting

KLEMME GIRL WAS PAGE AT STATE AUXILIARY CONVENTION

Lois Stille returned Monday morning from Des Moines where she spent several days acting as Page for the 8th District of the American Legion Auxiliary Convention.

This was the largest Convention the Auxiliary has held, there being approximately nine hundred delegates present.

There were 11 pages and 11 associate pages present at each session whose duty it was to advance the colors after which each girl took charge of her respective District.

On Wednesday noon the Chairman of the pages entertained all the girls to a luncheon at Younkers Tea room where they were presented with several gifts from the various business establishments of Des Moines.

On Thursday evening they were guests at the annual banquet held in the Ballroom of the Fort Des-Moines Hotel.

At the close of the sessions on Friday each girl was presented with a beautiful necklace bearing the American Legion Auxiliary emblem.

Mrs, Martin Barz and Mrs. Lester Stille were the delegates present from the Klemme Unit.

WASTE FATS ARE GREATLY NEEDED

"Hancock county housewives can contribute to easing the current shortage of fats and oils by saving every available ounce of waste fats," said Alfred V. Josten, Chairman of Hancock County AAA Committee.

According to Mr. Josten, waste fats are still vitally needed both for domestic purpose and to make possible the continued shipment of needed food for famine relief in foreign countries. Thirteen per cent of the soap actually delivered to the United States civilians last year was made from waste fats. At the present time, some manufacturers are unable to furnish retail stores with any soap and householders needs are being supplied from dwindling stocks still on hand. Shortage for industrial users are equally critical.

Mr. Josten stated that every ounce of waste fats should be saved and sold at the most convenient fat collection point. Also, he said that any difficulty experienced by housewives in disposing of waste fats or by collectors in securing pickups should be brought to attention of the Hancock County AAA office.

MARION, CLINTON AND BENTON OATS RESIST BLIGHT

Because Marion oats are resistant to the new blight disease, farmers who are raising these oats are urged to save their crop for seed next year. The new varieties of Clinton and Benton also are resistant to the disease, but there is only a small amount of this seed available for planting next year. Farmers who need oats for feeding will find it more provitable to buy oats of the other varieties.

Eternal 'No' Is Typical of Russians

Soviet Assistance Termed America's 'Great Mistake'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

An army officer, back from a long tour of duty in Germany, called on me the other day. He was pretty grim about the situation in Europe and into every few minutes of his conversation crept the word "Russia."

"I like to talk about America's great mistake," he said. "Germany is supposed to have lost the war by making mistakes; by attacking Russia, by not invading England after Dunkirk, by this and by that. I contend that America's great mistake was not staying out of Europe until Germany had licked Russia. I mean staying out in every way. Because without American supplies Russia would have been beaten."

I reminded him of the fact that America wanted a short war, that we had opposed Churchill's plan for attacking Europe through the Balkans and thereby obtaining possession of the trouble-making strip of territory which the Russians now dominate from the northern border of Greece up through Berlin. We wanted to shorten the war by leaving the eastern front to Russia while the western allies smashed the German power entrenched in France, the Low Countries and Italy. Thus, millions of American lives would be (and were) saved.

Churchill Foresaw Balkan Influence

Churchill probably foresaw the difficulties which would arise with a Russia able to expand her influence up to the fringes of western Europe. Roosevelt believed that the war must be won quickly and he thought that by giving the Russians everything they asked for in the way of military support their suspicions would be removed and that they would play ball with the Allies in the peace and after. He believed that Stalin needed peace so badly that he would come around.

General Eisenhower himself didn't achieve any more of a realistic viewpoint in regard to Russia than Roosevelt did—if we are to believe his somewhat verbose Boswell, Mr. Butcher, in his 900-page diary. Butcher writes:

"Ike said he felt that . . . the more contact we have with the Russians the more they will understand us and the greater will be their cooperation. The Russians are blunt and forthright in their dealings and any evasiveness arouses their suspicions. It should be possible to work with Russia if we follow the same pattern of friendly co-operation that has resulted in the great accord of allied unity. . . ."

Roosevelt and the generals were proved right when they said Stalin needed peace. But they were wrong when they thought he would come around. The state department understands the situation now and, as the recently concluded meeting of the foreign ministers demonstrates, appeasement has been over for some time. We know Russia can't fight and doesn't want to. Russia knows we can't fight whether we want to or not. She is acting accordingly and according to historical precedent.

Tragic History Inspires 'No-Ism'

But anyone who studies Russian history knows that the eternal "no" which seems about the only answer the Russian statesmen are allowed to make, comes from something far deeper than mere stubbornness.

This "no-ism" is only one of the many typical characteristics which the Soviets have revealed. It has nothing to do with the fact that they believe in a theory of political economy which is opposed to our own. It is a deeply implanted quality which is Russian rather than merely Soviet or Communist.

And so when you read "Soviet Russia evoked the veto for the sixth time in security council history. . ." (maybe the 16th time by the time you read this) . . . remember it's an old Kalmuck custom. Mother Russia has taught her children from the days of the invasion of Ghengis Khan, that when a stranger beckons, the only answer is "no, no, a thousand times no!" In fact, a Russian seldom says "no" once—it is always "net, net, net!"

Of course, Ghengis Khan didn't take "no" for an answer. Which is about the course the rest of the world can follow—if it can. Let's hope the process won't be as rugged.

OPA Battle Has Political Side

Whatever one may think of the intricacy of the economic theory behind the OPA, its political implications are a thousandfold more difficult to assess.

As congress battled over the tattered remains of the price control law, many a congressman who thoroughly detested the whole set-up began to worry a little as to what might happen back home if he were held partially responsible for wrecking the agency.

It was all right for the representatives of farm communities. The farmer would reap the reward of higher prices first. By the time he felt the effect of higher prices on the things he had to buy, OPA probably would be forgotten. But congressmen from industrial centers were in quite a different position. These communities are heard from the moment the missus encounters a markup at the corner grocery. That is the reason that a number of Republicans supported the administration stand on OPA. If the Republican party is to capture the house of representatives next November, it will have to pick up votes in the cities.

Congress Scans Types of Closing

It took some time for congress to make up its mind whether it would adjourn "sine die" (without date set for reconvening), as they usually do when a session comes to an end, or whether they would "recess." When congress merely recesses it can reassemble without a special proclamation by the President.

When the President calls congress into session he has to issue a proclamation. That's all the Constitution demands. He doesn't have to deliver it. Out of courtesy, however, the White House always telegraphs the president of the senate and the speaker of the house.

But the proclamation is not good unless the Great Seal of the United States is affixed thereunto. Nobody can do that but the secretary of state, for he is the keeper of the seal. So along with the proclamation, the President has to issue a warrant, ordering the secretary of state to do the affixing.

I might say that the secretary of state usually delegates this task, which reminds me of a story, which, I believe, never has been printed. When Secretary of State Hull had been in office 12 years, there was a little outburst of congratulations. President Roosevelt, as they were talking privately, remarked: "Cordell, you are the sole guardian of the great seal, as you know." He paused, and Mr. Hull replied: "Yes, Mr. President." Then the President, looking him straight in the eye, asked: "Where is it?"

It was Hull's turn to pause. "I don't know," he admitted, "I've never seen it."

Barbers to Boost Vocabulary Too

It is probably fitting that along with the dollar haircut which has made its appearance in metropolitan barber-shops, we may find the barber presenting us four-dollar words. Barbers long have been known for the quality of their verbal output and in some cases for the quality as well. Now they may have a chance really to reach the heights, for the leader of a barber's union has offered to "enlist the aid of 10,000 barbers" in a campaign to get some of the facts of atomic life across to the customer.

Officials of the airlines have instructed their stewardesses to translate, for curious passengers, the name "Grand Teton," tall peaks in Idaho, as "Sweater Girl Mountains." That's what Business Week tells me.

NEWS REVIEW

Atom Bomb Blast Sinks Battleship and Carrier

CROSSROADS:

Heavy Damage

Although accompanied by none of the fanfare of the first surface test, the underwater explosion of the atomic bomb in Bikini lagoon produced equally startling results, with the one A-charge sinking no less than ten ships and heavily damaging six others.

Hours after the blast, the water of Bikini lagoon remained too hot from radioactivity set off by the bomb to permit close inspection of the damage. Clouds along a 30-mile front became contaminated with atomic particles and naval observers disclosed that rain from the mass could be deadly.

A massive column of water, hurtling more than a mile into the Pacific sky, and a thick sheet of spray and steam that rose to 9,000 feet, followed the detonation of the bomb, which was touched off by radio from beneath a medium landing ship.

Veteran of two world wars, the 21,000-ton battleship Arkansas sank within five minutes of the blast, and the 33,000-ton aircraft carrier Saratoga also went down. The battleship New York, the Jap dreadnaught Nagato and the destroyer Hughes and transport Fallon were severely crippled by the charge.

ATOMIC CONTROL:

Russ Rejection

Even as Bikini reverberated with the explosion of the second atomic bomb test in the Pacific, Russia turned thumbs down on the U. S. proposal for international control of the atomic energy.

Addressing a closed meeting of the United Nations atomic energy committee on controls in New York, Soviet Representative Gromyko asserted that the U. S. suggestion that the veto be eliminated in atomic regulation could not be accepted by Russia because it would tend to destroy the principle of unanimity among the Big Five in preserving postwar peace.

Gromyko also rapped the proposal for establishing an independent agency for the control of atomic energy, declaring that the U.N. security council consisting of the Big Five as permanent members possessed both the power and means to deal with the problem.

OPA:

Back in Business

No sooner had President Truman signed the compromise OPA bill extending the agency until June 30, 1947, than it swung into action to stabilize the national economy, which strained with the removal of controls.

Passed after the President had vetoed an earlier bill, the compromise measure contained many provisions designed to assure both producers and distributors of adequate working margins. However, it modified the original Taft amendment, which Mr. Truman charged would allow manufacturers unwarranted profits, by setting up ceilings based on 1940 prices plus increased costs.

PALESTINE:

Hit Terrorism

Hitting at the use of violence designed to alter Britain's position in the ticklish problem of setting up a Jewish homeland in Arab-dominated Holy Land, the Labor government released a white paper in London purporting to show that prominent leaders of the Jewish agency for Palestine had unified underground organizations for a reign of terror.

Basing its contentions on intercepted messages between high agency officials in London and Jerusalem, the government said that the first co-ordinated outbreak of violence closely followed a communication revealing that the three main underground groups had been linked together for joint action.

UNDAUNTED VOYAGER . . . Unwanted by his Australian mother, 2-year-old Daniel Joseph Sprague Jr. traveled alone to San Francisco on the S. S. Monterey with 688 other children and war brides. Aboard the ship, the blond, wide-eyed little boy was "adopted" temporarily by Mrs. Edna Mayerhofer, 22, who will join her husband in Brooklyn, N. Y.

ASTRONOMICAL FIGURES

War Spending Hits High Peak

Further evidence that wartime spending soared to astronomical peaks is contained in a treasury department report disclosing that nearly a trillion dollars was spent in this country during the six defense and war years. Figures computed by treasury analysts show that the exact amount spent through the calendar years 1940 to 1945 was 987 billion dollars.

The burden of arming and fighting costs accounted for unprecedented spending by the federal government, with a total outlay of 365 billion dollars, or about three-eighths of the total.

Expenditures of state and local governments, cities and counties amounted to about 50 billion dollars. The remaining 572 billion dollars was accounted for by spending of individuals and corporations, the figure including 517 billion dollars for consumers' goods and services and 55 billion dollars for production equipment.

The federal government was the only unit which went deep into the hole, the treasury report reveals. While spending 365 billion dollars, the federal government took in only 156 billion dollars in taxes, leaving a deficit of 209 billion dollars.

State and local governments took in 58 billion dollars in taxes, winding up about 8 billion dollars ahead as their expenditures amounted to only 50 billion dollars.

Individuals and corporations fared best, with a profit of 201 billion dollars. Their income after taxes were paid totaled 773 billion dollars while their other expenditures were reported as 572 billion dollars.

The 8 billion dollar surplus accumulated by state and local governments and the 201 billion dollar surplus piled up by individuals and corporations exactly equalled the federal deficit of 209 billion dollars.

That is not a coincidence, according to the treasury analysts, who insist that "total spendings and total income really are the same figure—they are the head and tail of a coin." In other words, one man's expenditure is another man's income.

These figures, the treasury declares, explain the origin of the enormous federal debt. The federal government was required to borrow to pay the excess of its spending over its income. It still owes that money plus some extra borrowing and some prewar debt, amounting in all to more than 268 billion dollars.

GIRDS FOR PEACE

Spectacular Development of AAF Recalled at Anniversary

Developed from a three-man division without an airplane in 1907 into a destructive force unparalleled in history, army air forces celebrated its 39th anniversary August 1 with a new watchword, "Air Power Is Peace Power."

At its wartime peak in March, 1944, army air forces had grown to 2,383,000 officers and men, 64,591 planes, including 41,848 combat planes which flew 108,015,909 hours during four years of war and dropped more than 2,000,000 tons of bombs in crushing the Axis war machine. But the big planes of World War II are on their way out of the air picture and the AAF rapidly is converting to jet-propelled aircraft to defend the security of America.

Guard Against War.

"Americas best insurance against a future war is an adequate alert air force," Commanding General Carl Spaatz said, in calling on the nearly 2,000,000 veterans of air actions all over the world and the 400,000 air force men to observe the anniversary occasion.

Some interesting and little known facts about army air forces are that:

Every airplane used in Europe prior to V-E Day was designed in this country before Pearl Harbor. From 1903 to 1940 the U. S. built only 40,000 planes but from 1940 through V-J Day, 295,000 were constructed. For every soldier in the air force, there was a civilian working in an aircraft plant.

First Bomb in 1911.

AAF planes consumed 10,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline during the war. In all of 1944 not one aircraft was grounded for lack of fuel.

Total air power blitz of the AAF during the war included more than 2,000,000 tons of bombs and two atom bombs dropped and 459,750,000 bullets fired. First AAF bomb was heaved overboard by hand in 1911. It was an 18-pound "blockbuster."

The army's first airplane contracts specified that the flying machine had to be transportable on an army escort wagon to be pulled by two or four mules. They would have a difficult task with the AAF's new super-heavy bomber, the B-36, which has a wingspan almost twice the distance flown by the Wright Brothers at Kittyhawk, N. C.

Expand Rapidly.

On August 28, 1939, three days before Germany set off World War II by invading Poland, the AAF was regularly using 69 bases. Fifty months later in January, 1944, it had 1,400 bases, of which 800 were overseas. Almost 20,000,000 tons of AAF supplies were sent out of the country during the war—enough to fill a warehouse 75 feet wide with the front door in Washington, D. C., and the back door in Philadelphia.

New AAF developments now permit test pilots to check jet planes safely. The plane is put through its paces while the pilot stays on the ground. The secret is remote control and television. The U. S. spent more money developing radar than was spent on the atom bomb.

More than 42,000 WACs served in the AAF, 7,000 of whom were overseas in 21 different countries; 1,600 chaplains were on duty in the AAF at all times. Of the 282 Congressional Medals of Honor awarded during the war, 34 were won by members of the AAF.

Compare Records.

The World War I air force had 35 pilots, 1,087 enlisted men, 55 training planes, 7 tactical squadrons—with a balloon school at Fort Omaha, Neb. Eight World War I aces are credited with downing 10 or more enemy planes or balloons; 29 World War II aces shot down 18 or more planes, no balloons.

First round-the-world trip by an army plane took 174 days in 1924. It took an air transport command plane 151 hours in 1945. It's a small world, with the men and planes of the army air forces a strong bulwark in making it a world of peace and guarding America's future.

Planting Trees by Plane

The Oregon state forestry department will soon know whether or not trees can be planted successfully by plane. Two large tracts have already been seeded from the air. One is a 1,400-acre area in the great Tillamook burn. The other is an 800-acre site in Polk county. About 500 acres were planted with Douglas fir and Port Oxford cedar. The remaining area was planted with Douglas fir, Sitka spruce and Western hemlock. Regular checks will be made to determine germination.

tunate of states in transportation facilities. Steamboats ply the Mississippi and other rivers. Lake ships dock at Superior, Green Bay, Milwaukee, Racine and other points, and Great Lakes traffic is considerable. Fast, modern railroads speed across the state. Truck traffic from city to city, and from Wisconsin to the rest of the United States, is increasing steadily.

Lived 'Like Badgers.'

The pioneers found Wisconsin a vast wilderness. They cleared it, broke it, and built upon it. They dug deep into lead mines and often lived in holes in the ground—"like badgers," some said. (That is why it is often called the Badger State.) But the people of Wisconsin, for all their industry, always have loved to play, to enjoy life, and to find refreshment in the state's great playgrounds.

The northern half of Wisconsin is a great forest, smelling of pine pitch and brush fires. Rivers thunder over trap-rock ledges or flow quietly on clean sand beds. There are hidden ponds, many swamps and uncounted lakes. A third of the northern boundary juts out into Lake Superior, and the entire eastern length of the state is washed by the waters of Lake Michigan. In the southwest sprawls the coulee country, often steep and irregular, veined by streams and rivers, tributaries of the Mississippi. Apple orchards smother the ridges with their pink and white blossoms while the slopes are covered with sugar bush and abandoned gingseng beds.

Wisconsin has 8,500 counted lakes, 10,000 miles of trout streams, 500 miles of Great Lakes shoreline, innumerable rivers and springs. It has lakes for swimming, boating, fishing and all water sports—Lake Winnebago, Lake Geneva, and the lakes around Madison, to name a few. On the Great Lakes, trim sailing craft course out to the horizon, while outboards and racing boats split the water near the shores.

Jean Nicolet was the first white man known to have set foot on Wisconsin soil. He came to the Green Bay area in 1634 and visited the Winnebago Indians who lived along the shore (and whose descendants still live in Wisconsin).

Territory Organized.

In April, 1836, over 200 years after Nicolet's visit, the "Territory of Wiskonsan" was organized to include what is now Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and parts of the Dakotas and Illinois. The townsite of Madison, the capital, was surveyed and platted that year. Gradually, however, the territory shrunk in size after long and bitter boundary quarrels. To give Illinois an outlet on the Great Lakes, the boundary was moved northward and Chicago was lost. The northern peninsula, a region rich in copper and iron, was given to Michigan to replace territory taken from Michigan by Ohio. Other boundary adjustments followed as the drive for statehood was accelerated. On May 29, 1848, Wisconsin became a state.

The years following Wisconsin's admission as a state brought a great influx of German and Scandinavian immigrants. Population doubled and trebled each decade. Railroads opened the rich interior of the state to farmers and lumbermen. Wheat became a basic commodity, with flour and grist mills springing up everywhere. Introduction of livestock brought about Wisconsin's noted dairy industry.

By 1880 many towns were offering inducements to industry, and manufacturing was begun. Paper and pulp mills began operating, and meat packing was introduced. Shoes and leather products followed naturally. The metal industry, now one of Wisconsin's greatest, grew rapidly because of the state's location halfway between Minnesota's iron ore deposits and coal fields in Illinois and Indiana.

The land of green woods and cool waters continues to grow and progress. Its industry, agriculture and good homes make life better. Wisconsin is a serene and balanced land.

little town of Fort Atkint 1870 there was an editor who noted the soil-depleting results of many wheat crops. He believed that in time there would be no good farms unless farmers turned from wheat growing to raising of livestock. He argued that Wisconsin no longer could depend upon grains and that the future prosperity of the state lay in dairying.

At first he devoted a column to his campaign, then a page and later a separate section. Eventually he founded Hoard's Dairyman, a magazine that circulated widely, even today. He supplemented his writing by touring the state and speaking until he hammered his gospel into the consciousness of the people.

But the farmers of 1870 were inclined to resent being "tied to a cow." After a while Hoard convinced a group of German farmers to go into dairying, and many Scandinavians were to follow. Wheat production began to drop as the dairy output increased.

MISSIONARY GETS POST

WASHINGTON. —Here's the inside story on the sudden appointment of John Leighton Stuart as new American ambassador to China.

Originally, President Truman planned to appoint Lt. Gen. Al Wedemeyer as ambassador to China. As a matter of fact, Wedemeyer's nomination already had been typed and was on the President's desk. However, last week General Marshall sent Truman an urgent cable advising that he finally had found one man who could act as ambassador and who was on good terms with both the Communists and the Chiang Kai-shek group. Marshall also pointed out that Stuart had lived in China for 50 years and spoke fluent Chinese.

So, 24 hours later, President Truman nominated J. Leighton Stuart to be American ambassador to China.

ARGENTINE ATOM BOMBS

The fascist Argentine government has completed elaborate plans for going into the atomic-bomb business on a scale parallel to that of the U. S.

The Argentine Scientific association has proposed and received approval of the Argentine war and navy departments to finance importation and operations of the best nuclear physicists in the world, including German refugees.

The Argentine government is guaranteeing these scientists unlimited funds, complete scientific liberty and absolute personal security from police terror. The head of one important Argentine scientific group informed the Peron government that Nazi scientists are doing well but still are not operating rapidly enough to satisfy the Argentines.

ATOMIC RAT RACE

U. S. atomic delegate Bernie Baruch has confided to friends that he is much opposed to having chairmanship of the atomic commission rotate each month. This means that Australian Foreign Minister Herbert Evatt, United Nations dynamo, now steps down as chairman.

The Australian is about the only member of the atomic commission who has Soviet Envoy Gromyko afraid of him. The other day Gromyko opposed a decision by majority rule, proposing a two-thirds vote instead. Evatt was on the Russian in a flash.

"It's not necessarily true, Mr. Gromyko, that the majority is always wrong," rebuked the Australian.

On another occasion, Gromyko was protesting against the Baruch plan. Instead he proposed immediate destruction of all existing atomic bombs and release of the atomic bomb secret by the U. S.

When Bernie Baruch, listening through his ear phone, heard this he became almost apoplectic. But before Baruch could speak, Evatt took on the Russian again.

"You know, Mr. Gromyko," said Evatt, "not all the parliaments in the world would approve all the proposals that you make here. If they did, it would be a different world."

NO CONGRESSMAN IS GUILTY

The case of Andrew Jackson May and his backstage wire-pulling for war profiteers illustrates two defects in our politico-congressional system which sooner or later must be cured.

1. The almost - life - or - death power of the chairman of any congressional committee over executive branches of the government.

2. The fact that certain congressional districts are so dominated by political bosses that no matter what a man does in Washington he can't be defeated for reelection at home.

Congressman May comes from a district in the Kentucky mountains, many of whose people now regard him as something of a hero. They believe that Jack May can do no wrong. Prior to May's incumbency his district sent a Republican, John Langley, to congress. He landed in jail for bootlegging. But even after he had been convicted, Langley was re-elected to congress. And when it became clear that Langley could not adequately represent his district while behind bars, his loyal constituents sent his wife to congress.

Actually, the great majority of congressmen are absolutely honest. Misguided and frequently wrong they may be, but most of them are honest.

BIKINI AFTERMATH

Air Chief General "Toughy" Spaatz is not happy over the air force's role in the first Bikini test. The bombardier and pilot, who dropped the bomb more than a thousand feet wide of the mark, are in the doghouse permanently. Both will be transferred to routine assignments. General Spaatz feels there is no excuse for their wide miss. . . . The British cabinet has decided to settle 250,000 anti-Russian members of the Polish army in England permanently.

NIGHT LIFE

Comes time to investigate that popular feminine teen custom — the slumber party. The only thing sleepy about it is its name, a fact to which the parents of a slumber party hostess will sadly testify. Let's look in on a typical slumber number and see why your dreams are gettime better all the time.

In the Bag—So you're invited to Sally Jones' for a slumber party?

Well, get out your precious overnight, bag—the one you covered with pix of Van Johnson — and stuff it with your sharpest pajamas, your slickest slippers, that bottle of nail polish in a brand new color; some new movie magazines. Oh, and don't forget to take that new album of Spike Jones platters, including "I Dream of Brownie With the Light Blue Jeans."

Puss in the Corner—That's you when you start cat-chatting about the girls who aren't at the party. It's a time when the most confidential secrets go in one ear after another. It's the time you tell everything you know — but all too often you don't know everything you tell.

Beauty Treatment — There's no time like a Slumber Party for experimenting with new lipsticks, new nail polish and new hair-do's. Before you know it, they talk you into cutting bangs—and won't you hate yourself in the morning?

Nocturnal Nourishment — Since you're going to stay up most of the night, you'll need to keep up your strength. So you swallow in vitamins with pickle in the middle and mustard on top. There's nothing more restful in bed than potato chip crumbs, we always say.

Male Call—What's the favorite topic of conversation at a slumber party? Well, it isn't politics and it isn't Medieval History and it isn't English lit. That narrows it down to BOYS—these bristle-bean Joes that are always cluttering up your life. (As if you wouldn't like the clutter to be more utter!)

Well, as the island said, "I'm all at sea."

JESUS AND THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-24; 10:29-31, 18:10-14.
MEMORY SELECTION—But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment.—Matthew 5:22.

Human life is sacred, and that is not primarily because of any law of man, but because God created man in his own likeness and image.

Since that is true, no man has any right to take the life of another for any cause except at the direct command of God. Only by the orderly process of law for the protection of society and in accordance with the Word of God may there be any such action by man toward man.

Both of these truths are declared in Scripture in God's covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:5, 6), which was made possibly a thousand years before the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

I. The Prohibition of Murder (Exod. 20:13).

The word "kill" in this commandment is one which means a violent and unauthorized taking of life, and is therefore more properly translated "murder."

Not all killing is murder. A man may kill another entirely accidentally, or he may be the duly constituted legal officer carrying out the law of the land in taking the life of one who has forfeited his right to live because he has slain another.

There is also the right of self-defense, be it individual or collective as in war. But these are the only exceptions; let us not attempt to justify any other.

Murder is more prevalent than most of us suppose. In 1944 there was a murder every fifty minutes in our land.

Do not forget the deaths, the destruction of life, by avoidable automobile accidents. Some of these were really murder because the one responsible drove with defective brakes, dangerous tires, or while he was intoxicated. Add to these the deaths in industry caused by failure to provide proper safeguards or healthy working conditions, and by the exploitation of child labor, and we say that we should cry aloud, "Thou shalt do no murder."

II. The Provocation to Murder (Matt. 5:21, 22).

Murder finds its provoking cause in the heart of man. Our Lord was concerned about correcting the desires rather than to apprehend the offender after the act had been committed. It is the better way, and the more effective one.

In this matter of murder, Jesus cut right through the outward aspects of the matter and pointed out that an angry hatred in the heart is the root of all murder. If we hate, we have murder in our hearts. Circumstances may hinder its fulfillment, but the danger is always there until we remove the cause.

May God help those of us who have strong feelings that we may not yield them to the devil in such anger against our brother!

III. The Prevention of Murder (Matt. 5:23, 24; 10:29-31; 18:10-14).

Prevention with God means more than putting up a barrier to try to keep men from killing one another. He deals with the heart of man, and when that is right the whole life will be right. There must be

1. A Right View of Self (Matt. 5:23, 24). We must learn by prayer and humility of heart to suffer at the hands of others, to keep peace, to seek our brother's welfare.

Note that it is not even a question of how we may feel against our brother. If he has aught against us we are to do all we can to win him.

We who believe in Christ are to be in deed as well as word the children of our heavenly Father (Matt. 5:45), loving not only those who are kind to us but also our enemies.

2. A Right View of God (Matt. 10:29-31). He who knows when a sparrow falls to the ground is concerned about the smallest detail of our lives. No man can lay hands of violence on another man without having to reckon with God about his misdeeds.

Our God is not afar off and too concerned with eternal affairs to be interested in the sufferings of the individual. He is here now, and we should count him into every relationship of life.

3. A Right View of Man (Matt. 18:10-14). Even the little ones, apparently defenseless and at the mercy of a cruel world, have guardian angels who have access to the throne of God. He has a special interest in the lost and rejoices in the rescue of the one who has strayed, so we see that even those whom the world regards as weak and unimportant are in the mind of God for good. He watches over them.

The man who sees himself for what he is, and who realizes what God thinks of man, will find that he agrees with the command of God, "Thou shalt not kill."

KLEMME DROPS GAME TO KANAWHA 10-3

The Klemme Merchants lost a North Central league game to Kanawha, at Kanawha Sunday, 10 to 3.

Merton Harson and Forrest Langlitz were on the mound for Klemme while Carl Johnson pitched for the winners.

The gentle avenger. First of a series of gripping stores about the exploits of a fearless sleuth who waged a relentless war on the underworld. The story of the great Lorimer frame-up appears in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's CHICAGO SUNDAY HERALD AMERICAN.

Final plantings in the summer garden should be made the last half of August. Quickly maturing vegetables, such as kale, spinach, lettuce and radishes, should be planted so that they can mature before severe frost. Such fresh vegetables will be very desirable for the table use in the fall, along with the fall beans and sweet corn.

Carrots, beets, beans, corn Chinese cabbage, turnips, kohlrabi, endive and other vegetables planted in July are coming along in good shape in gardens where there is plenty of fertility and moisture. Planting a late crop of vegetables where an early crop means further depletion of fertility. A side dressing along the rows of seedlings, using any of the commonly available chemical garden fertilizers, will help pep up the fall maturing crops. Use 1 pound per 50 feet of row. Before applying fertilizer, be sure the vegetable seedlings are thinned out to give proper spacing.

Gardens all over Iowa will be entering plates of vegetables in county and district fairs. This is to remind home gardeners to get premium lists at the earliest opportunity and check off the kinds of vegetables they want to enter. The exhibitor must enter the exact number of tomatoes, carrots and other produce called for in the schedule. Many times exhibitors lose out because they have not conformed to the rules.

Some gardeners think their vegetables are not good enough to enter in a show. Frequently, after seeing the exhibits these gardeners remark that they have better squash or onions and should have brought them to the show.

Knowing how to prepare vegetables for exhibit at shows is important. The first step is to select the best quality specimens out of a large group. They must be all the same variety, unless the rules state otherwise. A plate of tomatoes, for example, should be as uniform in size, shape, color and condition as possible. The largest vegetables are not necessarily the best. Large carrots and beets are usually tough and woody. The later planted seed of these vegetables yields the best specimens for show. They are more tender and better quality.

In preparing most root vegetables for show, cut the tops off to within one-half inch of the roots. Red beet tops should be cut off to within an inch of the root. Allow 1½ inches of stem on the onion. Avoid peeling if possible; only several outer husks should be removed at the most. Potatoes should not be scrubbed. Brush loose soil off with a fine brush. If soil sticks too tightly on any of the root crops, place the vegetables in a pan of water and wash them with your hands or soft cloth.

Higher speed ball and roller bearings which cushion the new jet plane engines make jet power so smooth that a vibrator must be set up in the pilot's cabin so that instruments there can function normally.

The cost of drinking in America last year totalled $7,800,000,000, which was 9 per cent more than the previous year, although no more liquor was consumed. The increased cost was due to higher taxes.

AROUND IOWA

GORED

L. A. Hansen, Logan farmer, came out second best in a bout with a mad bull at his farm recently and is in the hospital at Council Bluffs. The bull turned on him while being moved from one pen to another, knocking him down. Fortunately Mr. Hansen lost consciousness and the bull abandoned him, apparently thinking he was dead.

LOTS OF OATS

Floyd Larsen, of near Soldier, reports that a 10 acre field of oats threshed out 1150 bushels, or 115 bushels per acre. This is considered the "all time" high in that area. Any challengers.

BUYS PAPER

Pinkie George, well known Des Moines sports promotor, has always wanted to own a weekly paper. Recently he fulfilled that ambition, purchasing the Milo Motor from Jo Anne Roberts.

EARLY PANHANDLER

Phil Blaufuss, West Des Moines, was up at 4:00 a. m. one morning recently. While he was shaving, a stranger tapped on the bathroom window and requested 10¢ for carfare Apparently, you are not safe from panhandlers anywhere!

KILLED IN FALL

While trimming a tree near Spirit Lake recently, Walrence Sargent, 55, of near Estherville, fell from the one he was pruning and was killed. Apparently, he was trying to reach up a little higher than the length of the ladder warranted.

DISAPPEARING FISH

Mrs. Gerald Hoepner, Reinbeck, wants to know what happened to her gold fish. She bought two fish in Waterloo, one a gold fish and one a black tropical fish. When she arrived home, the fish had disappeared. The next morning, there were 13 fish in the bowl; the black fish and twelve little fish. All's well that ends well, apparently, but she still wonders what became of the gold fish.

OLDEST RESIDENT

Louisa county lost its oldest resident recently, when Mrs. Augusta Strub Ruppert, 99, died at her home in Morning Sun. Mrs. Ruppert, only one year younger than the state of Iowa, survived her 99th birthday by only two hours.

K-9 VETERAN

Newell, Iowa, reports a new veteran has arrived to make his home there, namely, "Spike", of the United State Marines kennel corps. Spike, a Doberman Pinscher with overseas service to his credit, was in the marine corps three years. He is now the property of Howard Skow of Newell.

USDA ANNOUNCES POTATO SUPPORT PRICES

U. S. No. 1 quality, bulk loaded at farmer's gate $1.55 per

A woman who had been having trouble with public laundries shrinking her unmentionables found a large railroad spike and tied a tag to it with the inscription: "Try and shrink this."

When the laundry was returned, she found a small carpet tack with a tag tied to it saying: "We did."

A Bumper Corn Crop

LOOK AHEAD FOR REPAIRS . . .

According to present indications, Iowa will have a Bumper Corn Crop in 1946. Sure a lot of things can happen, and perhaps we should not "count our chickens before they are hatched!"

However, if favorable conditions continue EVERY CORN PICKER IN IOWA WILL BE CALLED INTO SERVICE THIS FALL. Hand corn pickers are about out of the picture.

There'll be a big demand for Corn Picker repairs. It's bound to be big by comparison because the Corn Pickers will have an extra big job to do. We tell you this because it is important that you get repairs early.

If some part of YOUR picker is badly worn it would be the part of wisdom to have that part on hand before the actual need confronts you.

WE HAVE SOME REPAIRS IN STOCK . . .

Of course our Store will have innumerable repair parts in stock, all that we can get, but even so it is pretty difficult to anticipate all the needs that may arise during an EXTRA HEAVY HARVEST SEASON. Go over YOUR picker early. Let us know as soon sa possible the Repair Items you will need.

Pop—Well, what have we got in the family now, a psychopathic case or a character actress?

Mom—What do you mean, Henry?

Pop—I mean our daughter. I just got a gander at her down the street. She's rigged out like a refugee from war-torn Europe!

Mom—Oh, you mean those knock-about clothes!

Pop—I mean she's wearing overalls and a man's shirt . . . and the shirt outside the pants!

Mom—Girls will be girls, my dear.

Pop—Okay by me but they wanna be boys! Why this costume that would indicate she just fled from a fire without time to get her right clothes?

Mom—It's just a new summer fad, darling. The kids like to be comfortable and cool.

Pop—Since when were men's overalls regarded as the symbol of comfort and coolness?

Mom — Jumpers, not overalls, dear.

Pop—They look more like men's overalls than men's overalls do. And why the shirt-tails outside, that's what I wanna know?

Mom—Oh, don't take it so seriously. All the young girls are dressing that way.

Pop—What for? What's wrong with the idea of a girl looking sweet and dainty? What's so awful about her looking a little feminine?

Mom—I think the kids today look rather cute.

Pop—Bah! If Prunella is cute in those slop-ins and man's oversized shirt, so is the Witch of Windsor. She had three kids with her all dressed the same. They look to me as if they were waiting for a broom-ride. Where do they get these screwball ideas?

Mom—You're being old-fashioned. I don't know why Prunella wears her shirttail outside but it probably is just a reflection of the desire to be unconventional, unfettered, free.

Pop—Bilge water! I say it's just a sloppy custom that makes a girl look like a character out of the dressing room of the Marx Brothers, a sort of belle of the rummage sale, and I'm giving my ultimatum.

Mom—Ultimatum?

Pop—Yeah! Get my daughter back into female attire! And before somebody names her Miss Hobo for 1946.

Back Home Stuff

Perry's boat house and clam bar is no more. . . . For over half a century it stood at the old iron bridge across Indian Creek on the winding road along the Connecticut shore, a landmark to young and old. . . . D. B. Perry started it as a young man, built his house on the water's edge and raised his family there, renting boats, selling bait and fish and dishing out clams on the half shell with a flavor of chestnuts. . . . He closed the clam bar in the shack with the quaint iron stove in the center several seasons ago much to the regret of natives and tourists. . . . Only one son, Ernie, remained to run things, and with "D. B." ailing, it was decided last week to sell the boats and wind up the business. . . . Now there isn't a boat at the landing and it seems strangely unreal. . . . No more will the sign that seemed to us to represent the acme of individual enterprise and success be seen there around October 1, "Closed for Business Until Next April."

'NIGHT AND DAY'

A new movie "Night and Day" tells the life story of Cole Porter. And we wonder if it includes the episode of his first musical at the Shubert theater in New Haven, "See America First," with Liz Marbury as his discoverer and producer. We can recall Cole, a dapper Eli, nervously listening to the comments in the Taft pharmacy next door between the acts. . . . Incidentally the part of a middle-aged Yale professor in the movie is played by Monty Woolley who, at about the time Porter was at Yale, was also a student there.

Visitors to Saratoga will miss that ancient landmark, the Grand Union hotel, razed since the last racing season there. The coil of rope in the corner of the room, the marble washstand with the open plumbing, the soiled window shades, the massive chandeliers and the beds that Washington slept in (followed by Buffalo Bill and his buffalo herds). Ah, what memories! . . . And those two-mile rambling verandas which were ever a reminder of the days when porches were porches and rockers were rockers!

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

Joe Cronin

YOU would think that Tom Yawkey, owner of the Boston Red Sox, after spending so many millions and waiting so many years to win a pennant, would now be a happy carefree man. From what we hear Yawkey, usually a cool, calm individual in the face of any crisis, is now nervous as a cat on a hot stove. His team has shown no sign of the jitters, but Owner Yawkey has. He apparently can't believe that his dream has a most excellent chance of coming true.

As a high-class sportsman in every way and a real lover of baseball, winning a major league pennant became one of Yawkey's obsessions years ago. Money was never a barrier along the pennant road.

It is estimated that the Red Sox owner has unloaded over $3,000,000 for the exclusive purpose of finishing in front. The amount may be considerably higher. But his pennant dream kept turning into a nightmare. Something always happened and it was usually to the Yankees.

In the meanwhile Yawkey refused to weaken, much less to quit. He also stuck to his manager Joe Cronin, where the Red Sox, under average baseball ownership, would have known four or five different managers in the last few years.

While it was known early this spring that the Red Sox would be good, the Yankees and the Tigers were also in the pennant-race picture. The Yankees with Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Keller, Tommy Henrich, Joe Gordon, Phil Ruzzuto, Snuffy Stirnweiss, Bill Dickey, Nick Etten, Johnny Lindell and Spud Chandler shaped up as a formidable looking outfit on both attack and defense. The Tigers, too, looked dangerous.

Many Uncertainties

The Red Sox at the time had several gambles to face; at first, at third, and their pitching staff. They had Tex Hughson and Boo Ferris, but the others were uncertainties, just as Yankee pitchers were outside of Chandler. You can understand, during those March days at Sarasota, on the west coast of Florida, why Tom Yawkey should have been a trifle on the jittery side. Tom was—but Joe Cronin wasn't, although Joe knew this had to be his year. Cronin refused to make any predictions beyond saying this: "We've got a good ball club. We'll give anybody a battle."

Now past the midsummer spot with a long lead and the best ball club, you would feel that Tom Yawkey at least should be able to take a deep, free breath and relax.

In baseball's greatest year, so far as attendance and public interest goes, with something close to an all-star team in one corral, every one connected with the Red Sox should be able to stand up and sing "Just around the corner there's a rainbow in the sky," or "Happy days are here again."

All of Boston, outside of the Yawkey office, are humming these cheerful tunes. After all Boston, one of the cradles of baseball, has gone 28 years without a pennant. Boston kept looking back these 28 years to the days of Long, Lowe and Tenney, Kid Nichols, Hugh Duffy, Big Bill Dineen, Smoky Joe Wood, Carrigan, Speaker, George ("Duffy") Lewis, Hooper, including George Stallings' miracle Braves of 1914.

Boston also could look back to a burly fellow by the name of Babe Ruth and a great squad that Harry Frazee sold to New York to make the Yankees famous. It was Boston that gave New York its Yankee fame—Ruth, Pennock, Jumping Joe Dugan, Red Ruffing, these and many more. But Babe Ruth was enough. For 10 years the Yankees without Babe Ruth in his prime, would have been just another ball club. A good one—but not a great one.

Would Have Kept Stars

If Tom Yawkey had been owner of the Red Sox around 1919 or 1920, Boston would have dominated the game through the next decade, not the Yankees. For Yawkey would have kept Ed Barrow, one of the smartest men baseball has ever known. He would have kept Babe Ruth, Red Ruffing and Pennock and many others—and to these he would have added the best ball players a few millions of dollars could buy. This shows you what an owner means to a major league club.

Harry Frazee, a theatrical, not a baseball man, wrecked the Red Sox for at least 10 years. It has taken Tom Yawkey another 10 years to sweep away the debris and replace the damage. He faced an almost impossible job with the Yankees entrenched as they were—largely through Red Sox talent all those years. From this you can understand why Tom Yawkey and the sedate city of Boston is so wrought up over the prospect of getting a long-delayed revenge over the Yankees, who robbed them of victory so many times.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Wastes
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work and do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and energy.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful users the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Answer: "Rice" for rise was heard occasionally during the last century, but the pronunciation is obsolete and dialectal today. But some American dictionaries still list it as second choice. Merriam Webster's says of "rice" for rise: "The pronunciation never prevailed, and is now little heard."

A Little Bit of America Transplanted in S. Pacific

For tonight as far as the eye can see in a huge arc which marks the curving length of this three-mile-long island, thousands of electric lights wink in the soft trade winds and mirror their reflections in the gently swelling waters of the lagoon. Thousands of other lights from the fleet of some 200 ships anchored in array form other patterns of reflected lights, numerous searchlights stab the star-studded sky and the winking lights of ship communications play a soundless tattoo upon the southern night. Red and green riding lights atop the masts sway in the rolling waves and add color to the magical picture in this far-off place.

Yet only a few short months ago this island and the entire atoll of coral reefs and islets was as primitive and wild as when the first Polynesians steered their frail outrigger canoes into Bikini lagoon some 800 years ago. Today the small band of natives has been moved bag and baggage to another larger island, and taking their place are thousands of American boys swarming the beaches and playing beneath the cocoanut palms from which the natives derived their chief food supply.

Paving, Steel Buildings

Concrete walks have taken the place of the rough native trails; coral roads have replaced the sandy paths trod for centuries; rough thatched huts have been replaced by sturdy American structures; handball, basketball, tennis and horseshoe courts edge into the palm groves. Steel towers form installations for radio, television and other communications, standing high above the trees. The chug of a gasoline engine, the roar of bulldozer motors and the shouts of men in recreation break the stillness of the night . . . such sounds as have never before been heard since this ancient volcano thrust its crater rim above the waters of the Pacific and the countless millions of coral polyps deposited their skeletons for eons of time to form the rock and sand base of the atoll reefs . . . the crashing, splitting thunder of two atomic bombs have broken the peace and stillness of this fairyland. American ships lie upon the coral heads of the lagoon floor . . . 30 fathoms down.

Soon divers will explore their wrecked hulls to note the work of atomic energy and blast upon the workmanship of shipbuilders. Oceanographers will again chart the lagoon bed to see what this man-made force has done to nature's work. Biologists will study the fish life to learn what radio-activity has done to the living tissues. In the years to come an entirely new species of fish may be one result.

A radio station, ice plant and electric plant lend their functions to this newest outpost of the American way . . . for where American sailors and American soldiers and airmen go, so must go the American way in ships and planes.

Expensive, but Worth It

To date this mass movement of ships and men, their supply and maintenance has cost the American taxpayers some $70,000,000 so that our military planners might learn the effect of atomic energy on ships and men and materiel. And it is costing an approximate half million dollars a day to keep it going . . . going well beyond the summer months, for the third test is now scheduled for November and the total cost will run well over $100,000,000. Our congress and our military leaders believe it is well worth it. And they've left nothing undone.

A jazz orchestra plays sweet swing music and the sound is wafted across the water from the officers' club where the legend over the door reads "Up and Atom." And there's plenty of refreshment in liquid form, so plentiful it may be the reason for the shortage in the States, and cheap too.

Some 30,000 men are here . . . a little piece of the United States transported to the South Pacific. If we could only see a ferris wheel, the scene before us would resemble nothing more than Coney Island.

About one-fourth of the animals exposed to the atom bomb test of July 1 are now dead. This does not include those killed for autopsy. Capt. Shields Warren, radiological expert, says that about one-third of the survivors are in a critical condition from burns. Four goats, all quite sick, have been flown to the U. of Chicago for blood studies. Their ailment is due to radioactive rays. One hundred and eight white mice have been flown to the National Health Institute at Bethesda, Md., where they will be studied.

MAJOR UNDERTAKING—As highlight of its year's activities the Youth Council of Richfield Springs, N. Y., annually stages an I Am an American program. The above picture shows members of the high school orchestra and a vocalist participating in the program.

Youth Council Sets Pace In Developing N.Y. Town

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK

WNU Features

A town with a past can live in the present and look to the future, say young people of Richfield Springs, upstate New York center with 1,200 population. This consensus of the town's Youth council, started more than three years ago from a panel discussion on "Young Peoples' Present Day Problems."

Some of the charter members as well as their followers were out-of-school young people. On the present membership list are the names of a beautician, bookkeeper, clerk, farmer, housewife, laboratory technician, machinist, secretary, school custodian, telephone operator, stenographer, and typesetter, so "everybody gets in and pitches or helps play the field. Each works where he fits and is most needed."

Stage Annual Program.

Chief activity is I Am an American Day program staged annually under the council's direction. Use is made of school band and chorus, American Legion, church groups, town board and boys' and girls' clubs. Highlights of this year's program were demonstrations by Cub, Boy and Girl Scouts, remarks by a new voter and an address by one of the town's ministers.

This youth group tackles other things as the months come and go. They "dig a bit into the annals of history" for indication of what's happened to Richfield Springs, which in the Gay Nineties was New York State's most popular spa because of the healing powers of its sulphur spring waters. "Then, we had hotels filled with visitors, livery stables of fine horses and all kinds of carriages that outshone most cars in today's modern garages," an old-timer recalls.

Varied Projects.

"So," the group asks, "what can we do about what's left with us?" They consider how to clean and make use of deserted hotels and other buildings, explore the needs and possibilities of local industries such as cannery and dairy.

Outstanding project is a forum to study the creation of good citizenship to world affairs. This reaches 150 youth and adults who meet weekly during the winter to formulate questions and work out unbiased answers to them.

Under direction of the council sponsor and the high school social science teacher it has quickened initiative, developed new viewpoints, broadened horizons and brought needed co-operation in definite community projects. One of these was a community carnival, which was a financial success and a concrete demonstration of how folks can and will work together. Another was the realization of $1,000 through contributions and a community dance for Christmas boxes and gifts to 200 hometown men and women in the service.

List Accomplishments.

To prove that other communities can "do as well as ours," Youth Council members explain that in their farming section of cash cropping, dairying and poultry raising, a dairy manufacturing plant, two fishing tackle factories and a sports wear mill have been established as a result partially of their interest and agitation.

As war clouds lift, the council proposes to improve facilities for tourists at nearby Canadaraga lake, which offers boating, fishing and swimming in summer and skating in winter.

"While we are planning for things ahead, we are doing more real living in the present with due respect to the past for cornerstones to build on," say Richfield Springs young people.

Texas Politicians Slow in Own Towns

TAYLOR, TEXAS.—Two Williamson county politicians, Mr. A. and Mr. B., are running against each other. Mr. A. went to Mr. B.'s hometown and reported jubilantly that he had contacted 100 voters and that 90 of them promised to vote for him.

Mr. B. then visited Mr. A.'s hometown and reported with deep satisfaction that he had talked to 100 people and that 90 of them had indicated they would definitely vote for him.

2-Year-Old Child Has Unusual Vocabulary

CRANSTON, R. I.—Guests at the home of Thomas Stabile are amazed when they are greeted by his two-year-old daughter, Donna Jean, who calmly inquires about their comfort and continues to carry on a lively conversation.

Psychologists who have examined the pert, blonde child agree that her rapidly expanding vocabulary is highly unusual for her age. Donna Jean uses 400 words in complete sentences whereas average vocabulary for two-year-olds ranges from 60 to 200 words.

In checkers, which is her favorite game of wits, Donna Jean already has learned a self-appeasing trick. Because she always gets beaten when she plays with her father, Donna Jean has contrived a game she plays with her doll. Asked who wins in the contest, she invariably replies: "I do, of course."

WAR CONDITIONS IN HOLLAND TOLD IN LETTER TO MRS. MITCHELL BOCK

KLEMME PEOPLE RECEIVE INTERESTING LETTER FROM HOLLAND

Mrs. Mitchell Bock
Klemme, Iowa

Herwynen, July 7, 1946

Dear unknown:

Here at last is a letter from Holland. It took a long time but we waited until the packages would have arrived and these came last week. Probably they have been in Holland for some time but there is a harbor strike in Holland.

Your letter mentioned only one package but three came; we can use them very well and we are very glad with them and we want to thank you and yours for them. The baby cloths came in very handy for nothing is for sale in Holland yet. He has the little doll with him every day and plays with it. The clothes for my wife also fits fine. She has grown so much since the baby so that much of her clothes had become too small.

It is the same with me. I have also gained weight. A few years ago I had an accident with a bicycle and was given the wrong treatment by a physician. Now I have difficulty with walking and have to use two canes but I can still use my bicycle; it will come out alright but it takes time.

The clothes for me were also very welcome and I use the shoes every day.

I am a carpenter by trade but am now employed by the ration bureau; everything is still rationed here.

Much has happened during those five years of war, especially the last 8 months. We were only 8 KM. (5M) from the front lines; day and night we heard the noise of artillery and the shooting of the machine gun. Often we could also hear the rattling of armored cars and there always a coming and going to the front with soldiers and material. But here in the village itself there was no fighting. We live here on the river Waal, and 7 KM south of here is the Maas. On this side of the Maas were the Germans and on the other side the allied soldiers.

From the air, ships and autos were continually shot at by airplanes and also bombs were dropped. We had anti aircraft and they began to fire at the airplanes; these came back again and dove so low to the ground and kept on shooting.

During the night it was often lighter than it is in daytime for then the airplanes threw illuminating bullets and you could almost read a paper. Then they could see from the air if there were ships or autos.

Also the Flying bombs, the V I's came over; they are like airplanse but behind them is a long streak of fire. They roar much more than an airplane and they usually went on but if you did not hear them and they floated through the air, they were much more dangerous for they destroyed a great deal when they fell down.

Measuring as the crow flies (measured through the air) we live 60 KM (40 M.) from The Hague. From there the V II's were fired to London. We could see that from here. Then a fiery ball with black smoke behind it went through the air. But there were some that did not get there. Once one fell in the Center of The Hague and there were many killed and wounded. Fortunately the atom bomb was not used here for this is supposed to be a thousand times worse.

For many long nights and sometimes also during the day, for hours at a time, heavy bombers went over to bomb Germany and there were also many air fights, but not during the last months of the war for then the Germans had no gasoline left and many autos were pulled by horses; so they could not fly any more. We have seen German soldiers going by here with stolen baby carriages on which they hauled their knapsacks and blankets.

During the winter of 1944-45 the hunger marches from the cities to the country started; thousands and thousands came for potatoes and bread. Many have bartered their clothes for food. We, ourselves did not have any too much either, and yet we have let many of them eat with us. Many died from hunger and misery, especially the aged and sick who could not go out for food, or women with small children, whose husbands had been sent to Germany. All those people had nothing to burn in their stoves, no food; no light during the evening and in the winter.

Once a man and a women passed here with a baby carriage with a baby of 8 months. We called them in. The women had a pair of wooden things tied on her feet with pieces of string, and the snow was 4 inches high. I give her my work shoes when they went away. But there were thousands of those and we could not help all of them.

There were many people who traveled 80 to 100 KM (50 to 65 M.) with a push cart to get food and they had to travel that distance back and many of them, when they were home found their wives or children dead from starvation. That suffering cannot be described.

Many things have been distributed here already by the HARK (Help Action Red Cross) but often all the good things had already been picked out. Probably that was never the intention of the people in America who gave all that.

I am going to stop now With many hearty greetings and again thanks for what you sent us.

From Dirke, Gerard and Gerrit

Family G. J. van Noord - v. d. Ley, Herwynen, Holland

Dear Unknown Friends:

(I am writing again, for my wife who says that I should write as she is doing the sewing.)

Your parcels received in good order for which our sincere thanks. We are glad with them and it came in very handy.

We received your letter 2½ months ago but waited until the packages came. Now, that was a joy. Everything was welcome. My husband wears the shoes every day. Those for me were a little too big but with a pair of socks on my feet it works alright. And we were also very happy with the child's clothes. Everything is still very scarce and almost unobtainable. The little boy has the little doll every day, with a ribbon around his neck and plays with it. He is such a nice little fellow. He was 1 year old on June 24 and walks around in his box. He does not yet all by himself. We are very happy with him. We had been married 5½ years before he was born.

We have not had much good luck in our marriage yet. My husband is under doctor's treatment for his foot for 3 years already. His ankle became stiff after an accident and now he has difficulty with walking. It will be all right, as the Dostor says, but it goes slowly and he still walks with two canes.

The war did not much good to it either, but still, we should not complain. In the cities it was much worse. Here at least we had something to eat every day even if it was not as much as otherwise. We are still living with my parents, but everything is very expensive and rationed also my mother's family received much and now at last we are dressed again; we had almost nothing left.

The photo of the three of you was very nice, it must be a darling, the little one. We shall enclose one of ours also. Dear people, I must stop and thank you again for all you have sent us and we wish every one of you good luck and prosperity especially with the little boy.

Dirkje, Gerard and Little Gerrit

A program consisted of Spanish reading by Beverly De Merritt, a piano solo by La Nelle Harvey, a vocal solo by Rev. H. E. Harvey, and group singing.

Mrs. Kenneth Medin read a letter from a Holland family for boxes of clothing received from the class. More boxes are to be packed Wednesday evening at the church. The next regular class party will be a picnic on Sunday eve., Sept. 15th.

COMMITTE DECIDES ON METHOD OF DISTRIBUTING CLINTON OATS

The committee decided to prorate all of the available Clinton seed oats to the list of farmers submitted by the growers Friday night, August 16th. The exact number of bushels per applicant will be decided when the bins have been inspected for certification and the growers know exactly the number of bushels available.

About 400 farmers have applied for Clinton oat seed. No more applications will be accepted from the 7 growers in Hancock County. The estimated average yield from the 109 acres of Clinton oats in Hancock county was 84 bushels per acre. The exact yield of cleaned oats will be announced when all of the oats have been cleaned and weighed. The seven growers are: Henry Swanson, Wesley; Elmer Engstrom, Kanawha; Werner Schlawin, Klemme; Jerry Psotka, Britt; Fern Huling, Britt; E. G. Gaskill Corwith; and Lewis Fisher, Britt.

Farmers who are raising large numbers of summer and fall pigs will be in a good position to cash in on an expected strong market in the late winter and spring, says Frances Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

Klemme Schools will begin Monday, September 2nd.

Veteran Senator Winds Up Long Career

Defeat of Wheeler Marks Passing of Able Legislator

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

There was something rather pathetic about it to me when I heard the President say two words that marked the obituary of a long career. The terse reply was made at a presidential press-radio conference when a reporter asked Mr. Truman if he cared to say anything about the senatorial primary in Montana in which Burton K. Wheeler was defeated by Leif Erickson.

There was nothing more that the President could say. He already had endorsed Wheeler with that remarkable loyalty that he has for his friends—a virtue which easily may go down in history as one of his faults.

Wheeler gave the freshman senator, Harry Truman, his first opportunity to show his mettle by letting him bat for him as chairman of the important Interstate Commerce committee. Truman made good, and a warm friendship developed.

But even presidential aid couldn't save Wheeler.

The other day I was looking over the autographed photographs with which Harold McGrath, superintendent of the senate radio gallery, had decorated the walls. It was just about the time that things began to look bad for the senator. We commented on the senators we had known who had ended long careers in defeat.

Of course, Sen. George Norris was the classic example. Five terms. Then he was replaced by an anti-Roosevelt man, Sen. Kenneth Wherry.

Senator Norris' closest contender for the longevity record in recent years was Ellison ("Cotton Ed") Smith of South Carolina, violently anti-New Deal. He was defeated by a pro-Roosevelt man the year after Norris lost out.

Up on the radio gallery wall is a picture of Henry Ashurst, the senator whose tongue fairly dripped epigrams. He came to the senate when New Mexico was admitted to the Union. That was 1912. He left in 1940, serving five terms plus five years.

The year 1940 was a bad one for veterans—besides Ashurst, William King of Utah left us, having served since 1917, and Lynn Frazer of North Dakota, who came to Washington in 1923.

Senator Wheeler served only four terms, but his vivid personality made it seem longer. He made many enemies. Many people disapprove of his isolationism and some of his other views most thoroughly. But there are many, even among his detractors, who respect him for his integrity, for his ability as a legislator, something which perhaps is understood in Washington better than elsewhere, and also because they consider his pacifism sincere.

I remember a conversation I had with Jerry O'Connell, former representative who tried to take Wheeler's seat in a campaign somewhat similar to the one which brought victory to Erickson. Jerry was pretty sore. He had a copy of the Anaconda Standard in his hand as well as a clipping. The clipping was a report of one of Senator Wheeler's campaign speeches, made early in his career. I can't remember the phraseology, but the general idea (expressed by Wheeler) was that if the Anaconda Standard, which was supposed to represent the sentiments of the big copper interests, ever praised Wheeler, it would be a sign that he was no longer worthy of the support of the people of Montana.

O'Connell read that to me. Then he picked up his copy of the Standard, and read from it some very kind words for Senator Wheeler.

However, I think it would be grossly unfair to say that Senator Wheeler ever "sold out," even figuratively, to any interests. As far as I know, he is as sincere today as he was when he made his first fight on whatever issue had a side unpopular enough to attract him.

In February of 1935 I had a long interview with Senator Wheeler. I have the yellowing clipping before me. It is illustrated with a huge photograph (more picture than text) showing Wheeler, his fist clenched about to drive it into his palm—a favorite gesture. I remember when the picture was taken.

Here are two paragraphs from the story:

"Last autumn (remember this was written in February, 1935), citizens of Montana sent the same young man to Washington as a senator for his third term with the largest majority ever given a candidate by the Mountain State."

A decade passes and new voters grow up.

"Wheeler (I observed this in the same interview) came back to his office in the Senate building with the pictures of the high mountains and the deep valleys of his adopted state on the walls, and a victory measured in the same magnificent dimensions. His hair is a little thinner than it was but he can wake the echoes with the same thunder he released when he first arrived. He is still up and at 'em. And the higher they fly the more anxious he is to make them fall."

Wheeler, Norris, Ashurst—they, too, flew high.

Matron Upsets Solon's Aplomb

Matron Upsets Solon's Aplomb

It was during the day and night senate sessions on OPA. The senate recessed at 6 p. m. to continue deliberations at 8 p. m. Republican Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, bitter OPA opponent, and Mrs. Bridges went to a restaurant for dinner. Coming out, they were caught by a sudden sharp rainstorm. The dapper, white-linen-suited senator hailed a passing cab, and he and his wife piled in. Before they could shut the door (and in accordance with Washington's group riding) a huge and very damp Labrador retriever bounded in, landing in the senatorial lap. The dog was followed by his corpulent mistress. Some moments elapsed as the quartet arranged themselves in the cab's back seat. The dog continued to snuggle and drip on the white linen suit.

Suddenly the corpulent lady, glancing sharply at the senator, said: "Why, you're Senator Bridges, aren't you?"

Bridges, pleased to be recognized, nodded graciously.

"Well," said the lady, jerking the sycophantic canine away from the Republican senator, "I'm a registered Democrat!"

Schwellenbach Yearns for West

There's a persistent rumor that Labor Secretary Schwellenbach would like to desert the Potomac for Puget Sound. That's not hard to understand since heavy pressure is being exerted to make drastic changes in the labor department and since Schwellenbach is as popular as he is in his home state.

In 1934, when he was running for the United States senate, Lew Schwellenbach carried every county of the state—the first time this ever had happened.

Vicariously, as shown in the recent resounding success of his brother, Edgar Schwellenbach, in winning the Supreme court justiceship of the state—his popularity persists today. Edgar Schwellenbach, almost unknown outside his own community, filed against the incumbent. The court elections usually don't draw a very heavy vote—yet the man with the former senator's name received more votes than were cast for the Republican and Democratic candidates for the senate.

Senator in for Happy Returns

The eyes of Washington Post readers bugged out recently when they read in a story describing senatorial wives' experiences with rising prices that "Mrs. Glen Taylor buys groceries for a family of 10, the youngest of whom was an 18-year-old baby." I understood immediately that the reporter had meant 18-DAY-old baby, because just two weeks before I had the pleasure of smoking one of the 50 excellent cigars sent up to the radio correspondents gallery by the senator.

Peace Talks Liberalized; G. I.'s Get Furlough Pay

PEACE PARLEY:
Open Discussion

Smaller nations won the right to discuss any question pertaining to the peace treaty drafts for Germany's former European satellites at the Paris peace conference in a surprise concession by Russia.

The Russian action followed Greece's demand that the conference be allowed to consider any item which relates to a just and durable peace. After hearing Yugoslavia and the Ukraine of the Soviet bloc attack the proposal, Russian Foreign Minister Molotov advanced his compromise. By offering the opportunity for thoroughly discussing the treaty drafts, his plan would permit the molding of a sound peace, he said.

WAR PROFITS:
Garssons Kick

Denying the war department's charge that it made excessive profits on war contracts, Erie Basin Metal Products, Inc., asked the U. S. tax court to bar the government's efforts to obtain a refund of $358,874.58 for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1943

The company was an important unit in the Garsson munitions empire under scrutiny of the senate investigating committee headed by Senator Mead (Dem., N. Y.). German war prisoners stood to benefit as the International Red Cross committee, meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, authorized the collection of $3,750,000 from affiliated societies and governments for relief work up to 1950.

The IRCC revealed that its activities included maintenance of a 27 million card index for 15 million prisoners of war; 900,000 inquiries to regiments regarding missing soldiers; visits by 420 IRCC delegates to POW camps in 56 countries to check on conditions, and safe delivery of 107 million letters or postal packages.

INDIVIDUAL APPROACH

Farm Plan Stresses Local Aid

Increased responsibility for conserving land resources is placed upon local farm and ranch owners in the 1947 agricultural conservation program, it is revealed in details of the new plan announced by department of agriculture. The personal aid phase represents the only change from the 1946 program.

For the first time, the program allows up to 10 per cent of county conservation funds to carry out a practice not included in the list approved by the government for the various states.

The balance will go toward carrying out conservation practices selected by farmers and committeemen from the approved list.

Costs 300 Million Dollars.

Authority for the 300 million dollar program is granted by congress under the agricultural appropriation act of 1947. The money is authorized to assist in carrying out soil building practices, soil and water conservation or the harvest of grass and legume seeds and to pay administrative costs of the program.

"Success of the program depends upon farmers and other committeemen who together work out plans for individual farms," said Dave Davidson, director of the field service branch, production and marketing administration.

Stress Local Angle.

Davidson explained that greater emphasis on the local approach should help farmers make some needed shifts from practices which were necessary for quick wartime production to those of greater long-term soil building value.

Operators of some four million farms took part in the 1946 program, or about two-thirds of the total. The area of these farms included almost three-quarters of the nation's cropland.

Farmers receive assistance from the ACP in conservation materials and services as well as payments. Most materials are bought from local dealers.

List Practices.

In general, the 1947 program is divided into these major types of practices: (1) Application of lime, fertilizer and other materials; (2) planting of cover crop; (3) harvesting of certain legumes and grass seeds; (4) erosion control and water conservation; (5) range and pasture improvement; (6) forestry; and (7) other practices such as weed control and clearance of land for plowing or pasture.

Special emphasis in 1947 will be placed on measures to prevent soil erosion and to conserve water. Such measures include planting of row crops on the contour, building of terraces, erosion control dams, livestock water ponds and similar practices. Use of lime and fertilizers on legumes and grasses will continue to be a major part of the program.

Car of 1911 Vintage Embarks On Lengthy Endurance Test

Did a second Rip Van Winkle awaken from a long sleep and go automobile-minded?

That is what service station attendants from coast to coast are wondering as they behold a car driven by John Bacon of Wellesley Hills, Mass., Harvard university senior, on a new type of transcontinental endurance test.

Amazed by the klaxon horn, acetylene lamps and antique mien of the vehicle, the attendants soon learn that the car is a Locomobile of 1911 vintage.

Abandoned 25 years ago and stored in an Exeter, N. H., barn, the ancient car was discovered by Bacon when he was attending Phillips Exeter academy. He purchased it this year after returning from four years of army service.

Repairs Cost $1,000.

Always interested in old cars, Bacon is confident the venerable old seven-passenger Locomobile can put 1946 models to shame on the endurance test. After acquiring the car, he dismantled the six-cylinder engine and put an estimated $1,000 into repairs and parts to ready it for the road.

Motorists throughout the country will be startled as Bacon's 35-year-old wonder speeds past them—it can do 70 miles an hour without effort, he insists. He has no fear of bad roads, low wheel base and rugged construction combining to give a smoother ride than modern-day cars.

Bacon admits there are a few drawbacks to the ancient vehicle. The wheel is hard to turn and the foot pedals work a little hard "until you get used to them," he says.

Has 10-Day Goal.

A mark of 10 days for the Boston to Los Angeles run was set by Bacon as he embarked on the trip. He plans to spend some time sightseeing in California before the return jaunt.

Although he has no doubts about the success of his junket, Bacon has refused to take up scoffers on proposed wagers.

"I just don't want to take their money—it would be too easy," he insists.

Raccoon Gets Lift Bus Driver Rebels At New Hitchhiker

STRONGHURST, ILL. — Chester R. McCoy, Gladstone farm worker, unknowingly gave a ride to a new type of hitchhiker recently. When McCoy stopped at a filling station to have oil in his car checked, the attendant discovered a raccoon, peacefully lying on a shield near the fuel pump enjoying the unexpected lift. The raccoon resorted to fighting tactics in resisting all efforts to displace him from his berth.

McCoy surmised that the raccoon had crawled into the car while it was parked near a farm field during the day.

FIRST AIR SHOW

With the general postwar interest in aviation, air shows are being revived throughout the U. S. First air show to be held in New England since close of the war was held at Bedford Field, near Boston. Arrangements were under general direction of Theodore Drury, president of Aeronautic Association of Boston. Highlight of the show was a display by army air forces showing planes that played an instrumental part in America's war victory as well as new machines.

DENIED GUN PERMIT . . . Although he carried a gun for two years in the Pacific, fighting on Guadalcanal, Pelelieu, Guam, Saipan and in China, Henry J. "Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

WHO BUYS AIRPLANES?

Through a survey conducted by the Aeronca Aircraft corporation, through its 1,200 dealers all over the U. S., some enlightenment was obtained relative to potential personal plane buyers:

Apparently the biggest group of potential light-plane buyers falls into the age group between 18 and 30 years, but Aeronca dealers report no marked decline in interest until beyond the 40-year mark. The number of people who prefer to buy on time or pay cash are about equally divided, the survey shows.

Another 40 per cent of potential light-plane owners are about equally divided among lawyers, doctors and educators on the one hand and highly successful business men and industrial leaders on the other. The remaining 20 per cent are independently wealthy people who defied classification as to gainful occupation.

Fifty-five per cent of the people who planned to buy personal planes know how to fly and 27 per cent of these are ex-servicemen, although not all of them flew in the service.

Three Per Cent Women.

Men far outnumber women as prospective light-plane owners. Only about 3 out of every 100 potential customers are women. But, as might be expected, many women accompany their menfolk to dealers to look at models and talk airplanes.

Where the man usually asks such questions as "How fast is it?" "How much does it cost?" and "What is the operating cost?" the women want to know "How safe is it?" "Is it easy to fly?" and "How long does it take to learn to fly it?"

Sixty per cent of the dealers reported that it was their experience that men learn to fly more readily than women. Another 25 per cent said they could see little or no difference between men and women in aptitude to learn to fly. The other 15 per cent showed what must be a mixture of high honesty and diplomacy, by refusing to commit themselves.

Duration of the war also is responsible for an increased number of children in war marriages. The 52,500 foreign brides coming to the U. S. to join their husbands were accompanied by 17,500 children, indicating that nearly a third had children. In a majority of cases there was only one child, although there are instances of as many as three children.

War marriages were most common in European and Mediterranean theaters. Nearly 60,000 of the 70,000 brides and children came from these two areas and they represented more than 30 different nationalities.

Great Britain had the largest percentage of war brides, 75 per cent, followed by France and Italy with 15 per cent each, Belgium and Ireland with 3 per cent each, with about 4 per cent from the other countries of Europe and North Africa.

Many From Australia.

From the Pacific area came 10,000 war brides, 85 per cent of whom were from Australia. Another 10 per cent are from New Zealand and 5 per cent from other countries, particularly the Philippines.

Age of war brides varies considerably, with marked concentrations in the late teens and early twenties.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

What do you want to be when you grow up? A fashion editor? A store buyer? A writer? A dancer? They're all fine ambitions, but that's all they'll ever be if you just wait around waiting for them to happen. Get started while you're still in your teens; then, by the time you're grown-up, you'll be well on your way. One thing is certain—you'll get there long before the girl who's depending on a last-minute short-cut to success.

Plastic Accessory

A smart handle on the new china pin point plastic bag is modeled by Martha Vickers appearing in Warner Bros.' "The Big Sleep." The squared bag is finished with a deep flap and band of patent forming an over-the-arm handle which has deep gold-plated rings as an accent.

Minute Make-Ups

By GABRIELLE

Makeup must be used on the throat as well as on the face to give smooth beauty. More often than not the face is lighter in shade than that of the throat. Bring the face and throat into harmonious beauty. Choose foundation cream or lotion for the face in a matching shade. The one for use on the throat should be one or two shades lighter. Always put powder on the throat as well as on the face.

THE OLD AND THE NEW

New World's Oldest City Stages Anniversary Fete

Moss-covered ruins of some of the first buildings in America stand picturesquely among modern structures, suspension bridges, spacious boulevards, fine hospitals and schools in the oldest city in the western hemisphere, Ciudad Trujillo in the Dominican republic, which on Sunday, August 4, observed the 450th anniversary of its founding.

As a highlight of the fete, a three-masted caravel, modeled after one of Columbus' ships, sailed up the Ozama river to re-enact the founding of western civilization's first permanent site. Wearing late 15th century costumes, sailors moored the ship to a replica of a tree used by Columbus' brother, Bartolome, when he founded the city in 1496.

Share With Haiti.

The original city, named Nueva Isabella in honor of Spain's queen, was located on the south shore of the island which Columbus named Hispaniola. Hispaniola, second to Cuba in size among the West Indies, lies between Cuba and Puerto Rico in the Greater Antilles chain. Sharing the island with Haiti, the Dominican republic occupies its eastern two-thirds.

Long called Santo Domingo, the city was renamed Ciudad Trujillo (Trujillo City) in 1936 after President Rafael Trujillo, in gratitude for his efforts in reconstructing the city along modern lines after a hurricane in 1930 almost completely demolished the city.

Proud of their capital city's long history, the 2,000,000 people of the Dominican republic are even more conscious of its modernity and up-to-dateness. Ruins of the first hospital built in the Americas are a short distance from the sun decks of the city's ultra-modern tuberculosis hospital. The vine-covered arch of the first monastery in America offers an exciting contrast to the modernistic verandas of the Jaragua hotel, reputed to be the finest resort hotel between Miami and Rio de Janeiro. The Cathedral of Santo Domingo, another "first" in the Western hemisphere, is close to a long row of modern government buildings.

FAMOUS TREE . . . Two nuns and a little girl stand at the base of Ciudad Trujillo's famous tree, the old cottonwood to which Bartolome Columbus, brother of the new world's discoverer, moored his ship in founding the oldest city in the Western hemisphere.

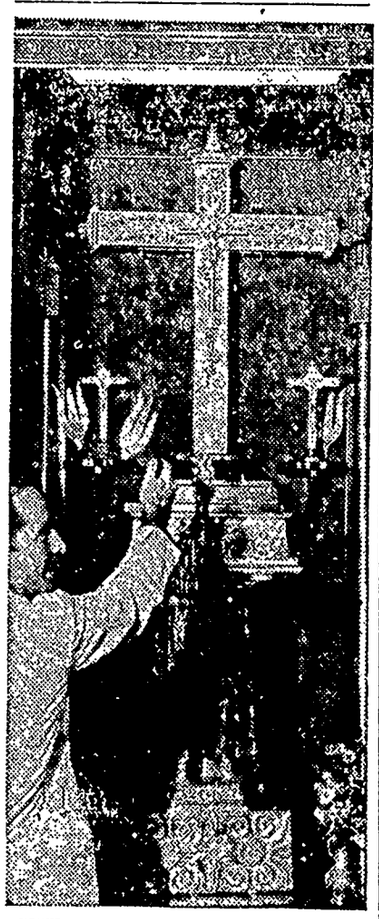
Wrecked by Hurricane.

Two violent hurricanes striking 428 years apart each stimulated the community's growth. The first occurred in July, 1502, demolishing the few flimsy buildings of the six-year-old post. The second struck the Dominican capital in September, 1930, a few days after Trujillo became president.

Through most of the 16th century, Santo Domingo thrived as Spain's capital of the western world. Columbus visited it often, even ignoring a royal decree when he stopped there on his last voyage. In accordance with his wishes, he was buried there. Ashes of the great admiral now rest in the Cathedral of Santo Domingo, awaiting transfer to the Columbus Memorial lighthouse, soon to be built on a high promontory just outside the city as a beacon for ships and planes.

Nobles seeking gold, scientists and explorers, rich, enterprising merchants, flocked to the new world's capital, making it a springboard from which new conquests were launched. Cortes, Balboa, Pizarro, Ponce de Leon, De Soto and others made it the starting point of important voyages of discovery.

Two centuries of decay followed capture of the settlement by Sir Francis Drake in 1586. Spanish interest was diverted to mainland mineral wealth. Internal quarrels, attacks by English, French and pirates thinned the colony to 500 people by 1735.



CHURCH TREASURE . . . Valued at five million dollars, the above church treasure was on display during Ciudad Trujillo's anniversary fete. Included are the original cross planted on the island by Columbus, an altar bell designed by Benvenuto Cellini, famous Italian artist, and other priceless items.

One of the few temples ever erected for the purpose of worshiping the idol of a living person is the Hindu temple dedicated to Gandhi which was opened recently at Shripur, Beguserai, Central India.

Soil Termed Great Laboratory For Production of New Drugs

Soil not only is the source of life-supporting food but also is a great laboratory in which are produced many new-found drugs for curing diseases of man and beast against which even good nutrition cannot prevail, according to Alden Stahr and Dr. Boyd Woodruff in an article in Capper's Farmer.

"These are the so-called miracle drugs, first of which was tyrothricin," says the article. "Then came penicillin, used extensively during the war, followed by actoinomyein, streptothricin, clavicin and gumagicin. Others have been discovered and more are in prospect."

Among the things scientists have seen and identified, Stahr and Woodruff point out, are: One-celled plants, molds, green plants, animals, protozoa, worms and nematodes. And these soil inhabitants do more than provide fertility to the soil. In their struggle for existence, many of them throw off waste products and create chemical substances which are deadly to disease germs. Thus a very special strain or species of fungi yielded penicillin, which shared the credit with blood plasma and the sulfa drugs in greatly reducing the wound mortality rate in World War II as compared with the First World war.

"The soil," conclude the writers, "is so complex a mixture that there must be many other healing agents found in it. Many of man's 2,000 diseases still are unconquered. Most prevalent of all, of course, is the common cold, which causes more economic loss and discomfort to people than any other disease and, weakening the system, paves the way for more serious ailments."

Woman Mail Carrier No Longer An Oddity

SEATTLE.—Accepted among the men in the station and the housewives on her route as a seasoned veteran and a neighborhood fixture, Mrs. Ellen Nermo, substitute mail carrier at the Seattle post office for the last two years, is planning to take civil service examinations for permanent appointment.

Recalling her first day as a letter carrier, Mrs. Nermo said, "I thought one woman was going to faint when she saw me come up the steps. Kids used to gather in knots and whisper when I appeared."

Mrs. Nermo was among the women hired by the Seattle post office when war depleted ranks of carriers.

Her only trouble, Mrs. Nermo insists, was with a housewife after she made a wrong delivery of a letter. "This woman kept lecturing me about the mistake and I took it as long as I could, then told her off," Mrs. Nermo said.

HANCOCK COUNTY CHURCH HISTORY

By Frank Senneff, Britt

Among the oldest churches in Hancock County was the German Methodist Episcopal Society, first organized in Ell Township as a mission church, prior to 1871, the regular Methodist Episcopal Society orieginated in Garner. Subsequent churches to be established in Garner were the German Reformed Church in 1884, the First German Evangelical Lutheran church in 1894, the First Congregational Church in 1892, and St. Boniface Catholic Church in 1912.

The oldest church in Britt, too, is of the Methodist denomination, having been organized in 1878 and erecting its first church building in 1881 at the cost of $1500.

The following year, 1879, the Congregational Church Society had its beginning in Britt. Their services were held in the schoolhouse until 1880 when they built their first church. Other churches to spring up in Britt were the Scandinavian Evangelical Free Church in 1891, the First Swedish Independent Baptist in 1898, the Evangelischse Luthrische Dreieinigkeits Gemeinde Ungeaenderter Augsburger Confession in 1903, the Trinity Episcopal Mission in 1902, and the Scandinavian Independent Baptist in 1912. St. Patrick's church had its beginning in about 1905, but was not incorporated until 1911.

Corwith had its first church services in the schoolhouse, conducted by the Congregational and Methodist ministers from Britt. In 1896, the First Baptist Church was incorporated there.

In 1898 and 1899, respectively, the Prairie Center Methodist Episcopal church and the United Brethren of Goodell was established. In Woden, the first Congregational church was begun in the '90's and incorporated in 1899. St. John's Evangelical Lutheran of Woden did not have its beginning until 1913.

The First Methodist Church of Kanawha was started in 1899, followed by the Kanawha Christian Reformed church in 1900.

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Klemme was incorporated in 1892, the same denomination sprung up in Hayfield in 1897; while Crystal Lake saw its first Methodist Episcopal establishment in 1899.

It can be said that the greatest growth of churches in Hancock County took place between the years of 1890 to about 1912.

A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Stutgartt Germany
July 31, 1946

Dear Ray:

Have a little time this morning so I will drop you a few lines as I should have done before.

We have been getting the Klemme Times regularly and it is very interesting.

My brother and I are still together yet and have been most of the time

How's the town of Klemme coming? They haven't carryed it away yet have they?

What I have seen of Germany there is not much left of it. I have traveled mostly in the southern part and there is not much left of the large cities. We were in the town of Ulm once. They have a very historical church there which has the highest steeple in the world on a church. It is a wonderful place to see. The pipe organ in the church has pipes 40 feet in length. The church is very large and we climbed to the very top and it has over a thousand steps which are made of stone.

As you can see I am in the Constabulary, was trasferred out of the Armour. This Constabulary is very strict as they have to be, each and every one of us have the right to be police men, to search the German civilian, so called krauts. Lately we have been going on raids searching the home.

My brother Carroll and myself play in the Regimental band for parades and Guard Mount, we also play retreat each afternoon a 5:30.

I would like very much if you would put our new address in the paper, it is as follows:

Cpl. Merle L. Etchen 37807235

New York.

Cpl. Carroel Etchen 3780244

This is all for now and thanks again if you will put it in for me.

FIX CHILD'S CLOTHING BEFORE SCHOOL STARTS

With school days just around the corner, it's time to take a look at your child's wardrobe to see what he has and what he needs, say Iowa State College clothing specialists.

Someday soon when you're especially enthusiastic, take down the clothes hangers, empty the dresser drawers on the bed and start taking an inventory. Go over each garment or article for its possibilities. If it can be used as it is or if it can be made over, they're all for it, both for the sake of the clothing budget and because shortages in children's cloths still exist.

Make a pile of the cloths that need fixing and get the "fixits" as soon as possible. With lunches to make and studying to supervise, it's harder to get the mending done after school starts.

When you've looked over the entire wardrobe for each child and found some gaps that can't be filled with what's on hand, there's your buying guide. Maybe you'll have to hunt in the stores for quality things but, say the specialists, they pay in the long run. In your selections give some attention to size. Taking up the hem this year is a small task if the garment can be made to do more than one season.

Clothes big brother and sister are through with can often save a trip to the store. They're the basis for some makeover jobs. And a "too-tight" skirt of mother's may make a dandy for the young school girl.

Abandoned army clothes, the specialists say, are not to be forgotten. Kahki dyed a pleasing color works fine made into a snow suit for the small fry Then there's a whole wardrobe to be made for a child from army shirts or shirttails, junior sized shirts, overalls, jumpers,, skirts and trousers. The lighter weight wool from uniform will make a variety of school clothes. Trim them with bright buttons, embroidery or applique. they suggest.

The best oil for paints is linseed oil, though soybean oil can be used satisfactory up to 50 percent of the total liquid in the paint.

One of the best starting feeds for baby pigs is rolled oats.

Union Baseball Up Again

The fight to unionize baseball has flared up again, with the Pennsylvania state labor board accepting jurisdiction in the Pittsburgh baseball club's case. Casey at the bat may yet be there with a union card as well.

—*—

Unionized baseball intrigues us. We are tired of the old patterns in the national game and yearn for such items in the box scores as "out at first under checkoff rule" . . . "left on bases; stockholders, 7; directors, 5" . . . "forced at third by jurisdictional dispute."

—*—

The game has become too smooth and peaceful. Gone are the old days of brawls and fireworks every inning. What may be needed are some flashy interludes where the pickets overturn some automobiles in the outfield, where a game is called on account of tear gas or where some Petrillo of the national fame orders a team to use four players at first, and put on extra shortstops at night games.

—*—

It seems to us that modern ball players lack the martial spirit. There is too much friendliness and goodwill on the field. Can you imagine Phil Murray taking a third called strike with nothing more than a scornful look?

—*—

It seems to us evident that the modern baseball player needs protection. He is too prone to taking a third strike philosophically instead of blaming it on the front office. He is too inclined to lose a pennant with a shrug of the shoulders instead of with a protest that he is being crucified by management.

Union rules will level off rewards. There is no reason why a man who can sock homers every day should get more than a fellow worker who does his best but can't poke one out of the infield. Hits and runs are not the proper measure for rewards. All men are created equal, and beyond that it is just luck, rhythm and box scores.

Robert Murphy, who is doing the union organizing in baseball, is a Harvard man. This puts Harvard one up on Yale and Princeton, but we hear Yale may soon demand a 40-hour week for golfers, while Princeton will ask for the four-day week for horseshoe pitchers.

Batter up! And, remember, a fair division of the profits or else.

"Take It Easy. Avoid Accidents" has been formally adopted as a slogan in the war against auto accidents, and stickers are being issued to be pasted on windshields. All of which makes us giggle. "Take It Easy" lacks punch, but even if it were a good slogan a windshield sticker would be about as effective against auto accidents as a harp solo against the atomic bomb.

—*—

Death and slaughter rule the road—
At laws the goofy drivers snicker;
So up and at the killers all—
We'll fight 'em with a windshield sticker!

They beat the green, defy the red;
They run folks down with yells of "Quicker!" . . .
So let us act decisively—
The cry is "Forward . . . with a sticker!"

Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

THERE is a pitcher we think is a trifle overlooked. We say that because all the ball players we've talked to lately rank him as the best in either league.

No—his name isn't Bob Feller or Spud Chandler or Tex Hughson. He is a wiry left-hander by the name of Harold Newhouser of the Tigers. Newhouser was the best pitcher in baseball in 1944 when he won 29 games. They threw that one out. A war year.

Newhouser

Newhouser was the best pitcher in baseball last season when he won 25 games and took over the World series. They threw that one out, also. Another war year.

Wait until the big hitters come back, they said last spring—Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, Dom DiMaggio, Bobby Doerr, Bill Dickey, Charlie Keller, all these and many others. So what happens? Newhouser has been winning six times out of seven.

And Newhouser has been winning these games with a third-place ball club—a ball club that without Newhouser would be in fifth place. Newhouser was the best pitcher in baseball in 1944 and 1945. It is our prediction that he also will be the best pitcher in baseball in the current season of 1946.

It's Newhouser, 9 to 1

We decided to make a fuller check on Newhouser in his own league. We took a survey from 10 well-known veterans who know their way around. Nine gave us Newhouser, one gave us Bob Feller.

I asked Bill Dickey what he thought about the matter. The Arkansas quail hunter gave us a slow smile. "I'm already in enough trouble," he said, "without getting into another argument. When I came back to baseball this spring, I heard that Newhouser was just another wartime pitcher.

"Our league happens to be well stocked with fine pitchers. I mean Chandler, Hughson, Ferris, Harris, Trucks, Kramer and a few more. But so far I haven't seen a better pitcher than Newhouser. You know how hard it is to win 20 games. Newhouser has won 54 in the last two years. It wouldn't surprise me to see him win 30 or more this year.

"What has he got? About all it takes. A good fast ball. A good curve ball. Good control. A lot of confidence in himself. Determination to win. A good head. Plenty of heart."

Unless something disastrous happens suddenly, it is a pretty safe bet that Hal Newhouser will lead both leagues on the pitching side. It is also a pretty fair bet that he will pass the 25-game mark again and threaten the 30 spot, which few have ever reached.

Two 40-Game Winners

So far as so-called modern baseball goes the only 40-game winners I can recall at the moment happen to be Ed Walsh and Jack Chesbro. Among the 30-or-more game winners, we've had Matty, Johnson, Smokey Joe Wood, Dizzy Dean, Grover Alexander, Lefty Grove and possibly one or two others. Only Matty and Alexander have won 30 or more games three times, in the past 40 years. You can let us know if our memory is slipping.

Newhouser has yet to be a 30-game winner. But the willowy Tiger left-hander has the best chance to reach this mark for 1946. He comes so close to being the best pitcher in the game that someone else will need a spur to crowd him back before the stretch run ends in September.

Bob Feller, Spud Chandler and Tex Hughson are all great pitchers. Among the best. But all three will have to put on extra steam to crowd back Newhouser, who has been baseball's best pitcher for three years.

About the Two Leagues

Several querulous letters have come in since the all-star game from National league supporters asking what has happened to the veteran circuit.

"Why is it," one asked, "that the American league should come up with most of the top stars—such men as Ted Williams, Charlie Keller, Bob Feller, Newhouser, Chandler and so many others who apparently outclass most of the National league's best men?"

The sad facts—sad for the N. L.—are that the older league this season can match the younger circuit neither in stars, nor in average playing strength. The N. L. has no pitchers to rank with Feller, Newhouser, Chandler, Hughson and others. Outside of Johnny Mize it has no power hitters who can be classed with Williams, Greenberg, Keller, DiMaggio and several more. This was all known before.

It would have taken a Carl Hubbell, a Dizzy Dean, a Matty or an Alexander to remove the noise from A. L. bats this season.

JESUS AND PURE LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:14; Proverbs 4:14-23; Matthew 5:8; Philippians 4:8.

MEMORY SELECTION — Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs 4:23.

Moral corruption has been the ruin of the great nations of the earth, and if history is not to be repeated by the fall of our own nation, we must do something—yes, something prompt and drastic. The breakdown of morals in our land is so evident and so widespread as to give grave concern to social and national leaders. What then, is the Church doing about it?

We do not like to talk about adultery and related sins. We must speak with care and tact, but perhaps the time has come for some straightforward dealing with an unpleasant situation.

I. Keep Your Home Pure (Exod. 20:14).

As the divinely appointed center of man's life, the home holds a place of such importance that it is the special target of Satan's offensive. That has always been true, but it seems that in recent years the onslaught against the home has been intensified.

Any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God.

It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral and spiritual.

This awful sin (and do not let a wicked world convince you that it is anything else) is back of much of the discord and divorce in our American homes.

When we realize that in the City of Chicago there is now one divorce for every three marriages, and that the ratio is rapidly becoming lower, there can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. Statistics are positively shocking, but they are cold and quickly forgotten. But who can fail to see, and who can forget, the awful woe brought into American home life by divorce.

Bad as it is, the awful effect on parents is nothing compared to the nervous, moral and spiritual shock which comes to children in broken homes. Statistics reveal that now (1946) more than 70 per cent of the juvenile delinquents and young people committed to prison come from homes where divorce has entered to break down and destroy family life.

II. Keep Your Heart Pure (Prov. 4:14-23; Matt. 5:8).

Out of the heart are the issues of life (Prov. 4:23); hence it is of the utmost importance that it be kept in purity and devotion to God.

The heart in Scripture does not refer to the physical organ which circulates the blood, but even as that heart is the center of the physical life, so there is a spiritual heart which is the very center of man's inner being.

Evil thoughts, unholy desires and ambitions hidden in the heart will ultimately be revealed in overt acts of ungodliness, unless God is permitted to regenerate that heart and make it clean.

The solution for the problem of impurity is found in our lesson verses. First of all one must avoid the way of the wicked (Prov. 4:14-17). They are so evil that they cannot sleep until they have misled some poor souls and brought them down to their own level (v. 16). They make sin and immorality look mysterious and attractive. Don't be led into sin by the enticement of curiosity.

Shun the evil way, which goes down with increasing darkness, by seeking the good way which "shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18, 19). The way of life is a bright and shining way. Don't let Satan fool you, young people, into thinking the opposite. It's great to be a Christian!

III. Keep Your Head Pure (Phil. 4:8).

The mind of man is quick and active (that is, if he is really alive and awake), and it wants to be occupied with something of interest. The world, the flesh and the devil are keenly aware of that fact and come to fill his mind with allurements to sin and destruction.

Thank God that no one need lack for things that are good, honorable, true and noble to fill and satisfy every mental as well as spiritual interest. God's provision is not limited either in scope or variety. He provides the best, the most delightful, the loveliest and most noble.

Observe that it is for us who know Christ as our Saviour to give ourselves in diligent effort to "think on these things." As we do we shall find that they crowd out our thinking those things which are sensual, selfish or sinful. It is a sound principle of psychology as well as a spiritual admonition. It really works.

Household Hints

Tip on painting: Don't overload brush, dip it one-third its length, and keep the can about half full.

To remove dust from wall paper, wipe with a soft wall brush or soft cloth. Hard rubbing will streak and roughen the paper.

Drab-looking flower pots can be brightened by going over them with ordinary wax crayons.

It is easier to iron dresses and blouses in this order; sleeves, back, front and collar.

Late fall is regarded as the best time to do house painting, for by then the long summer sun has removed all moisture from the wood.

If you wish to mix cheese with other ingredients to be cooked, cut the cheese in small pieces or grate it.

Let a child's going to bed be a pleasant experience. Then he won't be as apt to rebel at the idea. Never send him to bed as a form of punishment. Builds up wrong attitude.

Heavy roof paint applied to inside of metal gutters will prevent rusting for a long time.

ATTENTION

DEAR PUBLIC:

We wish to direct this missive to every citizen, and Veteran of World Wars I and II of Hancock County.

As you know a campaign will soon be underway, whereby we are trying to make it possible that Hancock County will have a Modern Hospital of its own.

We are paying all the campaign expense that is involved and there is no expense whatever to the County. We are mailing or delivering literature to every Citizen of the County, and if anyone is missed it's only because we did not have your name.

The Hospital Condition throughout the County is so extremely crowded that is is impossible to be admitted anywhere today except in case of emergency, and with the constant increase of population it will never end.

No New Physicians are likely to locate in our County, or any other Community, without the use of a Modern Hospital, because they do not have the time or desire for Country or Small Town Practice without the advantage of Hospital Facilities. The Hospital will have about 50 beds, and every known Modern and Necessary convenience.

The Hospital will be built in Honor of every Veteran who received or will receive an Honorable Discharge, but is to be a Hospital for the use of the public.

We know a Hospital is critically needed by the Citizens of Hancock County, and believe that we are doing the right thing in assuming the responsibility in sponsoring this move ment.

We further believe that this Living Memorial will be one of the greatest assets that Hancock County may ever have.

Won't you Vote "Yes" on September 10th. for the Hospital?

We served when called upon to Defend You, now we are calling on you for a vote for our Memorial.

THANK YOU—

Hancock County To Have Many Exhibits At Iowa State Fair

For most 4-H exhibitors this year's fair will be their first State Fair, Hazel Grimes, county extension home economist, explains. Most members who took part in the 1941 and previous fairs are no longer enrolled.

The county will be represented in the 4-H girls' home economics department by a demonstration team from the Boone-Magor Pals 4-H club. Members of the team are Ardys Baily and Mary Pierce. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Percy Bailey, their leader.

Exhibits have also been entered in 7 classes of the oven products division. Top blue ribbon products exhibited in the County Achievement Show are eligible. The girls showing these are:

DISCARDING PICKLE JUICE MEANS WASTE OF SUGAR

Throw out the juice left on a quart jar of pickles and you'll be tossing away a quarter of a cup of sugar, acording to Jewel Graham, Iowa State College nutritionist.

That does'nt sound like much but it adds up when you have to take sugar out of the sugar bowl to sweeten foods such as salad dressings that could just as well be sweetened with the pickle juice ordinarily destined for the drain.

The liquid left over when you're in the process of making pickles or the liquid left in the jar after you've eaten the pickles either can be used in salad dresings or flavorings.

Miss Graham suggests substituting this liquid for the sugar and vinegar called for in boiled salad dressing. Or use it in place of the vinegar in making French dressing. It can replace the vinegar in deviled eggs.

Beet pickle juice adds a brightening color to cabbage slaw when it's used with sour cream dressing. It can also give an interesting tint to salads when it's used to thin the commercial salad dressings.

Juice from pickled peaches, according to Miss Graham, is especially good for basting baked ham. The spices, sugar and vinegar give the ham a more delicate flavor. And some folks like to use pickled peach juice as part of the liquid for pot roast.

GOP Leaders Intrigue Press With Election Prospects

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — This weather—in Washington and elsewhere—develops more heat than light. That's a trite phrase, I know, but it's apropos because heat, rather than light, is always the keyword at this season, politically speaking. Congress accomplished its fade-out rather gracefully, I thought, even if they must have prayed for forgiveness for "the things we have left undone" as fervently as for the things they did which didn't sit too well with their consciences.

And now the voice of the vote-getter is heard in the land.

Radio and newspaper correspondents are being courted by both political parties. For example, recently, a crowd of radio folk was given a luncheon-table look at the vote-getting machinery behind the Republican lines. Our hosts were Republican Chairman Carroll B. Reece at one end of the table, and Republican Campaign Manager Clarence Brown at the other. (A similar jaunt into Democratic territory will be reported in a future column.)

Reece Quiet, Popular Chief

Reece is a slight, greying, quiet-voiced man whose Tennessee accent reminds one occasionally of Claude Pepper in one of Claude's unoratorical moments if you can catch him in one. (Personal confession: I like Pepper and Reece both and so do a lot of people who would be the first to say, "the views of these notables do not NECESSARILY agree with those of the undersigned.")

It is a little presumptuous of me to refer to Reece as "greying" because the year 1889 had to stretch itself from January to December to fill the time-gap between my birthday and his. He has taught in almost as many academic institutions as I have casually attended. He was a battalion commander in World War I whereas I never rose above the exalted station of shavetail, and among his five decorations are the Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal and the Purple Heart. He was cited for bravery by a marshal, three generals and a colonel.

Perhaps the same qualities which won Reece his decorations qualified him for his present job. He certainly doesn't lack assurance even if he doesn't rattle sabers in expressing it.

But we are not talking about Reece. We are talking about his job. He is out on the hustings, although his trip, which will take him as far west as Seattle and as far south as Georgia, is mildly camouflaged as a vacation. Anyhow Mrs. and Miss Reece are going along, and a part of the time will be spent at a resort in the Rockies.

Backstopping Reece here in the capital where nobody votes, but where a lot of writers and talkers remain, will be Clarence Brown, representative from the Seventh district of Ohio, a state which might be called a latter-day mother of presidents and which right now is looking hopefully over the patterns of maternity gowns.

I have a fellow feeling for Representative Brown, tinged perhaps with the natural deference a reporter always has for a publisher. Brown publishes several country newspapers (that's the way he put it himself in the congressional directory) whereas I merely write for "several" besides this one. Also he has three more children than I have. He and I once met on the debating platform, and while I would naturally never admit that I didn't present the best argument, I will concede somewhat grudgingly that Brown's resounding oratory won him the most applause. We were debating selective service, and I hasten to explain that former Senator (now Supreme court justice) Burton and I had the unpopular side. Anyhow, Brown (may-the-best-man-win) won.

Brown and Reece complement each other very well. Reece is slight, dignified, soft-spoken. Brown is large, loud enough to be heard in the back row without using the PA system, and hail-fellow-well-met. As "campaign manager" he is going to sweat it out (that is literal) with the rest of the Washingtonians who don't vacate in the summer.

Reece and Brown didn't talk on-the-record at the luncheon but I have a good idea of how things looked to the Republicans at that congenial gathering of radio folk. If the elections were held as of that moment, they claimed, the Republicans would win a majority of seats in the house of representatives and would make very heavy inroads on the Democratic majority in the senate. Since then many of the primary battles have been fought and I'll report the reactions later.

NEWS REVIEW

New Farm Plan Studied; Death of UNRRA Looms

UNRRA: U. S. to Quit

Following close upon the blast of Senators Butler (Rep., Neb.) and Ellender (Dem., La.) against use of United Nations relief and rehabilitation funds abroad, Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton told the fifth UNRRA council meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, that the U. S. would not contribute additional funds to the agency.

W. S. Clayton

While the senators had charged that UNRRA supplies were being used to bolster foreign governments, Clayton stated that the U. S. was withdrawing future assistance to the agency because the period of immediate postwar impoverishment was passing and the U. S. and other countries had supplied sufficient credit mediums for financing recovery.

In all, the U. S. provided no less than 2½ billion dollars of aid to UNRRA, sufficient for supplies to fill 2,000 cargo ships.

FARM PROGRAM: New Proposals

A new farm program calling for a combination of sound open market practices and governmental assistance was proposed by the special house committee on postwar economic policy and planning headed by Representative Colmer (Dem., Miss.).

In recommending changes in present farm legislation, the committee urged:

Greater flexibility be allowed in farm prices, especially toward each other.

Supply and demand be given greater opportunity to determine farm prices rather than artificial controls.

Re-examination of the outmoded parity price formula designed to give farmers an income on a par with industrial workers.

Concentration on a long rather than a short range farm program.

For establishing a "floor" under farm prices to prevent a disastrous drop, the committee proposed a support program guaranteeing producers "60, 70 or 80 per cent of parity"; a supplemental payment during hard times to assure a certain percentage of pre-depression income, and limits on the rate of decline for a specified commodity in a year.

CIO: To Fight Prices

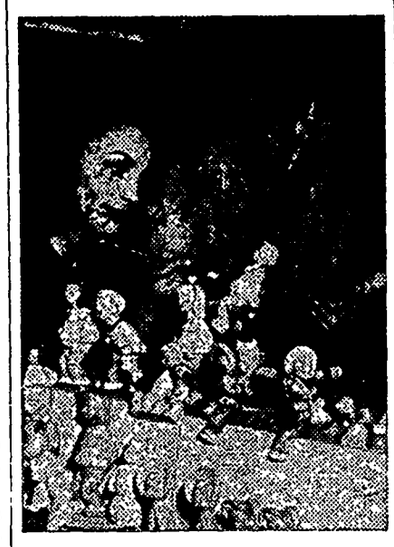
Remaining militant in its postwar program to aid the interests of more than five million members, the CIO announced an all-out drive on rising prices to prevent further depreciation of the workers' dollar.

Revealing that it had given up plans for another big wage drive to win further increases to offset rising living costs, the union stated that demands for more money probably would result in still higher prices.

In forecasting additional price rises of 15 to 20 per cent during the next few months, the CIO said that the corresponding reduction in purchasing power of the consumer's dollar would represent a wage cut of 17 per cent. A successful consumer strike against higher prices would terminate current inflation within the next 18 months at the worst and three to six months at the best, it said.



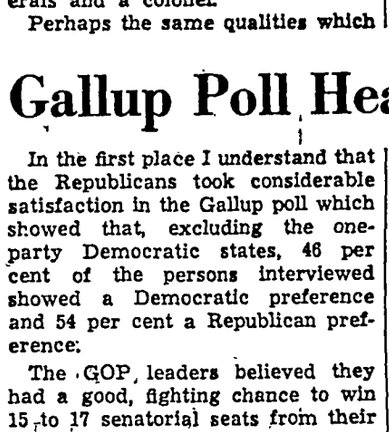
WAR INSPECTION . . . Separated by the war, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Manske found inspiration for a unique business venture. Mrs. Manske, the former Jane Fauntz of swimming fame, sculpted small figurines of their daughter to send to her husband, former football star. Now they are in business selling figurines.

Gallup Poll Heartens GOP

In the first place I understand that the Republicans took considerable satisfaction in the Gallup poll which showed that, excluding the one-party Democratic states, 46 per cent of the persons interviewed showed a Democratic preference and 54 per cent a Republican preference.

The GOP leaders believed they had a good, fighting chance to win 15 to 17 senatorial seats from their opponents. In New York, they say Governor Dewey's good record and the campaign he is planning ought to pull in a Republican senator (they won't say whom). They believe Democratic Senator Mead will have to run for the governorship.

They felt they had a chance in Delaware and West Virginia and that if the ballots were cast at that moment they would win in Missouri (I'm still talking about the senatorial race). They called Montana and Washington probabilities rather than mere possibilities.



Carroll B. Reece and Rep. Brown

O'Mahoney knows he has a fight, they say, and they believe the Republican candidate, John Henderson, has a chance against the popular gentleman from Wyoming.

I heard a lot of talk, too, about the interesting possibility in Connecticut where Repr. Clare Luce was expected to oppose former OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, which would be a colorful affair with all the technical skill of her publisher husband, and all the skill of an advertising man, Mr. Bowles, pitted against each other.

As to the house of representatives, Republican machinery has been grinding in at least 75 districts.

Ol' Kentuck Bloody Battleground

Kentucky was catalogued as still a dark and bloody battleground. At the time of the luncheon, Representative May's followers seemed to feel, according to press reports, that he was a martyr. If something should come out to change their minds on that score, he might go down to defeat. And we are reminded that, as one Republican put it: "every 20 years or so Kentucky changes its mind."

What the Republicans seem to count on most is the natural reaction, "throw the rascals out" theory which Americans always have reverted to after so long a period of any party's incumbency. In addition, say the GOPundits, there are the usual mistakes of the party in power which result in the well known attitude of one of Clarence Brown's constituents who told him:

"I don't know who I'm FUR, but I know durned well who I'm AGIN."

'ENCOURAGED' DESPITE LAGS

Vet Housing May Reach Goal

WASHINGTON.—Despite reports indicating building lags throughout the nation, Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt predicted that his veterans' housing program will achieve its goal of getting 1,200,000 temporary and permanent homes started in 1946.

Wyatt's prediction was based on a report which he characterized as "encouraging", although it contained facts indicating the picture is not too bright. The report showed:

A total of 496,000 family units of all types were started in the first half of the year. To achieve the 1,200,000 goal, the number of "starts" will have to average 117,000 per month in the last half of the year compared with an average of 83,000 in the first half and with 92,500 in June.

First Slump Reported.

In June, for the first time since the Wyatt program began last January, "starts" of conventional and prefabricated houses and apartments slumped. The June figure was only 62,000, compared with 66,000 in May. To achieve the Wyatt goal, 84,500 of these new homes must be started every month in the last half of the year. They constitute the largest portion of the program.

Production of prefabricated houses has been far below Wyatt's earlier expectations, so that the 1946 goal for "starts" of this type has been reduced from 250,000 to 100,000. To achieve the over-all goal of 1,200,000 family units, the national housing agency will have to start 738,000 conventional type houses and apartments, instead of 650,000 as originally planned, 212,000 temporary homes instead of 200,000, and 100,000 instead of 50,000 "conversions" (adding family units by remodeling older houses and apartments).

In the first half of 1946, 225,000 units of all types were completed. Of these, 72,000 were "temporary" units, such as relocated barracks and trailers. Only 153,000 permanent homes and apartment units were completed, and only 40,000 of these were started after the Wyatt program began.

The Wyatt report attributed to the bureau of labor statistics an estimate that it takes six to seven months to complete a new family unit today compared with three to four months before the war.

Wyatt did not mention in his report that the number of applications for priorities to build under his program declined sharply in June, a fact that may presage another slump in "starts" during July.

Priority applications, which were for 125,102 units during May, dropped to 45,705 units in June. July figures will not be available until September.

New Bong Stories Related On Anniversary of Death

By WNU Features.

On the first anniversary of the untimely death of Maj. Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., America's ace of aces, many interesting facts concerning the modest farm youth who skyrocketed to fame in the armed service of his country are revealed for the first time by the memorial foundation bearing his name.

The admiration and respect for the air hero who shot down 40 Japanese planes, held by his friends and neighbors in the tiny village of Poplar in northwestern Wisconsin, is indicative of the personality and character traits of Bong, the man.

Shunned Limelight.

Bong never considered himself a famous personage. He never thought he was a hero and he consistently refused to accept the plaudits of the crowd. Inherently shy and overly modest, he shunned attempts of friends to place him in the limelight.

It is a matter of record that he usually tried to pass the glory on to others — to his ground crew, his flightmates and even to parents of all servicemen. It was his statement that "the real heroes of this war are the parents who sit and wait at home and suffer the real tortures."

Although Bong in early childhood showed keen interest in aeronautics and flying, it is doubtful that he ever thought he would realize an ambition to pilot a plane. He would gaze longingly at planes that passed over his father's farm, dreaming in awe at the miracle of flight.

Planned to Teach.

Of modest circumstances, he looked forward to a teaching career in his native state. To this end he was enrolled at Superior State Teachers college in Superior, Wis., during the days that fate was sweeping America towards war.

By May of 1941 Dick had entered the army. In November he was accepted as an air cadet. That Bong was an apt pupil and skillful in the handling of airplanes was indicated soon after his training started. In January, 1942, he was made an instructor at Luke Field. In September of that same year he was on his way to the Pacific theater, where he accomplished the deeds now so well known to the world.

'Probables' Unrecorded.

Other airmen, hailing his record of "kills," have stated that Bong shot down at least 9 or 10 more planes than he was credited with, but that because of his rather unorthodox methods of air-fighting, these never were recorded officially. He had a habit of trailing his enemy to doom and consequently no witnesses were on hand to verify these probables.

Of further interest is the observation that the majority of Bong's missions were accomplished at long range; he flew hundreds of miles most of the time before encountering actual combat. Even so, he managed to outscore all pilots, not only in the Pacific area but also on the European front.

His success and skill no doubt were accounted for by his accurate "eye." It was an accepted fact that Dick's eyesight was most unusual, for he could sight an enemy plane quicker than anyone else in his squadron. Once he got on the trail of a Zero, it was almost certain death for his foe, for he rarely missed.

Around his home town of Poplar friends will tell you even today that Bong had a real hunter's instinct. His mother has said that Dick observed things in the dark that others would miss. She tells of his tramps into the woods, gun in hand and a faithful dog at his heels. The Bong family still retains Dick's favorite hunters.

Establishes Record.

On July 28, 1943, he became America's leading ace of World War II when he added four victims to his string. His total was 15 and he rapidly was approaching the mark set in World War I by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker. He had engaged in his 25th operational flight.

In August, 1943, he was promoted to the rank of captain and in October he received the Distinguished Service Cross from General MacArthur for heroism over New Guinea's Markham valley on a mission flown July 26.

Bong passed Captain Rickenbacker's record of 26 planes on April 13, 1944, when he shot down his 26th and 27th enemy planes. In April, 1944, Bong was promoted to major and a short time later he was presented with the Congressional Medal of Honor by General MacArthur on Leyte island.

WAR HERO'S ANNIVERSARY . . . Maj. Richard I. Bong, Wisconsin farm youth, was America's ace war pilot, being credited with 40 Jap planes before he was killed in a test flight.

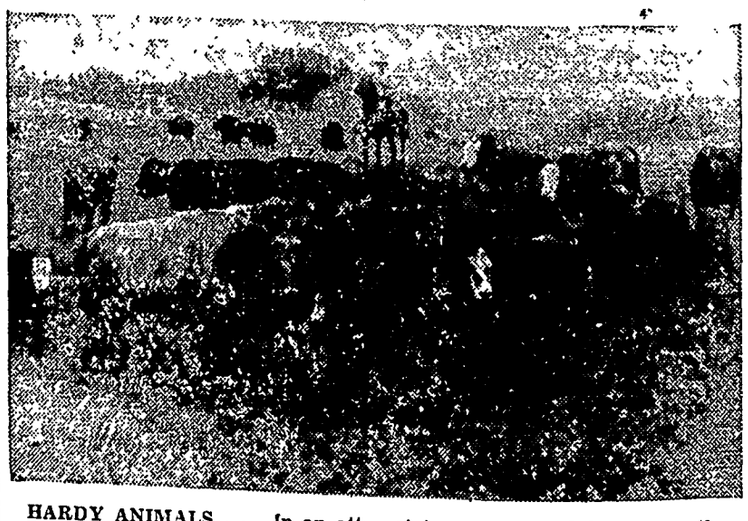
Test Flight Fatal.

Major Bong scored his 40th Jap plane in December, 1944, and not long afterwards he was ordered back to the United States for special duty. He was made a test pilot and it was while flying an army jet-propelled fighter that the accident occurred which cost his life on August 6, 1945. Two days later he was buried in the quiet little country cemetery at Poplar.

The foundation bearing Dick Bong's name was organized by men and women from all walks of life. Its objective is to perpetuate the memory of deeds of all American airmen of World War II, as symbolized in the valor of Major Bong. This it proposes to do through awarding engineering scholarships to high school graduates and through erection of a shrine at Poplar.



HARDY ANIMALS . . . In an attempt to fill the need felt by cattlemen in cold regions of North America for a breed of beef cattle which would weather sub-zero conditions, A. S. MacLellan, dominion herdsman at Wainwright, Alta., Canada, started crossing male beef cattle with buffalo cows 25 years ago. The result was "Cattalo." Today the Cattalo looks more like a domestic animal than a buffalo, although it has inherited the latter's robust qualities and size. In weather which would freeze cattle, the Cattalo survives. After the third generation the buffalo hump has been bred out, reproduction bred in, so crossbreeding was dropped. Quality of the beef is equal to that of the Aberdeen Angus, Shorthorn and Hereford.

Many Texans Will 'Walk Themselves to Death'

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—Approximately 360 Texans will "walk themselves to death" this year, Texas Safety association predicts.

Most of the victims will walk with the traffic and will come from behind parked cars to be struck down, the association reports on the basis of a study of fatal accidents. Other pedestrians will meet death while crossing at intersections against the signal and while crossing diagonally across the street.

Pedestrian fatalities increase around the hour of sunset in all seasons of the year, the survey shows, with the greatest number of mishaps between 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. during the summer months. The Saturday and Sunday toll constitutes approximately 50 per cent of the total pedestrian accidents.

The survey covers fatalities during the first six months of the year.

he early settlers arrived in New Jersey from ey found the Indians growing corn, pumpkins, bacco and beans. Taking a lesson from the na- settlers cleared the land, imported seed and rom across the sea, and developed an impor- ltural colony. It became "the Garden State" nies.

New Jersey has prosperous small farms and of agricultural specialization. Dairy and poul- abound. Small grains and field crops are ost parts of the state. Most of New Jersey's ucts are consumed by ties, or by Philadelphia ork. It is but a step from arket.

Hamilton selected the Sussex county, are world famous. Trap rock, sandstone, argillite granite, slate, marble, talc and conglomerate are quarried in New Jersey, and it has unlimited quantities of sand and gravel, lime, greensand marl and peat.

Despite three centuries of development, about 46 per cent of New Jersey still is in forest!

Of great significance are the oystermen and fishing captains of the Jersey coast, one of the world's truly great fishing grounds. From Sandy Hook to Cape May, the coast provides every variety of fishing.

Three Main Divisions.

New Jersey might be called a peninsula since, with exception of the 50-mile northern boundary from the Hudson to the Delaware, it is entirely surrounded by water. It has three physical divisions. In the north is a mountainous, lake-studded region known as the Appalachian Highlands. The central or Triassic section, with gently rolling hills, supports most of the state's urban and industrial development. The large southern coastal plain has fruit orchards, market gardens, swamps, pine wastes and miles of beaches and shallow bays.

All of New Jersey that touches the Atlantic ocean is famous for its seashore. Asbury Park is one of the best known of North Jersey coast resorts, with boardwalks and convention hall. Long Branch attracted visitors from Philadelphia as early as 1750.

Wide, safe and sandy beaches are plentiful along the southern coast of New Jersey. Atlantic City is known as "the playground of a nation."

Traditionally, New Jersey has been the home of many famous people. James Fenimore Cooper and Capt. James Lawrence of "Don't give up the ship" fame lived next door to each other in Burlington.

Robert Louis Stevenson, when in America, lived at Manasquan. Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton fought their famous duel near Weehawken. George Washington wrote his "Farewell Address" to the army in Berrien House at Rocky Hill. Grover Cleveland, twice U. S. President, was born in New Jersey. Woodrow Wilson was president of Princeton university and governor of New Jersey before becoming President. Walt Whitman's tomb is at Camden. Alexander Woollcott was born in New Jersey.

Its incomparable seacoast, its beautiful lake and mountain country, its extensive fishing and hunting grounds, as well as the innate hospitality of its people—two out of five of whom own their homes—furnish proof enough of the greatness of New Jersey, the "Mighty Atom" among the states of this nation.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

IT'S SAME CROWD AGAIN

PARIS. — It's hot in the galleries of the palace of Luxembourg. In the top gallery sit hundreds of newsmen —Chinese, Siamese, Greek, Indian, New Zealanders, watching a man speak far below. Newsmen from all over the world watching the peace. It's their peace. What's done here will affect their countries from Baluchistan to Iceland, from Saskatchewan to Samoa, and they are watching.

Far below, under the klieg lights, sits Jimmy Byrnes — patient, polite Jimmy Byrnes — never leaving his seat, never failing to listen. . . . A man speaks into the microphone. He's interpreting Molotov . . . in French. Another man speaks. He's interpreting Molotov in English. . . . It takes hours. When, you wonder, will diplomacy ever become modernized? Diplomacy hasn't been changed since 1815. . . . The Vienna conference when the great powers divided up Europe and brought on more wars.

Paris today is depressingly the same. We invent modern methods of warfare. . . . Rockets that may reach the moon, atomic bombs that sink navies, germs that can destroy civilizations. . . . But the weapons of peace never keep pace with the weapons of war . . . nor do the diplomats who wield the weapons of peace.

The same crowd which failed to head off the last war is here again —even some of the same crowd which sat in at the last Paris peace conference. . . . Look at their faces. Poker faces. No life, no lift, no passion for the peace they are negotiating, bored faces, preoccupied faces, bored with the endless translations. Bored with the whole boredom of diplomacy. Not a man among them who lost an arm or a leg, who knows what it is to suffer on the battlefield. These are the men who are writing the peace.

Jimmy Byrnes is not bored. Polite, patient, precise Jimmy Byrnes sits on the front row — perhaps he is too polite, too patient. . . . You feel like shouting down at Jimmy. You wish you had a telephone to reach him there, way down below. You wish you could tell him:

"That was a great speech you made the other day, Jimmy, but finish it. Tell them the rest of the story. Tell them not only that the United States isn't going to remain isolated but also that we're going to raise hell with anyone who blocks our path to peace. Tell them that millions of Americans are fed up with all this frittering; that millions of Americans mean business and will back you up in anything you do."

Around the senate chamber of the palace of Luxembourg are great, gold ornaments. Woodwork carved in ornate shapes, heavily encrusted with gold—remnants of the lush days of the de Medicis. . . . If the French had only been smart. If they had only painted out the gold and substituted white crosses! Then perhaps the bored diplomats sitting below would remember. . . . white crosses . . . from Guadalcanal and Stalingrad, from Salerno and New Guinea, from Tobruk and the Rapido, from Normandy and Aachen . . . Close your eyes and you can see them. . . . Thousands of white crosses. . . . The dead speak:

"We who lie here have nothing left to give.

"To all your praises we are deaf and blind.

"We may not even know if you betray

"The hopes we cherished for mankind."

But the diplomats below don't seem to hear. . . . Men in red plush seats, fastidious men in red plush seats, their nails polished, their cravats carefully tied. They don't seem to hear. They are thinking about procedure and majority votes, vetoes and prestige and whether they will get out in time to take tea with Mrs. Ogden Mills.

One man does hear. He sits opposite Jimmie Byrnes. . . . A big, uncouth man, his hair not even parted. . . . Evatt of Australia. His cockney accent is uncultured but he dares to speak. He is the only man who comes anywhere near preaching the Sermon on the Mount, who tells the bored men in the red plush seats that they must love their neighbors as themselves. . . . Unpleasantly Evatt steps on the toes of the big nations — tells them they have no business sabotaging the peaceful goal of others. . . . They don't like Evatt, but they listen. Even patient, polite Jimmie Byrnes doesn't like Evatt. But he listens. . . . Thousands of men under white crosses listen, too.

BARTERING OVER PEACE

Clement Attlee, prime minister of Britain, speaks — the man who performed the miracle of defeating War Leader Winston Churchill—a modest man, a sincere, earnest man. His bald head shines under the klieg lights. But it is no halo. . . . Some hours before Attlee was haggling with Byrnes over the future of Germany—bartering over the peace of the world; wanting to trade off a British policy in Palestine for an American policy in Germany.

E-valuating 'Morale':

We have been looking into army and navy "E" awards. . . . Even if all the thousands of them were meritorious — which is an absurd hypothesis—this system adds up to a $100,000,000 scandal. Based on a theory that such hooey boosted the workers' morale, it cost probably 50,000,000 man hours in war-plants, 25,000 lost days for officers, diversion of transportation facilities and waste of gas, plus some of the highest-powered hangovers ever experienced by men in uniform.

Army-navy urged these plants to throw celebrations. Some turned into week-long drunks, with whiskey and champagne suppers, imported entertainers and party girls, arriving in private cars and chartered planes. All this was legally deductible for income tax purposes, chargeable against production costs and valid accounting in contract renegotiation.

Officers were assigned, often traveling hundreds and thousands of miles, taking several weeks on a job, all on government pay and travel and subsistence expenses. One public relations officer was always sent on ahead, to whip up the show. Higher ones came on later, to make stuffy speeches, ride in parades and souse up with the happy executives and their ladies.

There was usually a shutdown. All hands were guests at shows and blowouts, in hotels, country clubs, local theatres taken over. Besides, there were more exclusive to-dos for officers and corporation officials, "guardian angels" and other politicians, with costly souvenirs handed out — everything charged as legitimate expense.

PROs were briefed by higher officers to encourage as much hoopla as the plants could swing. Some of them did practically no other work. The signal corps, with only about a half-dozen HQ posts in the country, traveled its advance agents countless miles. Often the plants paid these men's expenses and those of higher officers, although the army did, too, doubling the cost to the taxpayer.

It was one of the sweetest rackets of the conflict to exterminate the enemy by good old Yankee horse-sense and can-do. A triumph of E-bombs!

The Hollywood gin rummy swindle was turned up by a cub reporter (Los Angles Examiner) on his first assignment. The paper had a tip that Michael MacDougall, the sleuth who specializes in such things, was in town. . . . Baker Conrad was sent on this thin tip. . . . He ran into some members of a club he thought might be involved. They were talking out loud—spilling names and all—on the story the youngster wasn't even sure was cooking. . . . He got an earful and ran to a phone. . . . The first newsbreak said only that three sharpers had taken Hollywood big boys — no names mentioned. . . . An hour after the edition hit the street, three heavy winners had engaged a high-priced lawyer to "protect their interests."

The prisoner in the dark Gestapo dungeon in Berlin was tall, gaunt Rudolf Diels, founder of the Gestapo in the first turbulent days of the Nazi regime. Diels had said "no" to Adolf when the fuehrer ordered him to liquidate an old pal who had outlived his usefulness to the swastika-gang. Now, Rudolf sat in his cell, awaiting the hangman—by order of Hitler, who did not like people who dared to say "no."

Standing before Diels was medal-dripping Hermann Goering. "I order you to divorce my sister," growled Goering. "Get out of her life. We cannot have a man in our family hung!"

Diels, a cool character, shrugged his shoulders, told Goering where to go.

Circumstances — too long and involved to relate here—saved Diels from the hangman. Today, sitting in a villa in Nuernberg, he supplies the prosecution with valuable information against the major war criminals. Among his frequent visitors was Capt. Harry N. Sperber, chief German interpreter at the trials.

"Strange," mused Diels to Harry, a sardonic smile on his sallow, sabre-slashed face. "It looks as if —after all—dear Hermann will have a man in the family hung! . . . Himself!"

"Dark of the Moon" has gone home, to the Smoky mountains, where it was written, about its own people, by Howard Richardson and William Barney. . . . It was staged at the Community theatre, in Asheville, N. C. . . . That is 15 miles from where the authors found the ballad of Barbara Allen, theme of their play. . . . Viscount Lascelles, nephew of King George VI of England, has a play he wrote making the Broadway office rounds.

JESUS AND RIGHT USE OF PROPERTY

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:15; Proverbs 30 7-9; Matthew 5.25-33.

MEMORY SELECTION—But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also (Matt. 6:20-21).

Labor Day tomorrow! And much in the thinking of all America will be the right division of the fruits of investment of time and money. Property rights are fundamental. God's word teaches us the proper attitude toward our own rights and the rights of others; namely, honesty, yes, just plain old-fashioned honesty.

In such a time, the believer in Christ needs to be doubly vigilant lest he accommodate his own standards of honesty to those of the world.

I. Honest in Purpose (Exod. 20:15).

We cannot tolerate anything in word or deed that can be regarded as stealing what belongs to another. The very commandment against stealing implies that men have a right to that which they have made, earned or saved.

If no one had any property rights there could be no stealing. Some of our modern political and social isms deny such rights, but their reasoning is clearly not biblical or Christian.

"Thou shalt not steal," forbids every kind of theft, and this includes more than robbery or ordinary stealing (see Lev. 19:11-13).

It relates to every kind of false dealing with another, such as oppression or the withholding of just wages. That, too, is stealing in God's sight.

Perhaps we ought to be more specific and apply the truth to our own day. Stealing includes such things as loafing on one's job, borrowing money from the cash drawer, taking goods from the stock with which one is working, stealing another man's sermon and preaching it as one's own, lifting material out of another man's book without credit, contracting debts which one can never pay, using false weights and measures, adulterating food or other material, "watering" milk for sale, selling worthless stock, dodging taxes or lying to the tax assessor, or using a slug instead of a nickel in the telephone to escape proper payment.

One might add gambling (which is taking another man's property by skill or by chance), making an unduly large profit on the labor of another, making money out of the sorrows and failures of others, etc. To be honest means to be fair, and that has broad implications.

II. Humble in Practice (Prov. 30: 7-9).

It may sound a little odd to hear this man pray that he should be delivered from prosperity. To ask to be kept from poverty is certainly to make a wise request, but to be delivered from riches, why that's certainly not sensible. So reasons the world, but as usual, it is entirely wrong.

Experience has demonstrated that the man who has an abundance of good things usually becomes self-satisfied, assuming that he deserves the credit for his affluence, he forgets God, and what had been a good and useful life is soon destroyed.

On the other hand, it is true that extreme poverty tends to break down a man's morale. Watching his family starve is not conducive to honesty if a man can lay his hands on something to save them, whether it be his or not. We do not justify stealing at any time, but we can well understand that starvation can turn the mind of a normal man into abnormal channels.

III. Heavenly in Principle (Matt. 6:25-28).

The Bible is concerned almost entirely with life on this earth. It tells us very little about heaven except how to go there. But (and here is the important point for us just now) it does give us laws from heaven for life on earth. Our life here, our attitude toward property, is to be heavenly in principle.

We are not to be anxious (the correct translation of "take no thought," vv. 25, 27, 31) about our life, about food, raiment and other necessary things. Proper forethought is all right, but worry? Never!

How shall these things be provided? God will provide. Consider the birds. Do they have nervous breakdowns about where their food and shelter are to come from? They cannot even pray and they are not able to work, and yet God feeds them.

Consider the glory of the flowers of the field, for not even a king can dress as they. The Lord does it. "Are ye not much better than they?"

What about the future? It is in God's hands, and even if it were in our hands what could we do with it? Even tomorrow with its needs, its blessings, its joys and its sorrows is not here yet, and when it does come there will come with it God's gracious provision (v. 34).

OUTLOOK FOR EGG PRICE FAVORABLE

Chicken Prospects Are Also Good But Turkey Prices Somewhat Gloomy

Iowa poultry raisers can look forward to generally favorable prices for chickens and eggs this fall, reports Ralph Baker, Iowa State College marketing specialist. Prospects for turkey prices, however, are not quite so good.

Backer says present signs indicate an upward trend in the price of top-grade eggs until late November. At the same time, heavy storage holdings of eggs are likely to cause the prices of lower grades to lag during the next 2 or 3 months. Further government purchases of dried eggs will tend to raise the price of these lower grade eggs.

Advantage

Poultrymen who bought their chicks early will have the advantage of their pullets producing eggs while the prices are high during October and November.

On the meat side of the outlook, Baker says the earlier hatching dates for chicks and relatively high feed costs have resulted in more poultry being marketed earlier and at lighter weights this year. Because of this heavy early marketing, roaster prices are likely to be higher in October and November this year than last. The tight freezer situation may act to hold prices down.

Turkey Outlook

The more gloomy turkey outlook comes from the fact that producers have had much higher feed costs than a year ago and are faced with large storage holdings. An estimated 10 percent of last year's turkey crop still in storage. This depressing effect on prices is partly offset by the estimated 15 percent drop in turkey production this year.

Baker also points out that the storage holdings are mostly heavy toms. This means the price spread between hens and heavy toms this year is likely to be rather wide. Early turkeys are likely to sell at a lower price than later turkeys, with birds for the Christmas market being the best position.

FORROW PIGS ON PASTURE IN FALL

If Farrowed There They Get A Good Start And Will Save Feed Costs

One of the best ways to give young fall pigs a running start in putting on fast gains is to have them farrowed on pasture, says Damon Catron, Iowa State College swine specialist.

Satron says good pasture stimulates a heavy milk flow in the sows, and will save from 25 to 50 percent in scarce, high-priced supplement. Up to 15 percent also may be saved in grain required to put on 100 pounds of pork.

Store Nutrients

Experimental results show that when pigs are forrowed on pasture and get their start on good grass and legumes they store essential nutrients in their bodies which help carry them through the winter drylot feeding period. If pastures play out, Catron urges that 10 percent good high-quality alfalfa meal be added to the growing ration.

He also lists creep feeding as a booster to fall pig growth. The main job is to get the little pigs growing fast before cold weather sets in. Plenty of good feed is necessary to get the job done, and creep feeding is one way to make sure the pigs get the feed. Tests indicate that when pigs are fed in a creep, 125 pounds less feed is needed to put on 100 pounds of gain.

Best Care For Sows

Catron emphasizes, however, that the best feed possible won't make good pigs or good profits if the pigs are not good to start with. To insure big, strong litters of pigs, he urges farmers to take the best care of their sows during the gestation period. During the last third of this period, especially, sows should get at least a third to a half pound of protein supplement per day. This is the time when most of the growth of the pig embryo is taking place. If corn is short, the grain ration can be made up of two-thirds oats and one-third corn.

Arrange now for seed of alfalfa and bromegrass for fall seedings. It's also time to free the ground of weeds where the seed is to be sown.

To help insure egg quality during hot weather the eggs should be gathered twice a day in a wire basket and promptly cooled in the basement.

The July 1 forecast for the nation's corn crop is 3,342,000,000 bushels, which would be the largest on record.

Farm Bureau Women's Booth At North Iowa Fair

Hancock County rural women will again be represented by a booth at the North Iowa Fair in Mason City, according to Mrs. L. F. Weaver, who is chairman of the booth committee. This is one of the activities which was suspended during the war.

A unit of the "Time Management" lessons in the Family Living Program will be displayed as the special feature of the booth. Be sure to visit this booth when you are at the fair.

Attention Voters!

Listed below are a number of average to well improved farms of 160 acres selected at random through out several townships in Hancock County of which the assesed valuations of each is officially recorded in the Office of Roy McMillin, Treasurer of Hancock County. The average well improved farm is assesed at about $8,000.00.

As provided by Law, ½ Mill or 50¢ per thousand dollars upon the above amount is $4.00 per year until the bond issue is retired. $4.00 annual assesment upon 160 acres is 2½ cents per acre. Land which is practically impossiable to purchase for less than $200.00 per acre and some of which has recently been sold considerably higher.

Taxes on Town Property

Very few homes in various town in Hancock County are assesed over $2500.00 and the majority of homes for much less, therefore, few home owners will sustain a tax above $1.25 per year in support of constructing a Hancock County Memorial Hospital, for Public Use.

In all probability the bond issue will be retired completely in 10 years.

The problem of Taxation is certainly of minor importance when consideration of the benefits and services to be derived in the accomplishment of such a grand achievement when carefully analyzed.

This statement and figures are made to off set false statements of rumors that are being made about the cost of constructing a County Memorial Hospital. Further we wish to again remind you that any Tax paid toward or for any Public Building or Institution is deductable from Income Tax, and we submit these facts and figures for your approval.

IN THE INTEREST OF COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL . . . TO SHOW THE SMALL AMOUNT OF ANNUAL TAX ON PRESENT ASSESSED VALUE:

RADIO CASE 180,760,492

(Reversing the situation, a Sunday night radio listener has John J. Anthony, "What's Your Problem Man," on the stand):

Q. Now, Mr. Anthony, what's your complaint?

A. I have no complaint. You're mixed up.

Q. Come, come, Mr. Anthony, there must be times when organ music and poetry let you down a bit.

A. Never. Give me a poem, an organ and other people's troubles and I'm as happy as a lark.

Q. Mr. Anthony, there MUST be something bothering you like everybody else. Are you happy at home?

A. Certainly.

Q. Well, go on in your own way and tell the radio audience why.

A. On my program we only tell why people are NOT happy at home.

Q. Why stay in a rut? Out with it, when did your happiness begin? In what quarrel did you first notice it?

A. I tell you, there was no quarrel.

Q. No fights, no quarrels, no dissentions?

A. None.

Q. You mean to tell the judges who have kindly come here tonight to get a little free publicity that nothing has ever happened in your home that the radio audience should know about?

A. I do.

A Judge: That's the old familiar pattern by which so many marriages go on the rocks, my boy. What you need is a good family quarrel. My advice to you is that you go home and try being very unhappy for a change. It may make a new man of you.

Q. Let's make out you are another case, Mr. Anthony. Say, Case 3457289. That's the case that won't go out and get a job and help keep the home. Now, why don't you go to work instead of sitting around all week waiting for Sunday night to come?

A. I don't sit around all week.

Q. And, furthermore, when did this woman desert you?

A. What woman?

Q. Please go on and tell us all about it in your own way from that point.

A. What point?

Q. The point where you told your father you wanted to play the bazooka like other kids and he ordered you out of the house with the baby.

A. You're all mixed up.

Q. Now, Mr. Anthony, remember what you said at my office. You said you were willing to take the four cross-eyed sisters in to live with you if the soldier would give them a name and wear shoes at the dinner table. Pull yourself together and speak distinctly into the mike.

A. Could I read a poem to touch the heart now?

Q. All the hearts in tonight's audience have been already touched. Dr. Spotlight, what do you think of this case?

Judge Spotlight (coming out of a trance): I see no problem here at all. This man should live with the three deaf aunts until their grandfather finishes his college course. It will be time enough after that to see about formal adoption. Furthermore, I think the boy who wants to come home from the penitentiary and beat his mother is wrong. There is something to be said for the mother's stand that she wants no part in the beating unless assured the fight is broadcast.

Just Casting About

Fred MacMurray has been chosen to play the male lead in "The Egg and I." We rather looked for the part to go to "Hennery" Fonda or Walter Pidgen.

Tom Drake and Donald Duck would have sounded okay in the egg play, too.

Cary Grant plays Cole Porter in "Night and Day" and if he looks or acts like Porter then Monty Wooley is the image of Tad Jones and the ideal man to play the late Arthur T. Hadley would be Jimmy Durante.

SO FAR 1946 has been an amazing season in two ways—for its brilliancy and its failures. For its Mexico—and the good that Mexico has done for ball players everywhere.

Ted Williams

The Red Sox, Joe Louis and Assault have taken full charge of the spotlight side. They have been the outstanding champions. Golf has no entry with Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson, the two leading money winners, trailing Lloyd Mangrum in the U. S. Open. We seem to have the best tennis players but a Frenchman is still the Wimbledon winner.

What has happened in the first year after the war? Except in the way of record attendances and general enthusiasm, the aftermath of World War II hasn't even approached the aftermath of World War I. Not in the way of competitive class.

Can you name competitors today who have anything like the combined class of Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden, Tommy Hitchcock, Rogers Hornsby, Earl Sande, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Red Grange, Man o' War? We have Joe Louis. But Joe Louis has been the world's heavyweight champion for over nine years.

We have Ted Williams, but Ted Williams hit over .400 before the last war. He was a great ball player, or at least a great hitter, before World War II ever developed a slight fever. Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman go well back before World War II.

The brief postwar period has developed a wild stampede to the box office. But very little beyond that. In baseball the batting stars today include Ted Williams, Dixie Walker, Dom DiMaggio, Vernon, Musial, Hank Greenberg and a few more. But these are veterans—most of them. Hal Newhouser of the Tigers and Rocky Graziano have been the two leading stars since 1941.

Against this list I haven't the heart to give you the names of those who have faded, folded up or slipped badly—who, returning from army and navy assignments, fell far behind. The outstanding performance of 1946—so far—has been the Red Sox, plus Ted Williams. Plus the Dodgers' fine showing against heavy odds, player for player. The second nomination is Joe Louis—who against Billy Conn had almost no opposition.

Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson are the two major money winners in golf—but Lloyd Mangrum is Open champion and Herman Keiser is the Master's winner. And Sammy Snead is British champion. It is all very much confused, very badly tangled up.

Most Class in Football

In my opinion the feature part of 1946 won't belong to baseball, racing, boxing, basketball, track, golf or tennis. It will belong to football. This applies to both the college teams and the pros. This first applies to the quality of competition. There will be far more class to football than any other postwar sport can even approach.

I understand that over 100,000 applications had been made for the Army-Michigan game back in June. There will be over 200,000 ticket applications for this contest at Ann Arbor. Applications for the Army-Notre Dame game will pass the 300,000 mark before September. Army-Notre Dame and Army-Navy together could leave the 500,000 mark behind — if there was only space enough.

The Navy-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta already has two times the seat applications that Atlanta can handle. Notre Dame, Army, Navy and Michigan will be a triple sellout for almost every contest. The same thing will happen to Southern California and UCLA on the west coast. Also to St. Mary's and others.

But I doubt that Notre Dame will have the team Frank Leahy had in 1943 or that Army will have the team Red Blaik had in 1944 or 1945. The talent hasn't improved, but the crowd interest has. Veterans coming from army and navy service have proved nothing. Some have been better — others have taken a big dip. This has been true in baseball — and it will be just as true in college and pro football.

There will be stars from other years who will shine — and there will be stars from other years who will be flops.

There will be a professional football entanglement that will leave you gasping—and more than a few pocketbooks flatter than a thin plank. In looking on ahead you will also see a big revival in tennis interest — and one of the hottest amateur golf championships any galloping member of the Thundering Herd has ever known. Bud Ward — Frank Stranahan — Cary Middlecoff — golfers good enough to beat the Nelsons and the Hogans in major tests, plus young stars moving up. This has been a rather dizzy season so far, up and down.

TRAVEL FELLOWSHIPS

Providing school teachers with low-fare air travel fellowships on United States international airlines is the objective of a plan broached by J. Parker Van Zandt, director of aviation research at Brookings institution. A teacher awarded a fellowship could "hitchhike" his way abroad and spend six to eight weeks of study and travel in a number of foreign lands at a total cost of a few hundred dollars. Similar fellowships could be accorded foreign teachers to visit the U. S.

AVIATION TRAINING

Several aspects of aviation will gain momentum shortly as a result of educational programs set by scores of major colleges and universities. The Board of Regents of New York State has recommended a State Technical Institute of Aeronautics at Syracuse, N. Y., to provide two-year courses for high school graduates who wish to prepare for junior technical positions in the aeronautical industry. . . . Cornell university has taken over Curtiss-Wright corporation's research laboratory and wind tunnel at Buffalo, N .Y., for use in a co-operative research educational program . . . Illinois U. has set up three aviation courses. They cover flight training, aviation technician training and airplane mechanics. . . . University of Texas plans a new course in airport management in addition to courses already offered in air transportation and airline administration and training. . . . Northwestern university is planning the establishment of new Institute of Aeronautics for the purpose of conducting research on the fundamental problems of the aviation industry, calling for an ultimate endowment of $10,000,000. . . . A course in applied aerodynamics will be offered during the spring term at the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics at New York university. . . . Iowa Wesleyan college has added an aviation department with 16 semester courses.

Citizens and Taxpayers

SEPTEMBER 10, 1946 is the date on which the voters of Hancock County will decide upon whether or not a bond issue will be authorized to erect a County Hospital to be located at Britt. The Committee favoring this proposition has failed to bring forth many items and the following propositions are submitted for the citizen's and taxpayers' consideration:

1. A fifty bed hospital cannot be erected and equipped for $100,000.00 at the present inflated prices. For example, the fifteen bed hospital at Forest City was purchased for $50,000.00 and this figure represents the purchasing power of $50,000.00 at pre-war levels.

2. The larger portion of Hancock residents will still have closer hospital facilities than the proposed hospital at Britt.

3. Assuming the initial cost to be $100,000.00(and it cannot be built for that figure), the owner of 160 acres of land,or property of equal value will pay approximately $60.00 in taxes. But remember, this is only the original cost and does not include support and maintanence or operating loss.

4. If you are unfortunate enough to require hospitalization, your bill for care and services will not be reduced by virtue of the fact that County Hospital facilities are used.

5. A hospital in a town the size of Britt will not attract a well-trained surgen which result in the fact that most hospital cases will have to go to larger cities for adequate care.

6. While it is true that there is some crowding in hospitals in nearby areas and the type of room desired cannot always be obtained, the fact remains that these hospitals have plans to enlarge when materals are again available. It is to be remembered that these crowded conditions are in large measure due to war time conditions and are temporary in nature. A County hospital is a long-time proposition and we should look ahead farther than just the present.

7. Many hospitals of fifty bed capacity are not a financial success and are dependant upon outside aid and contributions to continue operation. In the event such a hospital is owned by the County, this operating deficit would be secured by an increased tax rate over and above that needed for upkeep and maintanence.

8. Th American Hospital Association estimates that the cost of maintaining a hospital is approximately $2,000.00 per bed per year whether used or not. It is immediately apparent that the original cost is only the beginning.

9. The proposed hospital will not reduce the cost of indigent care to Hancock County. This County, as well as others is charged for its quota of indigent cases at the State University hospital. This quota is paid for by the County whether used or not. If the indigent care of this County was treated at the proposed hospital, the taxpayers would be taxed a second time for a service they are already receiving.

10. Any increase in business taxes is reflected in higher living costs and also acts as deterrent to new businesses entering the County as well as the expansion of those already in operation.

11. It is fundamental that high taxation results in the decreased value of property.

It has been our purpose to point out some of the more basic propositions and we earnestly hope that you will give these propositions serious consideration. We feel that any citizen qualified to make up his own mind on this question when he has aquainted himself with the facts involved.

CORN FIELDS START TO DENT

Continued cool cloudy weather slowed up development of corn with reports showing that about 75 per cent of the arceage has reached the roasting stage or better. A few scattered early fields are beginning to dent but most of the corn now needs several weeks of warm dry weather to mature and condition the ears. Present soil moisture supplies are generally adquate to insure good ear size and if weather conditions are near normal during the next month Iowa is assured a large high quality corn crop.

SEES PROCESSING CUT FOR SOYBEANS

If Production Falls Then Curtailment Of Industry To Be Necessary

The greatly expanded soybean industry in Iowa will have to be prepared to curtail some operation if soybean production in the Hawkeye state falls during the years ahead

This is the conclusion of O. H. Brownlee, Iowa State College farm economist, who has made a study of the soybean processing industry in Iowa.

Before the war, soybean processing in Iowa was a relatively minor industry There were enough plants to process only about 8 million bushels of beans in 1940 As soybean production in Iowa tripled from 1940 to 1945, new plants were built to raise the processing capacity to 32 million bushels this year. Some of the Iowa bean crop has been processed in out-of-state plants.

How far processor will have to go in curtailing their operations, or how many plants will have to close down altogether, depends largely upon the outlook of bean production now that the heavy war needs are over.

Possible Low

Previous studies by Brownlee indicate that bean production may fall to as low as 24 million bushels per year. He feels, however, that a 35 million bushel production is a more reasonable estimate. If future bean production is maintained at about that level, or even higher, existing processing capacity appears to be adequate and fairly well distributed to handle all the crop without any of it being hauled long distances.

About a third of the plants in this state use the solvent process, while the remaining two-thirds use the expeller or screw-type process.

Competitive Positions

Although these plants have experienced profitable operations during the war, they may be in a weak competitive position with the more efficient solvent plants after the current high demand for fats and oils falls off

He points out, however, that there are reasons for continued operations of these cooperative plants in spite of their relatively inefficient equipment. The main reason for their continued operation is that they are almost certain to supply farmers with more inexpensive protein supplies.

THAWING BEEF BEFORE COOKING SAVES FUEL

Thawing frozen beef before cooking is not necessary as far as the finished flavor is concerned. However, if you're out to save fuel, thawing meat before putting it on to cook is a good idea.

Belle Lowe, of the Iowa State College Foods and Nutrition Department and B. R. McClurg, of the college Animal Husbandry Department, reported these facts in recent tests on frozen meat at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station.

They used four methods of thawings: (1) Putting the meat on to cook while frozen; (2) defrosting slowly in the refrigerator; (3) thawing at room temperture; (4) thawing in water testing about 120 degrees Fahrenheit stand at room temperature.

All methods of thawing produced cooked products differing little in taste. The meats thawed while cooking took longer to cook and there was more loss in weight. However, cuts thawed before cooking usually lost weight during defrosting, so weight losses were approximately equal.

The new varieties of oats make one of the best grains for growing chickens. Oats can constitute the entire grain ration of poultry feeds if properly prepared and balanced with vitamins and minerals.

FIRST SCHOOL DAYS

With fall on its way, school days are too. School days—new playmates, new friends, new work, new guidance for your youngster. Be sure he's ready for it.

A bran' new tablet, unsharpened pencils and squeaking new shoes.

That's the way a good share of us started our first day at school. And perhaps it's the way your youngster will be initiated into formal education when school bells start ringing again this fall. But just so he gets started on the right foot.

Starting to school is a big event in any beginner's life. It means new acquaintances, new surroundings, and new teacher along with the new shoes.

"First days" can make or break a child's life for the schoolroom. If he's prepared for all his new encounters, school is more likely to be placed on his "desired" list rather than his "undesired."

Education Start At Home

His education should start at home. Now that doesn't mean he needs to learn the ABC's or to count to ten before he's ready for school. That he can learn usually quite easily once he's in the schoolroom.

But before a child is sent off to school, he should know how to get along with others. Child development specialists at Iowa State College say extremely bashful children have difficult time adjusting to school life. And those who do not accept "mine and thine" and "share and play fair" also find this new life confusing.

The child needs to know how to take care of himself. That is, wash his own hands, take care of his own wraps, and eat lunch without an elbow guide. He should know how to be his own traffic cop and watch roads and streets.

Good Health Required

With all the new excitement, he must be healthy. First days of school are a nervous and physical strain.

And above all, the school child must be ready to leave home, to give up his mother and perhaps little sister for a few hours during the day And to accept his teacher as a friend and believe in her guidance.

All this will qualify your youngster for his first days in school, not learning his ABC's.

PLAN NOW TO STORE CORN PROPERLY ADVISES IOWA STATE COLLEGE EXPERTS

Iowa farmers, who are expecting to harvest one of the largest corn crops in history this fall, are advised to plan now for storing the grain so that none of the valuable feed will be wasted.

C. H. Van Vlack, Iowa State College agricultural engineer, points out that on most farms this means expanding storage facilities and putting existing cribs in shape to hold the crop.

Farmers who have been able to get materials to build permanent cribs should locate them where the greatest possible amount of air will circulate through. Such cribs should not be crowded in with other buildings or made part combination building. It's good practice to run cribs north and south for maximum exposure to the sun and wind.

Narrow Cribs

Making cribs narrow also is important in obtaining adequate circulation, Van Vlack says. The maximum recommended width varies in different sections of the state, ranging from 6 feet in northeastern Iowa to 9 feet in southwestern counties.

Putting in proper foundations, floors, walls, bracing, roofing and rat-proofing when cribs are built also will save trouble later and will add many years to the life of the cribs.

Farmers who are unable to put up permanent cribs and want to carry over more corn than their present cribs will hold, can make temporary storages which will do a satisfactory job. Van Vlack believes that even though materials are scarce, most farmers can make satisfactory storages with supplies on hand.

In most cases, some form of pole-type structure may work out the best. Poles should be set firmly in the ground and tied and braced securely. If slat siding of the snowfence type can't be obtained, woven wire can be substituted. Where wooden flooring is not available, a heavy grade of tar paper laid on the ground will keep moisture from coming up into the corn and will help repel rats.

Aluminum and galvanized sheets can be used for a satisfactory roof. Or, if no other roofing can be obtained, covering with slough grass or threshed clover will keep the corn dry. Van Vlack emphasizes that when using such storage,s, however, it's important that the corn be below 20 percent moisture before it is cribbed.

Another possibility for the farmer who has considerable livestock to feed and wants to start picking early is to put part of the crop into ear corn silage.

Van Vlack says plans and suggestions for building temporary and semi-permanent type cribs are available free at most county extension offices or may be obtained by writing directly to Iowa State College, Ames.

DDT MIXED WITH WATER IS NOT A FIRE HAZARD

Iowa farmers need not worry about DDT being a fire hazard in their buildings because DDT in itself is not inflammable, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist. There is danger of fire only when the DDT is mixed with an inflammable solvent such as kerosene or oil.

For this reason, Gunderson recommends that a wettable DDT powder mixed with water be used to spray the inside surfaces of farm buildings. In addition to being safe from the standpoint of fire, this spray gives off no odors or fumes. And it will not penetrate the skin as is sometimes true with an oil emulsion or solution.

Gunderson recommends using a mixture of 2 pounds of 50 percent wettable DDT with 5 gallons of water to spray the walls, ceilings and floors of all buildings which house livestock.

A Times Want Ad will sell it.

Obituary of Mrs. Henry Schwartz

Louisa Wilhemina Schwartz nee Schoper, was born at Eitzen, Minnesota, June 10, 1869. She was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran Church.

She was united in marriage to Henry Schwartz, June 26th, 1887. Five sons and four daughters were born to this union, of whom one, Mrs. Virgil Caffery, preceded her mother in death.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz rented various farms in Twin Lake and Ell Townships and were in the restaurant business in Klemme for a few years. They moved to Klemme in 1905. Mr. Henry Schwartz died May 5, 1933.

About 6 years ago Mrs. Henry Schwartz moved to Garner to make her home with her son, Elmer. She was taken to the Hampton hospital in July and to Iowa City in August. She died at Iowa City August 27th, 1946, at the age of 77 years, 2 months and 17 days.

Surviving her are her children:

Pearl of Klemme; Mrs. Gordon Robinson, Rushford, Minn.; Robert, Eugene, Oregon; Mrs. G. E. Carney, Los Angeles, Cal.; Raymond, Garner; Mrs. Ben Goll, Garner; Elmer, and Irwin, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Two brothers; Henry Schoper of Milwaukee, Wis., and William Schoper, Sioux Falls, So. Dak.; one sister, Mrs. Fred Schwartz, Garner; also 15 grand children and 2 great grand children.

Funeral services were conducted at the Evangelical and Reformed Church in Klemme on Sunday afternoon with Rev. C. Grosshuesch in charge. The text of the sermon was Romans 8,18. The quartett consisting of Allen Barz, Harold Swalve, Milvern Barz and Eugene Haberkamp with Mrs. Leonard Kaduce as accompanist, sang "Rock Of Ages," and "Abide With Me."

Pall bearers were Palmer Jensen, Earl Stille, Art Upmeyer, Louis Knoke, John Goll and Karl Kraus.

Burial wsa made in the Klemme cemetery.

High corn prices will tend to make farmers market spring pigs early and raise fewer fall pigs, That will mean less lard and grease production next spring and summer.

Reports indicate that the corn root worm has caused considerable damage to cornfields in a number of Iowa counties.

t time, every famous has competed on the rpentine course. The classic has grown in nd importance until today it ranks with the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis.

Often dubbed the "daddy of 'em all" in the realm of hill climbs, the Pikes Peak race assumes proportions of an international event with cars and drivers entered from foreign countries as well as the United States.

Undergo Severe Strain.

As the racers roar up the steep slopes of Pikes Peak, their vehicles undergo terrific tests which are used by manufacturers as the basis for new car improvements. From the tires to the spark plugs, the test of strength and stamina is more intensive than any required of a regular passenger car.

The graveled roadbed with its hairpin curves and steep grades is a severe test for tires. The climb of 6,000 feet in a short distance demands expert performance for carburetion, cooling, ignition, spark plugs, wiring and other parts of the motor, as well as a real test of oil and gas.

Thorne to Compete.

Among the big-time drivers scheduled to compete in this year's classic are Joel Thorne, wealthy California racing enthusiast whose car won the Indianapolis Memorial day race; George Berringer, famous Indianapolis racer; Louis Unser, six times winner of the Pikes Peak race, who set the race record of 15 minutes, 34⅖ seconds in 1941; Rene LeBeque and Jean Treveaux, well-known French racers; Al Rogers and Johnny Morrow.

Of the total prize money of $7,500, first place winner will receive $3,000. Six prizes are posted, $2,000 going to second, $1,000 to third, $750 to fourth, $500 to fifth and $250 to sixth.

VOTERS
Of Hancock County!

We respond to the anonymous few who have chosen to call themselves the "Taxpayers Committee", and give you, as citizens and voters of Hancock County, the salient facts with which you should be fully acquainted when you go to the polls to vote the proposition of the erection of the proposed Hancock County Memorial Hospital next Tuesday, September 10th:

1. We have consulted reliable architects who have computed the cost of building a 45 bed hospital cosisting of 166,000 cubic feet, at less than 60 cents per cu. ft. or a total cost of less than $92,000.00. We are positively assured this hospital can be built for less than $100,000.00.

2. The residents of Garner, Corwith, Kanawha, Crystal Lake, Woden, Klemme and Britt, and the rural areas adjacent thereto, have no hospital facilities available to them closer than the proposed site of the Hancock County Memorial Hospital.

3. Under the laws of this State, the tax levy for County hospital construction cannot exceed one-half mill, or 50 cents ON EACH $1,000.00 OF THE ASSESSED VALUATION OF YOUR PROPERTY. If you have a town property assessed at $2,500.00 your tax for this hospital will be $1.25 per year, or $12.50 over a ten-year period. If you own 160 acres of land at an assessed valuation of $8,000, which the records show to be the average assessment in this county, your tax will be $4.00 per year, or $40.00 over a ten-year period. At a cost so slight to each taxpayer, can we afford to be without the protection to our lives and health that a modern hospital in our own community will supply?

4. A modern up-to-date hospital, as proposed, WILL attract surgical and medical talent in all the surrounding communities having access to such a hospital and its facilities. Statistics will prove that physicans prefer the hospitalization of patients, and tend to locate where such facilities are available.

5. May we refer the so-called "Taxpayers Committee" to the County hospitals of Greene, Boone and Hamilton counties for the information that a hospital having a capacity of 40 to 50 beds can be self-sustaining.

6. Hospitalization closer to your home must necessarily reduce the transportation costs to you, in the event you are in need of hospitalization, and provides the opportunity for loved ones to visit you more frequently and cost less to you and to them.

7. THE PRESENT CROWDED CONDITIONS OF OUR HOSPITALS IS NOT THE RESULT OF WAR-TIME CONDITIONS, but has arisen because of an increase in population and the recognition by the medical profession that better care can be given a greater number of persons through hospitalization.

8. It is not proposed that the cost of indigent care to Hancock County will be reduced by the erection of Hancock County Memorial Hospital. It is our desire that this hospital will provide an opportunity for hospitalization of those persons requiring medical attention who are not eligible for hospitalization as indigent patients.

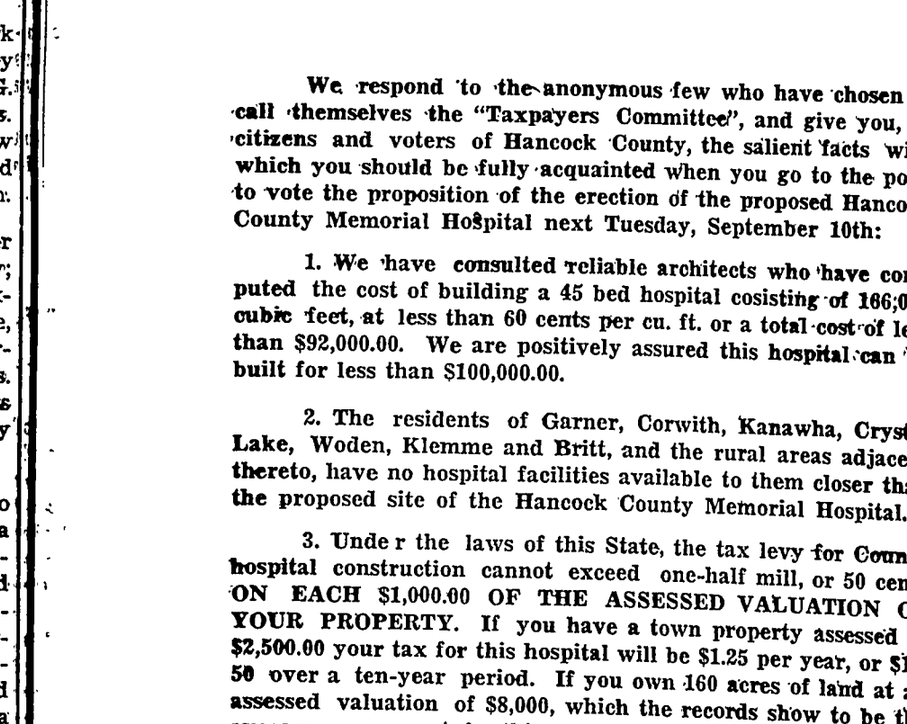
9. Any increase in taxes for this hospital will not be a deterrent to new businesses entering the County, because the benefits to any business created by the proximity of modern facilities will be far in excess of the cost in taxes.

10. Will the close proximity of a hospital add 2½ cents per acre to the value of your farm land? Centainly it seems that it will, AND YET 2½ CENTS PER ACRE IS THE AVERAGE COST PER YEAR ESTIMATED FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THIS IMPROVEMENT TO HANCOCK COUNTY.

11. Certainly it cannot be said that higher taxation can result in the decreased valuation of propery when the benefits derived from the tax are far in excess of the costs of the tax.

12. Can anyone of us evaluate the saving of human life in terms of higher taxation? If we are to choose is it not better that human life, perhaps one near and dear o you, be saved?

We have undertaken the sponsorship of this campaign because we believe wholeheartedly in it and its improvement of the community in which we live. We want every citizen of Hancock County to believe in it, and to support this campaign by voting "Yes" on September 10th.



WE ASK YOUR SUPPORT!

Small fruits on pepper plants that have grown luxuriantly are the result of high temperature and too little moisture. High temperature and low humidity cause excessive loss of water from the leaves. This makes layers of tissue where blossoms are attached to the plant, and causes the blossoms to cast off.

A low moisture supply in the soil may cause some of the trouble. But even if there is plenty of soil moisture, in hot and dry weather excessive loss of moisture from the leaves can cause loss of blossoms. Uniform soil and weather conditions usually will result in a good set of fruit.

If your tomatoes show signs of much disease now, and this is the time when it is usually at its worst, think ahead to next year's preventive measures.

Planting tomato seed directly in the garden in April will help produce hardy plants that are not usually as susceptable to disease as transplants are. Strong tomato plants set out late in the season often are not affected by disease as early-set plants are. Spraying plants with bordeaux mixture to protect them may not be necessary most years if these practices are followed.

Dusting late cabbage weekly with a commercial dust containing rotenone should prevent those green worms from making sieves out of the cabbage leaves. The small, white butterflies that hover about the plant and lay eggs on the leaves are the forerunners of the worms.

The last of the vegetable plantings should be made before September 1. Plants quick-maturing vegetables such as spinach, leaf lettuce, kale and radishes. Gardens that have been neglected during the last months of threshing and vacations, are due for reconditioning.

Crocks, boxes, crates and lined bushel baskets to hold root vegetables and fruits in the cave or cold basement storage can be readied for use now. All containers, except crocks, should be paper lined. Lids are needed for all of these containers to prevent shriveling of the vegetables in storage. Carrots do not have to be stored in sand. A lid on the crock will serve the same purpose.

Check those cave and basement storages now to be sure there's enough shelf space to store this year's crop of surplus vegetables. It's easy to provide additional shelf space for either stored or canned goods by using large building bricks or blocks and wide boards. A board placedacross two bricks next to the wall will make the first shelf; two bricks and a board placed on top of the first shelf will make the second, and so on.

Time's at hand for families with no storage facilities to arrange for a permanent storage unit for fruits and other products. The cave type of storage is excellent and offers plenty of space. A cave storage is most convenient when it can be entered through an opening in the basement wall.

Plants that are through producing continue to use up fertility and moisture. So check over the garden and remove these free boarders. Sweet corn should be pulled up or cut off at the ground as soon as the last ear is stripped from each stalk. Cabbage may as well be pulled up by the roots when it is harvested. Remove old cauliflower and broccoli plants and any vegetable gone fully to flower.

Now that you've had large production from your small garden area this year, it's wise to look ahead to next year. Maintaining a compost heap means that something can be turned back into the garden soil. It's like placing money in the bank, there's fertility there for next year's crop to draw on.

Don't work in gardens when the plants are wet. That's especially essential in beans.

COMMON HOUSE FLY IS DANGEROUS

Carries Many Diseases Into Your Home

When a fly comes to rest on your piece of bread, you flick him off. Or when he lands on your baby's face, you just shoo him away. And the fly, not being easily discouraged, comes in for another landing. This time it may be on the baby's finger that will soon go into his mouth.

And that's the way it happens, the spreading of such diseases as typhoid, dysentery, diarrhea, summer complaint of infants and tuberculosis. Flies are even possible carriers of the dreaded infantile paralysis that's having its fling this season of the year, the same time of the year the common house fly is drumming up business.

Here's how Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist, says the fly works: The fly chooses a breeding place in the garbage can at your back door, in the pile of weeds you've pulled from the garden, in the manure being used as fertilizer, or in the decaying fruits and vegetables that were extra in your garden. More often than not these places hide the germs of tuberculosis, dysentry and other diseases.

Fly Carries Germs

The fly gets in, wallows around and gets these germs on his feet and the hairs on his body. And zoom! He takes off for your house, your food and your baby. Each place he stops he leaves some of the germs. And only one germ with the right conditions is needed to produce the disease. Chances are you make a move to swat the fly so he goes on to the neighbor's house leaving germs there, too.

To get rid of the fly, you could stand at the door and swat down every one that comes in sight. However, flies breed pretty fast and keeping up with them would be a big job for anyone. So Gunderson says to get at the fly's breeding place; remove it or make it unattractive to the fly. The garbage can, he says, is the first place to center your efforts. Keep all garbage in covered containers, preferably in metal garbage containers. Remove it at regular intervals and once a week wash the can with boiling water, he advises. As an added precaution, spray the container and area around it with 5 % DDT in oil solution once a week.

Spray With DDT

For the house, Gunderson suggests screening all windaws and doors. If you have screen doors with strong springs so they close automatically, they'll let fewer flies in. Here again DDT can be an effective fly control measure if you spray or paint the 5 percent solution on the door and window frames, light drop cords, window shade cords, ceiling and other fly resting places.

Outside where you're saving compost for next year's garden, Gunderson says to put the weeds, grass clippings and other compost in a pit. Then cover with 2 inches of soil and a piece of tar paper. And keeping the garden free from rotting vegetables, leaves and other debris will do away with just one more fly-breeding place. A fly trap out near the barn will catch a good many flies before they even get near the house.

Folks down your way will be most appreciative of anything you do to rid your place and the surrounding countryside of this pest and enemy—the common house fly. You'll feel better inside, too, knowing your family, your children are safe from this widespread carrier of disease.

Damp clothing and household linens thrown into the clothes hampen to await laundering will result in mildew. So will sprinkling more clothes than can be ironed in a day.

Back To School

Yes, once again the old familiar bells ring out the signal heralding the start of a new school year. The doors of America's great free institutions of learning open wide . . . and through them pour bright-eyed youngsters fresh from the excitement of vacation.

Some will be reluctant to give up the freedom of vacation season in exchange for class work. Some will not go back to school because they prefer to stay at high-paying jobs. Yet, nothing is more imporant to the future of this nation and to the home community than that our children complete their education.

Here your parental responsibility enters a two-fold progam. First, parents must impress on their children the importance of education in preparation of adult roles. Second, parents must do what they can in the home for their children's comfort and good health.

We are ready to help in this second point. Good springs and mattresses will give the proper rest the children need for busy school days. Good reading lamps will protect their eyes, when they are doing home work, or reading the books and magazines needed to round out their education.

Revival of Two-party System Sought

Truman Purge Aimed at Restoring Party Machinery

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Before the Paris Peace conference even got underway we learned that the rules committee, which heard so much heated oratory, was as powerful as the powerful rules committee of the house of representatives.

It wasn't until after the primary returns were in, and Representative (Truman - hater) Slaughter of Missouri, a member of the rules committee, was defeated, that most laymen realized the importance of that battle, and why the President stuck his neck out as far as he did in helping to beat him.

I can see the President now as he looked up with that pert, birdlike glance he has—just enough of a smile to make you try to listen sympathetically — and say that if Slaughter was right, he (the President) was wrong.

Think what Slaughter could have said if he had been elected!

But he was defeated — and the day after the primary, the real significance of the battle became clear.

Never in American history has any administration been up against the situation which developed when the Roosevelt honeymoon ended. I am not arguing how or why that situation came about. But the fact is we have had a situation where party lines meant little, and the age-old principle of majority rule, the theory on which congress, as a working body, is organized, has been violated.

Outstanding example was the rules committee. There were five southerners — anti-administration Democrats—on that committee, and with Slaughter's help, they could tie up the vote and tie up any legislation Truman asked for.

Now maybe the fact that the administration couldn't get its legislation before congress, or couldn't get it passed when it did, was a good thing. I am not discussing that. I merely say that what happened is not a good thing for the two-party system. And as the situation grew more acute, congress wasn't a working body.

Let's take the testimony of a thoroughly loyal Republican member of the committee and acting minority leader, Representative Michener of Michigan. If the Democrats retain control of the house, Michener said, the absence of Representative Slaughter will permit the rules committee to function the way it was intended to function; namely, the legislation of the party in power will be sent to the floor.

That didn't mean Michener wanted the rival party's legislation passed. It simply meant he knew that Slaughter, teaming up with the anti-administration Democrats and the Republicans, was able to tie the vote and stymie action.

And that isn't two-party government.

Air Power Is Big Killer in War

This has been an aviation year. The first peacetime year that America has been acknowledged as mistress of the air as well as of the sea and the land. It has been a time of reminiscence, of recapitulation, as well as forecast and foreshadowing.

I remember the interview I had with a certain army official during the war. His impatience, smashing the ordinary rules of censorship, had revealed the secret of the bazooka kept "confidential" long after it was in use, and the details of which Germans had long since learned to their sorrow. (The bazooka functions on the rocket principle.)

The officer pointed to an old print on his wall. It was a picture of American soldiers discharging a rocket projectile in the War of 1812.

Why, then, if the rocket principle was known to us in those early days, did we not develop it as the Germans did, I asked.

The reason the rocket was neglected in the Civil war period, I was told, was because ordnance experts were concentrating on the development of the breech-loading firearm, and the perfection of rifling — the making of spiralled grooves inside the barrel which gave the bullet or projectile a twisting movement, and kept it from tumbling "head over heels." This increased range and accuracy.

The emphasis was still on the rifleman rather than the artillery, and such statistics as we have indicate that the infantry in the Franco - Prussian war of 1870 wounded 10 times as many men as the artillery did. Undoubtedly the bayonet claimed many.

By 1914-15, however, artillery produced one-half the wounded, showing the rapid advance which, in part, made experts forget the rocket again.

Artillery, according to the old definition, is "group-served, mounted firearms of caliber greater than that of small arms." This definition could easily be made to include the firearms, shells, or bombs carried by planes, or contained in the war-head of a rocket.

I mention the effectiveness of "artillery" in the latter sense, not to belittle the doughboy who is really the "ultimo ratio," but because the projectile, either carried in a plane or by propulsion in a rocket, is what might be called the definitive weapon.

The point is we did not develop the rocket in the Civil war because we felt we had something better (breech-loading rifled artillery and small arms). And again the rocket was set aside by a decision arrived at before we engaged actively in World War II when our experts, both in the army and out of it, including the great industrialists who could gauge our production capacity, felt the airplane was a superior weapon.

We did not entirely neglect study and experimentation on the rocket during the war, however, and now we are probably farther advanced in this type of "artillery" than any other nation. We also have learned to project our "artillery" by means of the "drone" (pilotless airplane).

Is This the Army, Mr. Jones?

In World War I when YMCA and Red Cross canteens were established right up into the zone of the advance, and even nearer the front, some of the "old timers" of those days wrote to the editors insisting that the Civil war was won on "salt horse and likker" (I recall that phrase in one of the letters) and we were just softening the boys.

Well, it didn't soften them too soft for Chateau Thierry and the Argonne.

Then came World War II, and some of the veterans of the earlier war raised their eyebrows at the USO, turkey dinners at the front on Thanksgiving, ice cream (instead of beans, salmon, corn willy or nothing).

But, soldier, you ain't heard nuttin!

When they say "This is the army, Mr. Jones," to you future G.I.s, you'll hardly believe it.

Did you hear what Field Marshal (blood, sand, and green for the Normandy hedges) Montgomery had to say? He believes enlisted men in the British army ought to live like other folks. Bedrooms, not barracks.

"You had your breakfast in bed before," goes the warning song, "but you won't have it there any more." Maybe not. But if Monty has his way, British soldiers can read in bed.

And what about those tricky uniforms American soldiers are going to wear?

Blue! (like the boys in blue who said good-bye to Blue Bell). And perhaps "two-note," with a lighter shade for the trousers! And overcoats AND CAPES!

You aren't in the army now, Mr. Jones. You're in grand opera!

And then there is that terminal leave pay bill passed by congress, I suppose, to pacify the fellows who got out of the army without knowing what they were going to miss. Almost three billion dollars dumped into G.I. pockets to even them up with what the officers received for furloughs they hadn't taken.

TOGETHER AGAIN—IN JAPAN . . . One of the most touching meetings when the army transport, Fred C. Ainsworth, brought a contingent of American wives and families to Yokohama, Japan, was this one between Sgt. Delbert Jenkins and his wife, Marietta, both 65. They had not seen each other for four years. Jenkins enlisted at the age of 61 and saw service in the Pacific campaign.

NEWS REVIEW

Dardanelles Row Looms; Nations Ask Soft Peace

DARDANELLES:
Hot Spot

Another major international row appeared in the making with Soviet Russia's demand upon Turkey that she break the Montreux convention of 1936 and share control of the vital Dardanelles straits leading to the Black sea with Moscow.

Under the convention, the Turks have been entrusted with the guardianship of the strategic waterway and, while they have expressed a willingness to maintain the present arrangement, they have informed the U. S. and Britain that they cannot hold out against the Russian proposals alone. By granting Russian demands, the Turks would be forced to permit Red troops to occupy parts of their soil along the straits.

PALESTINE:
Turn on Heat

The illegal Jewish underground organization, Irgun Zvai Leumi, called upon all Jewish resistance movements in Palestine to unite in the fight for attainment of a Jewish national home in the Holy Land even as British officials lambasted zionists for seeking to high pressure the government into acceding to their demands.

Pointing out that it was necessary to press their drive now while the British were being hard put to maintain order in Palestine, Irgun suggested that the two other resistance groups, Haganah and the Stern gang, combine to form the nucleus of an underground government and army.

FREE FOR THE TAKING . . . Plagued by a shortage of labor and an abundance of woodchucks, Autumn Van Den Heuval, West Nyack, N. Y., farmer, has invited all-comers to "come and help themselves" to his 80 acres of sweet corn as well as blackberries and grapes.

PARIS:
Wanted: Softer Terms

Addressing the delegates of 21 Allied nations at the peace conference in Luxembourg palace, representatives of Italy, Romania and Bulgaria pleaded for moderation of terms on the grounds that, as cobelligerents of the victors in the closing stages of the war, they had made substantial sacrifices for victory.

Speaking for Italy, Premier De Gasperi stated that his country had contributed troops, naval power and materials for three years and that the Allies should think twice before internationalizing Italian dominated Trieste and submitting 180,000 Italians in Venezia Guilia to Yugoslav rule. He also asserted that excessive reparations would weigh down the Italian economy and reduction of armaments would imperil the safety of the state.

Foreign Minister Giorgu Tatarescu of Romania followed De Gasperi to the speaker's dais and asserted that no less than 385,000 Romanians had fought on the allied side during the last six months of the war. Furthermore, he said, German and Hungarian forces had inflicted large-scale damage of Romania after she had deserted the axis cause. Tatarescu asked for a larger army and scaling down of heavy reparations.

On behalf of Bulgaria, Foreign Minister George Koulishev claimed that his country had suffered 32,000 casualties during the eight months it fought on the allied side. He charged Greek demands for $750,000,000 in reparations were excessive and asked that Bulgaria be permitted to disarm within reasonable limits. Regulation of traffic on the Danube should be the interest of all the countries bordering the river, including Bulgaria, Koulishev said.

FURLOUGH PAY:
Fast Action

Application forms for vets' unused furlough pay will be available at all post offices by mid-September but disbursement of the five-year bonds will not take place before the end of the month because of time required in printing.

In announcing the procedure to be followed, the war department stated:

1. Applications will be acknowledged when received to assure the vet his claim is on record.

2. Disbursing officers will accept sworn statements of applicants unless there is suspicion of fraud.

3. Army vets unable to determine how much unused furlough pay they have coming, figured on the basis of 2½ days per month, can apply for information to the adjutant general's personnel records branch at St. Louis, Mo.

ANTI-INFLATION WEAPON

Federal Spending Curb Urged

CHICAGO. — Terming a curb in federal governmental expenditures "the nation's most powerful weapon against inflation," William K. Jackson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, urged immediate congressional action to slash spending.

Jackson, who addressed business men at the 23rd annual National Institute for Commercial and Trade Organization Executives on the Evanston campus of Northwestern university, urged that congress establish an over-all budget committee to recommend a ceiling on appropriations and to coordinate the total spending with expected revenues.

Return State Powers.

Jackson also urged local governments and business organizations to work for the return to the states of powers and controls usurped by the federal government.

"Several state agencies have developed the enervating habit of looking to Washington as the source of solution for every difficulty," he asserted. "They seem to have forgotten that this seemingly easy treatment becomes a two way narcotic. It is habit forming in Washington as well as in the state capitals."

The chamber of commerce has asked business groups to refrain from seeking special federal appropriations for the benefit of individual states or local communities, he reported.

Hits 'Mob Rule.'

The business men were asked to campaign for legislation to "equalize the responsibilities as well as rights "of labor and management.

"Jurisdictional disputes, boycotts, coercion, intimidation, mass picketing, blocking of public highways by strikers, and prevention of access to private properties do not represent law and order, but mob rule," he asserted.

'Ham' Show Is Instrumental In Revamping Georgia Town

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK
WNU Features

Thirty years amidst hams and eggs is the reward of Otis S Oneal, Negro extension worker at Fort Valley, Ga. Annually, Oneal guides the farmers around Fort Valley, county seat town of 5,000, in staging a food show at which 500 to 600 cured hams are exhibited. This is in addition to more than 300 pieces of other cured meats and 250 dozen eggs packed in fancy cartons.

These topnotch hams come from hind quarters of peanut-fed or other well-nurtured hogs. They are the products of thrifty farm families in central Georgia who started out to lick the boll weevil through increased emphasis on diversified farming. Festooned around the stage, they make a show that smells as good as it looks; in fact, the aroma permeates the entire school auditorium where the exhibit is held, while visitors look and talk and smell.

Present Program.

Among main events of Ham and Egg Show week, usually held in the spring, are a demonstration program on foods for housewives, roundtable discussion on ham and egg production, home-written and produced pageant in which "The Hog, Hen and Mule Speak," and joint barbecue and folk music festival. Each number draws its share of the 1,000 or more visitors but laurels go to the afternoon and evening festival of secular music where players of banjoes, guitars, mouth harps and many improvised instruments attract the attention of regional and national musicians. W. H. Handy, composer of "St. Louis Blues," has become a constant attendant at the show.

Interspersed between the various major events are quartet and choir selections of old spirituals and secular folk ballads. All are preceded by a curtain riser of Negro folk songs by the school children, "Chula-hu," "Just From the Country" or "Old Dinah's Dad."

Boosts Community.

In fostering this show during the past 30 years, Oneal and his coworkers practically have remade the town and its trade area. There's a Community Fair on the downtown streets each fall. Fat cattle, corn, vegetables and fruits have taken on more significance on farms and in gardens through the entire community.

The idea grew out of Oneal's efforts to improve living conditions among Negro farmers. He had found that some families raised plenty of table food, others none. He had asked some who had to let him bring in those who had not "to see how it's done." Refused by one who didn't "want to be bothered with those triflin' neighbors," he hit on the Ham show idea and started in, taking three years "to get going." Since then, Fort Valleyites and many visitors, even from outside Georgia, have seen, heard, smelled, tasted and felt the Ham show.

LIFE BEGINS IN 'BABY TOWN' . . . Located in the salt bush country of Australia, Whyalla is the No. 1 baby town of the commonwealth. It has the highest birth rate, with some 300 babies coming into the world there annually. For every death in Whyalla in the past six years, 100 babies have been born. The present population of 7,500 consists of 5,000 adults and 2,500 babies or children under 14. Nurse Forrest is shown here giving a brand new arrival his first dunking.

Hospital Diagnoses Patient's Ailment As 'Broken Heart'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Hospital treatment for a broken heart was requested—and received—by a sad patient entering the accident ward of Atlantic City hospital.

Wesley Mingo, 30, New York railroad worker, at first complained only of acute "chest pains." After denying any previous history of heart or lung ailments, the patient said the pain might emanate from a broken heart.

He explained that he came to the resort city to marry a girl, but they quarreled and parted. The physician prescribed a mild sedative, and Mingo left for the boardwalk, his broken heart apparently improved.

Marine Insists War 'Chow' Is Appreciated

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Two inseparable marine buddies have returned to Salt Lake City.

When William F. Simons, former private first class, returned to civilian life, he was accompanied by "McGregor," combination chow and police dog which was dubbed a "sergeant" in the marines.

The dog served as a night sentry at Bremerton, Wash., marine base. His former master was killed.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

MANY VETS FLYING

Representing nearly one-third of total airline employment, more than 25,000 employes of United States scheduled airlines are veterans of World War II, figures compiled by the Air Transport association reveal. The veterans are working in a variety of jobs, ranging from flight and ground operations to sales and administrative positions.

While a considerable number of the airlines' war veteran employes are men and women who left the lines to serve with the armed forces and have returned to their old jobs, a much larger number are new employes hired under the policy adopted by the airlines to give preference to servicemen and women.

Several companies have inaugurated courses designed for rehabilitation of the physically handicapped, one concern reporting that it can use regularly as many as 1,000 veterans with amputations.

Courses of instruction also are provided in flight and ground operations, communications, maintenance and general administrative work.

In addition to veterans employed by airlines in this country, ATA member airlines operating in Alaska, Canada and the Caribbean area employ an additional 1,900 World War II veterans.

UP IN THE AIR

Mrs. Henrietta McGinnis, 72, of Chicago, went "up in the air" over the double wedding of her grandson and granddaughter in Minneapolis. She used the event as an excuse for taking her first plane ride, "something I've wanted to do for years," she added.

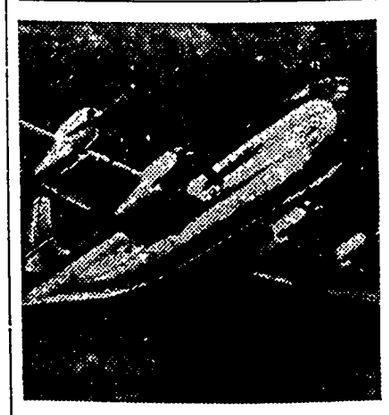
SOARING HIGH

Captured German gliders, including one reputed to be the only "flying wing" model, attracted widespread interest at the 13th annual national soaring contest at Elmira, N. Y. Some of the captured gliders were flown at the meet while others were only on display.

Army gliders of the type used in airborne operations during the war were towed by gallant old Boeing B-17 flying fortresses and tough little Douglas C-47s.



SKY GIANTS . . . A fleet of four-engined double-deck Boeing stratocruisers of the type shown here has been ordered by United Airlines for use on its nationwide system and newly-authorized route to Hawaii.

FLYING HAZARD

Add to your list of flying hazards—birds. They are considered a definite danger even with bullet-proof windshields. Airlines pilots reported collisions with birds at the rate of two a day during 1944. Planes frequently encounter flocks of waterfowl, especially in migratory seasons, resulting in considerable damage to equipment. Most feared by pilots is the eagle. Weighing up to 15 pounds, the eagle will swoop down and dive smack through a steel wing.

ng sound for Westerns emed impossible but Fox made "In Old Arizona" with Warner Baxter as the star and such film greats as William Boyd, now Hopalong Cassidy, and the late Bill Hart rose to their fame. Westerns now total more box office receipts than any other type of picture.

Joan Crawford and Greta Garbo both thought someone was playing a joke on them by substituting men's voices when they first heard recordings of their own voices. Wallace Beery made a talkie for Paramount — his first — promptly was fired and went to MGM. He's been there ever since.

Zazu Pitts of silent days was considered a great dramatic actress. Her voice on the sound track ruined it all and she wisely switched to comedy and made her fortune as a funny girl. Charlie Chaplin, silent and sound comedian of the early days, even now is planning a comeback after six years' of absence.

Started in 1927.

Picture and sound recorded and synchronized on the same piece of film caused little excitement when it first was shown to the public in Schenectady, N. Y., in 1927. So the late Charles A. Hoxie of Schenectady, who developed it in the laboratories of General Electric, carted his Kinemagraphone, as he called it, back to the plant.

It wasn't until a year or so later that the president of the company took it with him to Europe to introduce an educational film. There it was received with such enthusiasm that company officials believed the talking movie was perhaps best suited to educational purposes. Before more educational movies had been produced, however, the movie industry put into general use the Hoxie machine. Today it is used by practically every movie company in the country.

ICAL STARS . . . Among the most famous stars in early days films were Charlie Chaplin and Jackie Coogan, shown here in from "The Kid."

mers Pack Guns to Curb Rustlers

N, WIS. — Defying mod- ds of criminal detection, nty farmers have band- er in the old-time vigi- em to curb a recent out- attle rustling here.

over a rural party tele- prompted the first con- nhunt, when 50 farmers ins in old vigilante style, a quest for rustlers. They ooded sector from mid- dawn but the rustlers peared.

Kroening, who lives in ck, saw a car slip up to a woods on his farm, two occupants emerging and entering the woods. He fired three shots, chasing the men deeper into the woods. Meanwhile, his wife got busy on the party line to round up the gang of 50 farmers.

Before their arrival, however, the mysterious car raced off down the road. Kroening gave chase in his car but lost the quarry. Kroening told the vigilantes he believed the two strangers still were in the woods and that the car had been driven by a third party, who had remained in it.

Although hampered by fog, the farmers beat through bushes and thickets for hours without finding the rustlers. Two Marshfield traffic officers and several deputies helped them.

An electric wire which charged a fence on the Kroening farm had been turned off by the thieves, and the farmers theorized that the men had made careful preparations for herding the animals through the fence when a truck arrived later.

In a previous rustling incident, mysterious strangers fired on a farmer who came upon them unexpectedly on his farm near Wisconsin Rapids.

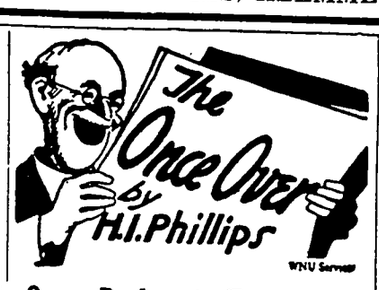
construction and renovation forced many of the hundreds of windows in the house to open on solid walls. Some of the doors on upper floors open directly on the outside with no stairways provided, though more than 40 stairways, each with 13 steps, are scatttered through the interior. Many of them, like the windows and doors, have no utility value except for ghosts lurking in the maze of secret passages, hidden panels and trap doors.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Winchester became conscience-stricken by the lethal role of the rifle in war and peace and built additions to the house to "pacify and entertain the ghosts of gun victims." She continued building additions for many years, each providing a new monstrosity.

Every night for 37 years, servants prepared and served lavish banquet spreads, as Mrs. Winchester chatted with her "guests."



Oscar Purkey to Trygve Lie

"Mr. Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, says U.N. has not succeeded in capturing the imagination and harnessing the enthusiasm of the people of the world."—News item.

Dear Trygve:

Me being a G.I. in the recent globul shindig and having high hopes about the U. N. making breach of the peace unpopular, I am interested in your coming right out and admitting that it ain't so hot so far. The U. N. has not only not captured no imaginations, it has not even made contact with them.

And as a harnesser of enthusiasms it looks like most of the time it could not tell a horse collar from a fly net. And what is the trouble? I will tell you, Mr. Lie. There is no color, no ziperoo, no showmanship and no wallop in the routine. This U. N. has got the biggest chance in the world, it has got the center of the stage and extra spotlights and it is duller than another musical comedy interpretive ballet.

First of all why does it make so much fuss about a permanent home when it should be too busy to be home much anyhow and how does it expect to harness the enthusiasms of people living in one-story bungalows and Quonset huts all over the world when it keeps issuing maps where it would like to have maybe 40 acres of choice real estate including manor houses, mountain views, cross ventilation and swimming rights? I tell you as just another guy getting humpbacked living in a Quonset without even a shower that the U. N. would harness my enthusiasm faster if it could give me the idea it didn't need so much de luxe real estate.

You and the boys just grab yourself a few Quonsets here and there, do your laundry in the sink and be satisfied with one pot of geraniums for landscaping and you will make a hit with the peoples of the world okay.

And for the luvvapete put on some counterattraction to crab this Gromyko's act. If you want to capture imaginations do something about Mister Veto even if you have to fix it to bring in some delegates on our side like Frankie Sinatra, Bob Hope, Hedy Lamarr. The world is pretty soft in the head and as all it goes for in a big way now is light stuff and crime you have got to get some big amusement world names in the show.

Look at the newspapers, the front pages are full of pictures of boy bandits, flagpole brides and 12-year-old gunmolls. Couldn't you fix it to have some of these kid outlaws stick up a meeting of U. N. and maybe have a delegate from Holland marry a delegate from Australia on top of a flagpole over U. N. headquarters so you could get immediate attention by people everywhere?

You will not capture no imaginations and harness no enthusiasms nowheres unless you do.

Yours with best wishes,
OSCAR PURKEY.

JESUS AND SINCERITY OF SPEECH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:16; Proverbs 26:23-28; Matt. 26:69-75.

MEMORY SELECTION — Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor.—Ephesians 4:25.

God is truth, and therefore any kind of lie is evidence of godlessness. Satan is the father of lies (John 8:44) and the father of all liars.

I. The Prohibition of Lying (Exod. 20:16).

This "thou shalt not" of God has to do primarily with perjury; that is, the telling of an untruth in court.

This is one of the worst forms of lying, because it may result in the one against whom it is practiced losing his liberty, his life or his property, or the destruction of his good reputation.

It is obvious, however, that the commandment covers all forms of lying, whether in business, in social contacts, in the home, or in the church. We might do well to consider what the Bible has to say about whisperers, talebearers, backbiters and others (see Lev. 19:16; II Cor. 12:20).

II. The Purpose of Lying (Prov. 26:23-26).

Sometimes as one hears the continuous stream of lies which flow from the lips of some men, one is apt to feel that it is just a bad habit of careless talking which has become a part of the life.

There is, however, a real purpose behind the lies of men, and that is to deceive in order to get gain or advantage, or to cover up hatred.

How much of all this there is in the world today—yes, and in the church. Those who profess to be the followers of Christ use the devices of the devil in their relations with fellow members of the church. Christian workers who wish to appear greater than they are, or to look greater than others, use deceit and lying. With what results?

III. The Punishment of Lying (Prov. 26:26-28; Matt. 26:75).

One lie leads to, in fact calls for, another, and soon the liar has digged a pit so big that he stumbles and falls into it. He is like one who starts a great stone rolling, and lo, it rolls back on him and crushes him. Yes, in due time he is shown up before the entire congregation (v. 26).

Then, too, the lie does harm to others. No matter what its nature —a half truth, or a truth used to deceive, or an outright falsehood— it bears awful fruit in the life of the one toward whom it is directed, or whose name is involved (v. 28). Once started, it is often impossible to stop. One cannot ever catch up with a lie.

But there is also a horrible and bitter fruitage of lies in the life and the heart of the liar. Lies do "come home to roost," and they make the heart and life of anyone who has a vestige of decency and honor left, miserably unhappy. Consider Peter (Matt. 26:75).

It is of the utmost importance that we stress before children and young people the awful results of lying, as well as its sinfulness. Lying and deceit are so commonly accepted in our day that many regard it as all right—if you don't get caught. But the fact is, you always do get caught by God—yes, and by your own lie.

IV. The Practice of Lying (Matt. 26:69-74).

Sadly enough, the constant lying of the world seems to have infected the minds and hearts of Christians. Instead of being cleansed from this worldly defilement they carry its awful tendencies into the church.

The great lie within the Church, and one of Satan's prize exhibits, is the falsehood of modern religious liberalism (so-called), which is essentially a denial of real New Testament Christianity. Jesus said (v. 42) that if God is our Father we will accept him as the Christ. The one who speaks sweet words about the example, the manhood, the leadership of the Master, and who denies him his place as God, is clearly in mind here as the follower of the father of lies.

Someone has suggested that the great spiritual problem of our day is not the conflict between the Church and the world; nor is it to determine how the Church can best serve in the world, but rather what to do about the world which has gotten into the Church. How did worldliness get into the Church? The members brought it there after they had gone out and warmed themselves at the world's fire, and fellowshiped with the world in ungodly living.

The denials made by Peter seem almost unbelievable in the life of one who had been in immediate fellowship with the Lord and who had seen his glory. We have here a revelation of the fact that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?" (Jer. 17:9).

Citizens and Taxpayers

VOTE "NO"

SEPTEMBER 10, 1946 is the date on which the voters of Hancock County will decide upon whether or not a bond issue will be authorized to erect a County Hospital to be located at Britt. The following facts are submitted for the information and guidance of Hancock County voters and taxpayers.

1. The proposed hospital is NOT a Veteran's hospital but would be a county institution supported by taxation of property within Hancock County.

2. Information received from a highely qualified, experienced architect discloses that a forty-five or fifty bed hospital will cost the taxpayers of Hancock County at least $200,000.00 FOR THE BUILDING ALONE. It is immediantely apparent that a $100,000.00 bond issue is only the beginning.

3. The American Hospital Association estimates that the cost of maintaining a hospital is approximately $2000.00 per bed, per year, whether used or not. Statistics show that county hospitals are not generally self-supporting. Any deficit for operating loss will have to be met by additional taxation.

4. If you or a member of your family became seriously ill, would you use the proposed county hospital or would you continue to use hospital facilities available at the present?

5. A hospital in the town the size of Britt will not attract a well-trained surgeon which will result in the fact that most hospital cases will have to go to larger cities for adequate care and treatment.

6. The larger portion of Hancock County residents will still have closer hospital facilities than the proposed hospital at Britt.

7. The people sponsoring this ad, part of whom are Legionaires, feel that the American Legion Posts of Hancock County heve been imposed upon by virtue of the fact that they were asked to endorse one side of a controversial issue. Investigation discloses that the Klemme and Garner Posts endorsed this project with a very small number of the membership present at the meeting and then, only by a small majority.

8. It is fundamental that high taxation results in the decreased value of property.

It has been our purpose to point out some of the more basic propositions and we earnestly hope that you will give these propositions serious consideration. We feel that any citizen is qualified to make up his own mind on this question when he has acquainted himself with the facts involved.

Be Sure To Vote Tuesday, Sept. 10

VOTE "NO"

SEPTEMBER 10, 1946 is the date on which the voters of Hancock County will decide upon whether or not a bond issue will be authorized to erect a County Hospital to be located at Britt. The following facts are submitted for the information and guidance of Hancock County voters and taxpayers.

1. The proposed hospital is NOT a Veteran's hospital but would be a county institution supported by taxation of property within Hancock County.

2. Information received from a highely qualified, experienced architect discloses that a forty-five or fifty bed hospital will cost the taxpayers of Hancock County at least $200,000.00 FOR THE BUILDING ALONE. It is immediantely apparent that a $100,000.00 bond issue is only the beginning.

3. The American Hospital Association estimates that the cost of maintaining a hospital is approximately $2000.00 per bed, per year, whether used or not. Statistics show that county hospitals are not generally self-supporting. Any deficit for operating loss will have to be met by additional taxation.

4. If you or a member of your family became seriously ill, would you use the proposed county hospital or would you continue to use hospital facilities available at the present?

5. A hospital in the town the size of Britt will not attract a well-trained surgeon which will result in the fact that most hospital cases will have to go to larger cities for adequate care and treatment.

6. The larger portion of Hancock County residents will still have closer hospital facilities than the proposed hospital at Britt.

7. The people sponsoring this ad, part of whom are Legionaires, feel that the American Legion Posts of Hancock County heve been imposed upon by virtue of the fact that they were asked to endorse one side of a controversial issue. Investigation discloses that the Klemme and Garner Posts endorsed this project with a very small number of the membership present at the meeting and then, only by a small majority.

8. It is fundamental that high taxation results in the decreased value of property.

It has been our purpose to point out some of the more basic propositions and we earnestly hope that you will give these propositions serious consideration. We feel that any citizen is qualified to make up his own mind on this question when he has acquainted himself with the facts involved.

LETTER RECEIVED BY REV. and MRS. HARVEY ON SEPTEMBER 4TH

August 26, 1946
Naples, Italy

Dear Folks:

Have you heard of "The Buried City of Popeii?" Well last Saturday afternoon I went out there. The Red Cross has a tour that goes every day and they furnish a guide to explain things. It was very interesting to see a City that was built before Christ was born, and then buried several hundred years and dug up again. Pompeii was a city of about 35,000 people when it was destroyed. They have found skeletons and jars, and lead pipes used for carrying water. Two-thirds of the City is still buried under 25 to 30 feet of lava ashes, and next year they are planning to start digging again.

Yesterday we started on another tour, to Mount Cassino, where there was a big battle between U. S. and Germany. Cassino is seventy miles from here and we started in an open truck. Well, for the first time in nine months it rained in Italy, and how it rained. We were soaked, so we stopped at a farm house along the road and ran in without an invitation. We turned in at the first door we came to and found the family sitting in there. We just stood and looked at them, and they finally pulled in a wooden bench for us to sit on. The room was bare except for a fire built right on the stone floor in the corner, with a kettle over it and a few dishes stacked in a basket. I guess it was their kitchen. Well, the rain at last let up for awhile and we went on. The next stop was a U. S. Army Cemetery where 5,000 of our fellows are buried. One of the boys with us found the grave of his brother. There are five or six cemeteries (U. S. and British) right around close. Then when we finally arrived at Cassino there wasn't a thing to look at. The place had been completely destroyed. A few buildings had been built since the fight, so we ate supper in a cafe there. We had a big bowl of spagetti for 50 cents. It was pretty good. Right after supper it stopped raining and we came back.

The Red Cross has several other tours that I want to see. They are trying to arrange a trip to Rome. But I think I'll be in Rome before they will, because today we saw the classification officer and he told us where we would go from here and it was Rome. I don't know just how soon we will go as yet.

Love,
Elwood

LAST RITES HELD FOR VET OF WORLD WAR I

William E. Tanner Stricken While Engaged In Work

Funeral services for William Tanner, 59, of Goodell, were held Monday at 1:30 p. m. in the home and 2 p. m. in the Goodell United Brethren church with the Rev. Carleton Spencer officiating. Burial was held in the Garner cemetery.

William Tanner, 59, was born October 23, 1886, in Humboldt, Kansas. In 1911 he came to Garner and in 1916 was married to Mabel Bates of Garner. Twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Tanner moved to Goodell to live and Mr. Tanner was manager of the Goodell Farmers Elevator.

He served the town as mayor and was on the school board. The past year he had been foreman for the Des Moines Insulated in Company and while at work at a farm near Hayfield Friday at 3:00 p. m. he died. He was on a high ladder cutting ventilation slots and fell 30 feet. Fellow workers called a doctor. Coroner Kenneth Boughton pronounced it accidental death.

He leaves his wife, 2 sisters Katie Pilgrim and Flora Rawsen of Chanute, Kansas, and 2 brothers, Frank of Squirrel, Idaho, and Albert of Goodell. His parents, and a brother, John, and sister, Clara, preceded him in death.

He served in World War 1 and was a member of the American Legion.

GIRLS 4-H CLUB AWARDS AT NORTH IOWA FAIR

Freezer Ice Cream was the topic of the demonstration presented at the North Iowa Fair at Mason City by Betty Hejlik and Wilda Lee, A red ribbon was awarded the girls. These girls are from the Britt Busy Beaver Club. Their leader is Mrs. Lew Fisher.

A red ribbon was also awarded the 4-H booth which represented all the county 4-H clubs. The theme of the booth, making of muffins was selected from the Ell-Toppers booth at the county Achievement Show. Oven products has been the main 4-H project this year in Hancock county. Quick breads was an important phase of this, as one poster in the booth explained. It read as follows:

Company arrived late,
Bread box low,
Mother does not worry,
Her 4-H girl bakes muffins
In a "jiffy" you know.

Postwar Confusion Exists in Orient

Courteous Japs Kow-Tow To Victorious Americans

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Recently, I had two experiences which melded.

I ran into my colleague, Kenneth Romney Jr., son of Kenneth Romney Sr., sergeant at-arms of the house of representatives. Young Romney recently has taken up his duties in radio again after a belated discharge from the military service, the latter part of which was spent with the "cloak and dagger" boys, the Office of Strategic Services.

Baukhage

Casually, he told me how he landed in Shanghai. He had been serving in China. Shortly after V-J Day he was ordered, along with some hundred other American officers and soldiers, to Shanghai. It was known there were no Chinese troops in the city. Shanghai had been in Japanese hands since the beginning of the war. The civilian population had become none too co-operative.

Hence, the Americans (even the "cloak and dagger" boys) arrived in full battle dress.

Their plane landed, and little brown men came forward toward them. The Americans had their rifles at "ready." Some fired. But the Japs, undeterred, came forward, bowing deeply, smiling. It was a Japanese ground force, ready and anxious to service the American planes.

Later came Jap officers with a whole fleet of limousines. The Americans were guests, not conquerors. The conquered enemy were hosts—not just the conquered. They offered to find accommodations and the trimmings. A little confusing, the Americans thought, but that was, after all, the Orient—China, another world. . . .

Now the scene shifts to Washington again. I witness the meeting of a husband and wife. Plenty of such meetings these days, still. It was touching. The man had dropped out of the Far Eastern skies. It seemed only yesterday that I had heard he was in a city in the Netherlands Indies where the American corporation he represented had one of its great plants. He was the first American to visit it since the territory had been won back from the enemy.

But had it been won back?

When I heard his story, I wondered. It seems that when he reached the gates of the American-owned plant, he found a Japanese on guard. He identified himself. In a few moments, a smiling and bowing Japanese officer, still wearing most of his uniform and speaking understandable English, appeared.

They began a tour of the property, the Jap most deferential but offering no word of explanation or apology for the fact that he, a late enemy, was in charge and not in jail. In fact, the Jap was very loquacious on the subject of the excellent work that he and his helpers had done to put the plant back into repair and operation.

He showed my friend the various places where the buildings and machinery had been damaged—evidence, he pointed out, smiling, of the excellent marksmanship of the American air force. He demonstrated with particular pride how excellently the repair work had been done, obviously expecting (and receiving) well-deserved praise for the technical skill the Japanese repairmen had shown.

Very nice, of course.

But American industry still reaps no benefit from that plant, and although the Japanese gain no profit therefrom, this American property is still, literally, in the hands of the enemy.

Commentator Has Full Mail Bag

For one whole week, I saved all the things that came to me by mail which I hadn't asked for—except personal letters. I have just counted them, and there are 233 separate pieces in all. The total number of pages I am expected to read adds up to nearly a thousand.

The one on top is "the back of the book" from Omnibook. A collection of amusing stories. But Omnibook itself is better still and I believe I have every issue, beginning with Vol. 1, No. 1.

Next comes "News From Sweden," a mimeographed collection of featur-y paragraphs from the American-Swedish News Exchange. I recall when the Swedish minister here consulted me about the founding of such a publicity bureau, back before we got into World War I.

The next is one of the UAW-CIO regular releases, and then the CIO News, a 16-page weekly, printed, I suppose, for their membership.

Then one of the valuable National Opinion Research surveys put out by the University of Denver. This one is a poll of American opinion on the Germans and Japs and how we think they got that way.

More Business Weeks, and "Program Information" from my own American Broadcasting company. A printed letter from the Payroll Guarantee association with an enclosure on "civilized cats, mice and cheese." The American Feed Manufacturers' association handout saying the feed shortage is over.

General Motors sends me the ninth in a series of production reports. (What could have happened to the other eight?)

The release from the National Planning association announces that Leon Henderson and the official of a big corporation have been added to their board of trustees—and if you want to know about the distribution of fats and oils by the department of agriculture, you can have my copy of the second interim report from the Committee on Small Business pursuant to H. Res. 64.

Just two pages of mimeographed material from the "Friends of Finnish Democracy." Cruel irony here. Remember when it was "brave little Finland"? Remember when Finnish Minister Procope couldn't go anywhere without being applauded? Finland paid her war debts! She even managed not to duck after the war! Well, Finland's friends are protesting now over the reparations demanded by Russia . . . heavier in proportion to population, they say, than are any other nation's. To pay the reparations bill, the statement claims, every man in Finland would have to work eight hours a day for seven years.

Here's a speech by Senator Taft from his office, "not printed at government expense." Stuck together is a news-print pamphlet called the "Poll Tax Repealer," and that blast from the Republican national committee on the President's budget message. A very neat little booklet (additional copies will be furnished) by Standard Oil of New Jersey, entitled "Steps to Security."

Now a tissue carbon labeled "Midnight Cry" with a series of Biblical texts shrieking doom. Seven familiar bright yellow pages from the National Highway Users association, which is one of the real, hard-working publicity bureaus.

Now we come to an attractive 12-page tabloid newspaper, "The Progressive and LaFollette's Magazine." I am glad to note it is still progressive, regardless of the changes in the LaFollette activities and proclivities. The first page has a nice cartoon of a garbage can labeled "War contract scandals." Looks interesting, but WAIT A MINUTE. I think they want me to PAY for it. Here's a return card saying "25 weeks' subscription, $1." Oh dear! It must have gotten into the wrong pile. I'm not going to look any further. I might find more of that kind.

Or Maybe You'd Prefer Rail Loadings

Maybe you'd rather have freight loadings of the week from the Association of American Railways, or perhaps you want to bid on the purchase of 15 or fewer Landing Ship Tank (LST) type vessels? Or perhaps you'd prefer some all-wool American flags, or a BK steel barge for dry or liquid cargo? No? Well, no harm in making the offer.

Next exhibit is "News From France" from the French Information service. I'll admit I asked for that, along with the attractive magazine, "La Republique Francaise."

Here's the state department's weekly bulletin which is Part Three of that interesting series on the present status of German youth. I was planning to write an article on that subject myself, but they tell me the magazines are overbought on Germany. Won't buy another thing.

TAKE ME ALONG, PLEASE . . . While Leo Peters of New Hyde Park, N. Y., checks the motor of his 1911 Ford for the motorcade of ancient automobiles to Detroit in revival of the Glidden tours, a nosey horse takes a gander at what's going on. Dobbin probably has some interesting thoughts about the gas buggy that squeezed him out of things.

NEWS REVIEW

Two U.S. Notes Presage Firm Stand in New Rifts

FOREIGN AFFAIRS: U. S. Stays Tough

If the Russians sought to test American temper on their aggressive postwar diplomacy, they received ample indication that this country would stand fast on a stiffening of its principles.

Even as the state department peppered Russia and its satellites with strong notes, four U. S. cruisers, six destroyers and the giant aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt hovered in the Mediterranean, joining the British fleet in an impressive show of strength.

Yugoslavia—Strongest U. S. action was taken against Tito's Communist-dominated Yugoslav government for shooting down two unprotected American transport planes which strayed off their course while en route from Austria to Italy.

Lashing Belgrade for shooting at the defenseless planes of a friendly nation, the U. S. demanded release of fliers of the stricken craft within 48 hours or threatened referral of the case to the United Nations with Yugoslavia charged with aggressive acts. Ridiculing Belgrade's reference to the incidents as "unhappy accidents," the U. S. stated the attacks were deliberate.

Convinced that the U. S. wasn't fooling, Tito ordered release of the fliers and hastened to tell American newsmen that he had commanded his armed forces to desist from further attacks on planes.

Dardanelles—With the Russians backing up their demand on Turkey for joint control of the Dardanelles straits connecting the Black sea with the Mediterranean with a show of military strength in the surrounding territory, the U. S. warned Moscow that an assault upon Turkish soil would be considered a threat to world peace.

While rejecting Russia's proposal for joint control of the vital waterway with Turkey, the U. S. indicated its willingness to participate in a conference to revise existing regulations and expressed agreement with the Soviet on these points:

1. Merchant ships of all countries should be allowed to use the straits.

2. Warships of the Black sea powers should always be allowed passage through the straits.

3. Special permission should be needed for passage of the warships of other powers through the straits.

Poland—Charging irregularities in counting ballots, censorship restrictions and persecution of non-Communists, the U. S. note to Warsaw accused the Russian-dominated government of violation of its commitments to hold free and unfettered elections.

To achieve such elections, the U. S. said, fullest freedom must be given to such parties as the Polish Workers, Peasants, Labor and Socialists. Further, representatives of those parties must be granted positions on electoral commissions; local results must be announced, and adequate appeal provided for election disputes.

MOBILIZATION: Plan Ahead

Warning that the U. S. will have little time for preparation before the next war, army and navy members of the services' industrial college issued a 37-page report outlining tentative plans for economic mobilization in event of hostilities.

Elaborate groundwork for M-Day would be laid during peacetime under the plan. Headed by the President, a national security council would formulate diplomatic and military policy; a resources board would develop policies for controlling wartime economy; a central research agency would co-ordinate scientific work, and a civilian plans board would fit together the activities of the various groups.

In addition, a national intelligence authority would furnish planners with necessary information; a foreign resources board would evaluate the requirements of countries aiding our economy, and a public relations agency would keep the public informed on mobilization plans.

Complementing the services' work, Donald M. Nelson, former war production chief, will undertake a civilian study of economic mobilization at the request of President Truman.

CONGRESSIONAL PENSIONS

Careers End but Not U. S. Pay

WASHINGTON. — Although their careers as lawmakers on Capitol Hill are over, many of the congressmen who won't return in January can remain on federal payrolls by qualifying for pensions.

At least 57 congressmen have ended their service, 36 of them quitting voluntarily and 21 having been defeated in their campaigns for re-election.

Beginning next year, congressmen who have served long enough and pay the minimum assessment will start drawing retirement pay as do other former federal employees. It will range from $1,500 to upwards of $7,500 a year.

Retiring congressmen who have reached the age of 62 and have met the other qualifications can start getting the checks with the start of 1947. Younger men must wait until they are 62.

Pension provisions of the new congressional reorganization law show that some of the national figures who have gone down to defeat in this year's primaries can have old age security if they meet requirements.

Briefly, these requirements are that they have served six years and that they deposit with the retirement fund a minimum back payment of $2,674 to cover the last five years. If they wish to make larger back payments, they can obtain pensions up to three-fourths of their total average pay while in congress.

Under new law, 71-year-old Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Dem., Tex.), chairman of the House judiciary committee, who is retiring after 17 terms, appears eligible for the largest pension if he wants it.

By paying in $2,674, Sumners can receive approximately $6,300 yearly. If he ups the ante on back payments, he can increase that amount only slightly, because congressmen received only $7,500 yearly pay during a large part of his tenure.

With a similar $2,674 payment, Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, defeated for Democratic renomination in the Montana primary, can draw about $4,900 yearly. A like amount is available for Sen. Henrik Shipstead (Rep., Minn.), also defeated.

New Timetable

Streamlined 'Modern' Year Sought in World Calendar

WASHINGTON.—The old horse-and-buggy timetable by which Americans trustingly counted the shopping days until Christmas and sweated out the due dates of their promissory notes isn't sufficiently jet-propelled for this atomic age, four congressmen insisted in introducing bills for adoption of a fixed, perpetual world calendar.

The proposed calendar would divide the year into four quarters of 91 days each, the first month in each quarter having 31 days and the succeeding two months 30 days each. The 365th day would be a world holiday and in leap year the 366th day also would be a holiday. The year-end world holiday, according to Senator Murray of Montana, one of the sponsors, would be dedicated to international peace and friendship.

"This modernization provides a calendar the same each year perpetually, equalizes the quarters and fixes holidays so they fall on the same day and date each year," Murray said.

Fourteen nations already have endorsed the proposed world calendar. These include China, traditionally polite to foreign innovations and six Latin-American countries, where siestas need no calendar guide. Norway, Greece, Esthonia, Hungary, Spain, Turkey and even Afghanistan also have joined the movement.

In addition to providing future youngsters with a new birthday, February 30, and a year-end holiday, proponents maintain that the new system would facilitate accounting and make statistics more readily comparable. They failed to mention that it also would help a man keep his wedding anniversary straight.

Vet Stowaway Seeking Work In Europe Held

BAD NAUHEIM, GERMANY.—Discouraged by conditions in the United States when he went in search of a job, Ralph K. Betz, 26, of Willoughby, Ohio, army veteran of 42 months' service, went back to Germany in search of a job, but instead found himself detained in the city jail here facing possible deportation charges.

Betz, who served in the European theater and was wounded in France, was bitter about being detained and wryly remarked: "When Europeans sneak into the American zone illegally, they set up a camp for them but an American they throw in jail."

No Charges Filed.

Army headquarters at Frankfurt said no charges had been filed against the former soldier. An army officer said he was arrested after failing to report twice daily to the provost marshal, as directed when the investigation began.

After his arrest, Betz claimed that military officials have known his story ever since he arrived here last May in quest of a job. He admits that he came into Germany without a passport or military orders by the simple expedient of stowing away on a troopship.

"So many G.I.s couldn't find jobs at home and with prices so high you couldn't live on your salary if you got a job," Betz said.

Small Utah Town Reverses Common Movie Procedure

BLUE SPRING, UTAH. — Aspiring movie actors of this community do not go to Hollywood to get before the camera. Hollywood brings its camera and comes to Blue Spring!

Recently more than 175 men, women and children from Blue Spring, Panguitch and other towns were employed as extras and bit players in the film "Bob, Son of Battle" being filmed here.

Entire families deserted their household and farm chores for the glamorous work of the cinema. Four generations of one family worked in the picture. Myron Proctor, 77; his daughter, Mrs. Eva Tebbs; her daughter, Mrs. Shirley Horne, and her small daughter, Kay, were all competing for camera angles in the production.

Daughter Files Claim For $250,000 Damages

PORTLAND, ORE. — Charging that she was committed to the state mental hospital to prevent her sharing in a million-dollar estate, Miss Agnes McBride filed suit in circuit court for $250,000 damages against her mother.

The daughter declared that her mother inherited the bulk of an estate estimated in excess of one million dollars upon the death of her husband in January, 1945.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

MOUNTAIN FLYING

Some time you may want to fly the Rocky mountains. In that case, there are a few things to remember. First of all, air is a liquid. It follows the contour of the land over which it is blowing (or flowing). Most of the winds in the Rocky mountains are westerlies, blowing toward the east. As they cross the Rockies, they naturally tumble down the eastern slopes and there are great "falls of air." The force or pressure of this air sweeping down adds to the pull of gravity, and sometimes pilots have trouble getting their planes high enough to go over the Great Divide.

"Never fly where you can't turn around," is the advice of Eddie Drapela, veteran mountain flyer of Grand Junction, Colo., intrepid veteran who knows what he is talking about. He often flies small planes 14,000 feet high — and carries passengers. What Eddie means is: Don't fly through a canyon between walls that won't let you turn around.

Other advice to flyers in the Rockies—or other mountainous region — includes such fundamentals as checking the winds aloft over your take-off point. If those winds aloft are over 25 miles an hour, keep your fingers crossed because you may encounter turbulence over the mountains that will flick your plane 1,000 feet up or down in a minute's time.

"Get plenty of altitude and keep it," is another bit of Wilson advice to the novice mountain flyer. Also, don't overload your plane. And be sure you have a plane with a high rate of climb. A CAB report shows that the lives of five Colorado residents were claimed in two mountain crashes because the pilots failed to heed the placarded CAB loading weights of their planes. Clouds, storms, wind and temperature are all hazards in mountain flying. The best thing to do is to talk it over with an experienced mountain pilot before you try it yourself in a light plane.

World-famous Yellowstone park once again has been linked to the nation's airline network. Western Air lines has started two flights daily to the West Yellowstone airport, resuming service suspended in 1941 as a wartime measure.

LICK OLD PROBLEMS

Windshield-icing and interior fogging — two of the toughest problems to face flyers since Kittyhawk —have been licked. A new glass-coating technique for plate glass, laminated safety glass and multiple glazed units in aircraft windshields has been announced by Pittsburgh Plate Glass company. The development follows years of research in the field. The new technique utilizes a permanent transparent coating, which conducts electricity from metal bus bars around the edge of the glass. It also adds to the strength of the glass.

NEW AIR ROUTE

Opening of regular commercial air service between Lima, Peru, and New York by the Tampa, New Orleans and Tampico air lines is expected in the near future. A survey flight between the two points recently was completed by Capts. Hugh Wells, pilot, and Patrick Byrnes, co-pilot, who were flying a 32-passenger, 4-engined Sikorsky flying boat. They covered 3,900 miles in mapping the new route. The flight was believed to be a record hop for a flying boat.

NATIVE RESIDENT . . . Ben Laney, governor of Arkansas, is a native and lifelong resident of the state. He was born in a small rural area of Ouachita county called "Cooterneck." Before his election as governor, he was a school teacher, drug store operator, oil man, agriculturist and twice mayor of Camden. Veteran of World War I, he is married and has three children.

sas was a part of Louisiana from 1804 to 1812, and from 1812 to 1819 a part of Missouri. In 1836, Arkansas became a state.

Arkansas is a great agricultural state, with soil new and fertile. Levees, ditches and canals have redeemed alluvial lands along the St. Francis, the Arkansas and Mississippi rivers. The state has an almost inexhaustible timber supply, with forests of pine and hardwoods covering nearly two-thirds of the state. At Eureka, Heber and Hot Springs, health-giving waters have long been used.

Industries of Arkansas are devoted almost entirely to extracting or processing products which originate within the state's boundaries.

There are 28 oil and gas producing fields in six southern Arkansas counties and 16 gas fields in five western counties. Petroleum reserves are estimated at more than 300 million barrels and reserves of natural gas at over 1,000 billion cubic feet.

Climate, scenic attractions, recreational facilities and curative waters combine to bring great numbers of tourists and health seekers to Arkansas each year. The state's most widely known attraction is Hot Springs National park, containing 47 hot springs with temperatures up to 145 degrees.

Adjacent to Hot Springs are Lakes Catherine and Hamilton with more than 450 miles of shoreline. Annual spring racing meets are held at Oak Lawn jockey club. Golf is played the year around.

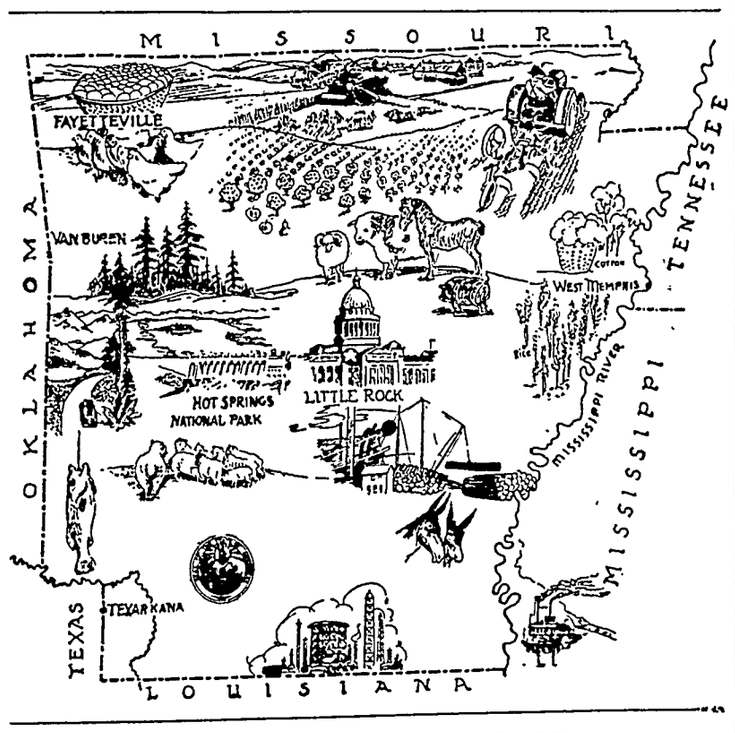
The state's scenic highlands include two mountain groups, the Ozarks and the Ouachitas, both easily accessible. State parks provide exceptional recreational facilities.

Sportsman's Paradise.

Arkansas' duck shooting is nationally famous. Rice fields in the prairie section attract mallards during the winter migration. Deer, quail and turkey provide plenty of hunting, and fishing may be enjoyed in the numerous lakes and streams. "Float fishing" on the White river and some of its tributaries is a unique Arkansas pastime, which is becoming increasingly popular with visitors.

"I am fully convinced that Arkansas is destined to become one of the great playgrounds of America," said Franklin D. Roosevelt at Booneville, Ark., when he visited there in 1938.

And many of the rest of us who have visited that state can heartily endorse the late President's words!



De Soto's Futile Quest for Gold Brought Exploration of Arkansas

Arkansas was one of the earliest of the Mississippi states to be explored. The first white man to touch Arkansas soil was Hernando de Soto, the Spanish explorer who discovered the Mississippi river. In May, 1541, he came to a river so broad that he called it, in Spanish, the Rio Grande, or great river. The Indian name for the stream, Meschacebe, "father of waters," has come down to us, however, as Mississippi. De Soto crossed the river to the Arkansas side.

For nearly a year, the last year of his life, De Soto traveled over what is now Arkansas, through a vast wilderness inhabited by wild animals and equally wild savages. Beginning near the mouth of the White river, De Soto went up the western shore of the Mississippi beyond the mouth of the St. Francis river, then journeyed southwest until he came to the Arkansas river. There is a tradition that he was defeated in a battle with the Indians near where Jacksonport now stands, and that he was compelled to turn north again.

Learning that there were mountains to the northwest, he continued toward northeast Arkansas where he hoped to find gold, traveling through swamps and dense forests and crossing mountain streams. Disappointed in not finding gold, he turned south, passed over the Boston mountains, crossed the Arkansas river near Dardanelle Rock, and came into the land of the Cayas. Here, De Soto fell seriously ill, and a friendly Indian chief brought him to a lake of "very hot water" where he was healed. This lake was doubtless the now famous Hot Springs.

On Ouachita river near the springs, De Soto and his party found salt which the Indians gathered and sold to their neighbors. The explorers spent the winter of 1541, a severe one, in an Indian village on the Ouachita, De Soto's faithful interpreter, Juan Ortiz, died. Disheartened by not finding gold and losing so many of his men, De Soto resumed his journey south in the spring of 1542. He followed the Ouachita to the Red river and then went downstream to the Mississippi. Exposure brought on a fever and De Soto died, his survivors burying him in the great river he had discovered.

Spain profited little by the explorations of De Soto. Through her negligence, the Mississippi valley had remained unsettled for nearly a century and a half. But while Spain slept, the French were active. After securing the lands bordering on the St. Lawrence river, France had pushed southward along the Mississippi.

First Public Farm Lands Opened to War Veterans

By WNU Features

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—Marking the first opportunity for ex-G.I.s to realize the dream of a self-sufficient outdoor life for which they dreamed in their lonely wartime vigils from the shores of China to the banks of the Elbe, the first public farm lands to be opened to veterans of World War II for farming soon will be available in the 7,527-acre Tule Lake sector of the Klamath irrigation project in Northern California.

More than 15,000 veterans are expected to apply for the 86 farm units to be awarded this year. Located near the California - Oregon border at an elevation of 4,100 feet, the farm units comprise rich irrigated lands which are highly productive. Varying in size from 60.8 to 141.3 acres, the units have an average size of 87.5 acres. Most valuable land is found in the smaller units.

Post Regulations.

Qualifications for entrymen and an explanation of the method of selection to be followed in awarding the lands are contained in a public notice posted in the Klamath Falls, Ore., post office, according to an announcement by regional bureau of reclamation headquarters here.

Copies of the public notice and application forms are being mailed to all veterans requesting them. Veterans interested in the lands who have not contacted the bureau may secure full details by writing to the superintendent, bureau of reclamation, at Klamath Falls or to the regional director of the bureau at Sacramento.

Establish Deadline.

All applications returned to Klamath Falls by September 15 will be considered as having been filed simultaneously, it was announced. Because of the large number of applications expected, bureau officials report that it is doubtful if any lands will be left for consideration of applications received after that date.

The procedure to be followed in selecting the entrymen includes a local examining board, a public drawing and the right of disqualified applicants to appeal decisions of the board.

Qualifications for applicants, as set forth in bureau regulations, include citizenship, character, farm experience, minimum of $2,000 capital and physical condition permitting manual labor involved in farm operation. No minimum age is set but regulations require service of at least 90 days in the armed forces, together with an honorable discharge.

Good Children Cost Less, Survey Shows

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — It costs less to keep a good child than a bad one, according to figures cited at the Central States parole conference in the Hoosier capital. Reports indicated Indianapolis pays 7 cents to keep a child out of trouble and 75 dollars to care for a child in trouble.

Main item in the city's program to keep children out of trouble is an athletic program in which 75,000 Indianapolis youngsters have participated thus far this year. Cost has been approximately 7 cents a child.

A delinquent child who is turned over to the juvenile aid division for care costs the taxpayers $75 to cover expense of administration, investigation and disposition.

Not Publicity Stunt, Publicity Man Insists

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Hurt feelings, arising from persistent razzing of his friends, represented the most severe injury incurred by Richard S. Haggman, publicity director of the Kansas City chamber of commerce, when he walked through the glass panel of his office door. A piece of falling glass, which barely nicked his right hand, was the only other injury.

Haggman denied emphatically that the whole thing was a publicity stunt, explaining that he never closes the door and that he turned into his office without noticing that the wind had blown the door shut.

An office clerk, who was in Haggman's office cleaning up broken glass from another office door which had blown shut a few minutes before, shattering the glass, shook his head resignedly when the second pane crashed, and started cleaning up the mess.

JESUS AND COVETOUSNESS

MEMORY SELECTION—He that trusteth in his riches shall fall; but the righteous shall flourish as a branch.—Proverbs 11:28.

The Ten Commandments, the study of which we conclude today (the remaining lessons of the quarter deal with other laws), have been revealed to us as being characterized by their brevity, their comprehensive touch with all of life, and fidelity to the right. But they are also unique and different from all other laws in that they reach into the inner recesses of a man's heart, a realm where only God can judge and act.

This last commandment (against covetousness) emphasizes that point, for it does not expressly require or forbid any act, but deals with the motive of man's action. Man can judge another man's acts, but he cannot judge his motives, desires or thoughts. God must do that.

But man can, by the grace of God, control his motives; and hence we have this commandment and its interpretation.

I. Covetousness — What It Is (Exod. 20:17).

To covet does not mean just to desire, but to have an unrestrained desire for that which we ought not to have or which by right belongs to another.

It shows itself in our day in a more general way — an inordinate desire for possessions in general. There too man loses himself. It may be a surprise to many to learn that coveting, or desiring what belongs to another, is a sin. It has become one of the "respectable sins" accepted in the best circles and practiced by many church people.

As a matter of fact, this sin underlies all the other sins against which the commandments speak. He who has a love for money and an evil desire to have his neighbor's possessions will hate, lie, steal, cheat, kill. In fact, as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says, "The whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment."

II. Covetousness — What It Does (Prov. 11:23, 24; Luke 12:13-21).

1. It Makes a Man Stingy (Prov. 11:23, 24). The righteous man seeks that which is good and he knows nothing of the close-fisted stinginess which withholds from God and man. Sometimes to economize is to lose, and to be liberal is to gain—especially in the things of God.

God gives liberally (James 1:5), and the man who knows God scatters not only his money, but his riches of mind and service for God's glory.

In sad contrast is the man who keeps his possessions for himself and reaps only the barrenness of soul and leanness of life.

2. It Makes a Man Envious (Luke 12:13-15). Noting the ability of Jesus in dealing with others, this man thought to divert the Lord from his real ministry to the souls of men to the settling of social problems—all because he was greedy.

Some church leaders think that is our business now — to preach and promote a social gospel. They had better reread verse 14.

3. It Makes a Man Selfish (Luke 12:16, 17). The one who was known to his friends as the "rich man" (v. 16) was known to God as a "fool" (v. 20), because having more than he could use he hoarded it for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

4. It Makes a Man Proud (Luke 12:18). All around him were the hungry. He needed no barns, for there were the empty hands of the needy; but money had made him hard and proud. He would build bigger barns, perhaps the biggest in that community. People would marvel at his prosperity and he would live long to enjoy it.

But it did not work out that way, for, alas, it is true of covetousness that—

5. It Makes a Man Foolish (Luke 12:19-21). The man who reckons without God is sure to come to grief. Leaving him out of one's thinking and planning invites disaster.

God called, and he who had thought to go on for years in selfish pleasure, found that he must go and leave it all. Worse yet, he had to face the judgment of God upon his eternal soul.

Do not fail to note that there is a way to lay up treasures in heaven —by a "close walk with Christ, coming to appreciate and cultivate the joys of the spirit," and so using one's possessions that they count for the glory of God. Even gold can be so invested for God as to send it on to eternity. What an opportunity!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS WORTH KNOWING

By Mrs. R. A. J.

If you have a nice enamel waste can, melt parafin and cover the bottom of the can. It will keep it from rusting, and you can still wash the can out with cold water, without removing the coating of parafin.

If your ice trays stick and are hard to remove from the refrigerator place salt on the bottom and around tthe edge of the trays every time you fill them, and the next time they will come right out.

* * *

If you have difficulty with extra fat remaining on top of the gravy just take a clean peice of cheese cloth and put two ice cubes in it and run this cloth over the top of your gravy dish, and the hot fat will co-here to the cloth, and you can remove same and place it in your waste fat can.

The Typographical Error

Even The Printers Have Troubles

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly,
You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it will somehow get by.
Till the forms are off the presses, it is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down into a corner and it never stirs or peeps,
That typographical error, too small for human eyes;
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size;
The Boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and moans;
The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing you see.

Light hogs make better use of skimmilk than heavy hogs.

With more pullets than normal being raised this year, poultrymen will want to cull their flocks closely before housing this fall to avoid crowding.

Sell it with a want ad.

Continued scarcity of commercial fertilizer is expected. Therefore it will be a wise plan to get soil tests made now and order needed fertilizers early. Skimmilk is a good protein for hogs.

SILO WALLS NOW RE STORING SILAGE

should be inspected ee if walls are in need of t before this year's sil- stored, says Harold Bea- a State College agricul- gineer.

oration caused by sileage ake necessary frequent at of walls with a ce- ash or other coating. who have clay tile hould give special atten- the martar joints of the structures. If the joints are buckling or are in bad state of repair they should be pointed up with new mortar, Beaty says. Silage acids have no effect on hard-glazed tile, but they do affect the motar between the joints.

For the concrete silos, the presence of loose, crumbling particles is warning that walls need treatment. Good quality concrete, properly mixed, usually is not affected by silage acids.

Silos with wooden walls may be treated with creosote but should not be painted. However, all metal reinforcing used on the outside should be painted to prevent corroding.

Linseed oil also may be used for treating silo walls. Usually two coats are necessary, with the last coat applied so it will dry at least 2 weeks before the silo is filled. One gallon of linseed oil will cover about 200 square feet with a two-coat application.

Asphalt and coal tar make satisfactory coatings for silo walls but need frequent repairing because of the tendency to dry and crack. Commercial materials also are available for treating silo walls. While more expensive, many of them are also more durable.

Blanching endive improves flavor, crispness, tenderness and appearance. Any method that excludes light and keeps the inner leaves dry is satisfactory. Nailing two large boards together in the shape of an inverted "v" and placing them over the plants is a good method.

Some gardeners gather the outer leaves up and tie them together in a bunch. During rainy weather, check carefully and expose the inside to air if there evidence of rotting.

New gardeners are usually puzzled as to how to harvest broccoli. The flower head, like cauliflower, is the edible part of the plant. The head should be in the tight, green bud stage when harvested. Cut with about 6 inches of stem. Side shoots and more flower heads will develop later. Always keep harvesting before yellow blooms develop to get heavy production.

Brussels sprouts develop in the axils of the leaves along the central stem. The sprouts close to the ground mature first. Harvest when or before the lower leaves start to turn yellow. Remove each leaf before snapping off each sprout. Young sprouts higher on the plant will develop later.

Cave storages should be inspected and necessary repair work completed within the next month. Damp, moldy conditions in caves mean that there is poor circulation of air. Many caves have only 4 or 5-inch tile openings in the ceilings. Now is a good time to make larger opening to insure proper ventilation. A vent 1 foot spuare is needed per 1,200 cubic feet of space.

Clean out the cave storage soon and have it spic and span to receive the surplus garden vegetables. All refuse should be removed. Molds and rot organisms can be killed by thoroughly spraying the floor, walls, ceilings and both sides of the shelves and bins. Dissolve 1 pound of copper sulfate (bluestone) in 15 gallons of water for the spray solution.

Summer planned vegetables, such as Chinese cabbage, endive and lettuce, should be fed with a liquid fertilizer to hurry growth because there's always danger of an early freeze. Liquid fertilizer is recommended because the roots will get nutrients immediately. Dissolve 3 table spoons of a good fertilizer in a gallon of water and apply about every 7 days.

Weeds are going to seed in many gardens. In some cases this may be due to let-down in gardening enthusiasm. In many cases, it is the result of vacations. War should be waged on the weeds at once. Allowing weeds to go to seed in the garden means more work next year.

Gardens have been remarkably productive in most sections of Iowa. Favorable growing weather and fewer insects have been mainly responsible for production and outstanding yields. Surpluses should not be allowed to go to waste, and families should preserve as much as possible. Next season's yield may not be as good. Arrange to give away or sell vegetables which the family will be unable to use.

Tender vegetables, such as tomatoes, will not store well if even slightly hurt by frost. Eggplants, peppers, tomatoes and other tender vegetables should be harvested the evening before frost is predicted. Sweet potatoes need not be harvested until after frost. But the injured vines must be cut off the mounds to prevent rot from passing into the roots. Roots should be dug as soon thereafter as possible.

* * *

Carrots, beets, parsnips, salsify, cabbage and other hardy vegetables can stand repeated light frost. Such vegetables should be left in the garden as long as possible and will usually not have to be dug until late October or early November.

RESEED LAWN GRASS IN FALL INSTEAD OF SPRING

Greater success can be expected in getting lawn grass established on thin or bald spots if reseeding is done now instead of next spring, says Larry Grove, Iowa State College horticulturist.

The first step is to prepare a fine seedbed and fertilize. Then, for average lawn conditions, a mixture of 3 pounds of Kentucky bluegrass and one pound of redtop should be seeded. Those who like clover in their lawns may add ¼ pound of White Dutch clover. This amount of seed is enough for about 1,000 square feet.

Grove says fall is a better time for reseeding because the seedlings don't have as many weeds to compete with as in the spring.

Give to the Red Cross.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS WORTH KNOWING

By Mrs. R. A. J.

If you have a nice enamel waste can, melt parafin and cover the bottom of the can. It will keep it from rusting, and you can still wash the can out with cold water, without removing the coating of parafin.

If your ice trays stick and are hard to remove from the refrigerator place salt on the bottom and around tthe edge of the trays every time you fill them, and the next time they will come right out.

* * *

If you have difficulty with extra fat remaining on top of the gravy just take a clean peice of cheese cloth and put two ice cubes in it and run this cloth over the top of your gravy dish, and the hot fat will co-here to the cloth, and you can remove same and place it in your waste fat can.

The Typographical Error

Even The Printers Have Troubles

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly,
You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it will somehow get by.
Till the forms are off the presses, it is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down into a corner and it never stirs or peeps,
That typographical error, too small for human eyes;
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size;
The Boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and moans;
The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing you see.

SILO WALLS NOW RE STORING SILAGE

should be inspected ee if walls are in need of t before this year's silstored, says Harold Bea- State College agricul- gineer.

oration caused by sileage ake necessary frequent t of walls with a ceash or other coating. who have clay tile ould give special attenthe martar joints of the structures. If the joints are buckling or are in bad state of repair they should be pointed up with new mortar, Beaty says. Silage acids have no effect on hard-glazed tile, but they do affect the motar between the joints.

For the concrete silos, the presence of loose, crumbling particles is warning that walls need treatment. Good quality concrete, properly mixed, usually is not affected by silage acids.

Silos with wooden walls may be treated with creosote but should not be painted. However, all metal reinforcing used on the outside should be painted to prevent corroding.

Linseed oil also may be used for treating silo walls. Usually two coats are necessary, with the last coat applied so it will dry at least 2 weeks before the silo is filled. One gallon of linseed oil will cover about 200 square feet with a two-coat application.

Asphalt and coal tar make satisfactory coatings for silo walls but need frequent repairing because of the tendency to dry and crack. Commercial materials also are available for treating silo walls. While more expensive, many of them are also more durable.

Keep Those Pigs

●The biggest corn crop in history!--that's the prospect this fall for Iowa and the entire nation.

●We already have one of the largest oats crops in many years--and one of the biggest wheat crops.

●There will be a definite shortage of meat next winter, with prospects for very strong prices for hogs.

Ample grain supplies and a meat shortage will mean greater profits for finished hogs. Hold those light hogs and finish them out for the best and greatest profit.

Supplement farm grains with a blended protein supplement fortified with minerals and vitamins. The corn saved by feeding a blended supplement will buy more Protein supplements properly fortified than at any time in history. A balanced ration produces quality pork more economically and profitably.

Klemme Cooperative Grain Company

e Famers' Elevator" — Glen Bridges, Manager

Blanching endive improves flavor, crispness, tenderness and appearance. Any method that excludes light and keeps the inner leaves dry is satisfactory. Nailing two large boards together in the shape of an inverted "v" and placing them over the plants is a good method.

Some gardeners gather the outer leaves up and tie them together in a bunch. During rainy weather, check carefully and expose the inside to air if there evidence of rotting.

New gardeners are usually puzzled as to how to harvest broccoli. The flower head, like cauliflower, is the edible part of the plant. The head should be in the tight, green bud stage when harvested. Cut with about 6 inches of stem. Side shoots and more flower heads will develop later. Always keep harvesting before yellow blooms develop to get heavy production.

Brussels sprouts develop in the axils of the leaves along the central stem. The sprouts close to the ground mature first. Harvest when or before the lower leaves start to turn yellow. Remove each leaf before snapping off each sprout. Young sprouts higher on the plant will develop later.

Cave storages should be inspected and necessary repair work completed within the next month. Damp, moldy conditions in caves mean that there is poor circulation of air. Many caves have only 4 or 5-inch tile openings in the ceilings. Now is a good time to make larger opening to insure proper ventilation. A vent 1 foot spuare is needed per 1,200 cubic feet of space.

Clean out the cave storage soon and have it spic and span to receive the surplus garden vegetables. All refuse should be removed. Molds and rot organisms can be killed by thoroughly spraying the floor, walls, ceilings and both sides of the shelves and bins. Dissolve 1 pound of copper sulfate (bluestone) in 15 gallons of water for the spray solution.

Summer planned vegetables, such as Chinese cabbage, endive and lettuce, should be fed with a liquid fertilizer to hurry growth because there's always danger of an early freeze. Liquid fertilizer is recommended because the roots will get nutrients immediately. Dissolve 3 table spoons of a good fertilizer in a gallon of water and apply about every 7 days.

Weeds are going to seed in many gardens. In some cases this may be due to let-down in gardening enthusiasm. In many cases, it is the result of vacations. War should be waged on the weeds at once. Allowing weeds to go to seed in the garden means more work next year.

Gardens have been remarkably productive in most sections of Iowa. Favorable growing weather and fewer insects have been mainly responsible for production and outstanding yields. Surpluses should not be allowed to go to waste, and families should preserve as much as possible. Next season's yield may not be as good. Arrange to give away or sell vegetables which the family will be unable to use.

Tender vegetables, such as tomatoes, will not store well if even slightly hurt by frost. Eggplants, peppers, tomatoes and other tender vegetables should be harvested the evening before frost is predicted. Sweet potatoes need not be harvested until after frost. But the injured vines must be cut off the mounds to prevent rot from passing into the roots. Roots should be dug as soon thereafter as possible.

* * *

Carrots, beets, parsnips, salsify, cabbage and other hardy vegetables can stand repeated light frost. Such vegetables should be left in the garden as long as possible and will usually not have to be dug until late October or early November.

RESEED LAWN GRASS IN FALL INSTEAD OF SPRING

Greater success can be expected in getting lawn grass established on thin or bald spots if reseeding is done now instead of next spring, says Larry Grove, Iowa State College horticulturist.

The first step is to prepare a fine seedbed and fertilize. Then, for average lawn conditions, a mixture of 3 pounds of Kentucky bluegrass and one pound of redtop should be seeded. Those who like clover in their lawns may add ¼ pound of White Dutch clover. This amount of seed is enough for about 1,000 square feet.

Grove says fall is a better time for reseeding because the seedlings don't have as many weeds to compete with as in the spring.

Give to the Red Cross.

THE PSYCHIATRIST AND THE WORLD

("Psychiatry may play an important part in world peace, United Nations World Health Organization is told."—News Item)

Doctor (looking at the battered world) — Now just relax and be perfectly candid with me. I want to find out what's the matter with you.

World — Can you find anything that ain't?

Doctor—It's all a matter of psychiatry, I think; just a matter of reviewing your past life.

World — Reviewing my past will be no help, doc. It only makes me feel worse.

Doctor — Just leave that to me. Now we've got to find out what has made you act the way you do. Did anything ever happen to you as a child? Did you ever fall out of your high chair?

World — I couldn't say for certain. But I've been falling out of it ever since!

—*—

Doctor — I ask that because I observe many bruises on your head.

World — You should see the ones in some other places!

Doctor — Was your home life marked by violence at any period?

World — Sometimes I don't feel that I had any home life; it seems that I was always on horseback or on an army truck.

Doctor — Did you as a child feel frustrated, unable to express yourself, balked in attaining your desires?

World — One time when I showed up with gun powder, which was really a lovely plaything, they bawled me out sumpin' awful. I got licked for that, too.

Doctor — Clear as a bell! They filled your young mind with the feeling of frustrations. Your natural development was thwarted. I'll bet they even objected when you played with poison gas.

World — Yep. What a row they made. I remember they said I would come to no good end and might even wind up as the kind of boy who would throw atom bombs.

—*—

Doctor — Just as I thought! You were never allowed to express yourself fully! You became an introvert, a duplexvert and possibly a nincomvert.

World — Yeah! Ain't parents awful?

(This settles everything. The psychiatrist promises to fix him up in no time. All he has to do is to let himself go, shake off all inhibitions, regard himself as master of his fate, take some new vitamins, and come in every Tuesday between wars).

From the dead of Tanembogo,
From Tulagi's sandy graves
And through Lunga's battered palm trees
And from shallow, fetid caves
Come the voices of our heroes
Like a challenge tensely hurl'd,
"What about them lofty speeches?
"How's about that better world?"

Gaunt, gray ghosts of valiant youngsters—
Kids who made the sacrifice—
Stir beneath the palm fronds asking
"Cancha make it worth the price?
What of goals for which we battled?
What of dreams that made us glad?
And the world can merely whisper,
"Would we had the answer, lad!"

Atomic Bomb Must Be Outlawed to Save World

THE President's committee, headed by Sen. Carl Hatch (D., N. M.) which observed the atomic bomb tests at Bikini, and the military evaluation board of the joint chiefs of staff have submitted their first report on these naval experiments in atomic energy.

After reciting the results of the two blasts, the President's committee tersely said: "The tests at Bikini strongly indicate that future wars employing atomic bombs may well destroy nations and change present standards of civilization."

This reporter, as one who witnessed the Bikini experiment, is firmly convinced that unless there is a change in thinking, a veritable revolution in the minds of the American people regarding the future of atomic energy, and specifically the atomic bomb . . . unless there is an end to our monopoly of this tremendous force, we may keep our secret for a few short years, but we shall gain the hate and envy and suspicion of the entire world.

There is no alternative . . . either we share the secret of the atomic bomb and not only outlaw it internationally as a weapon of war, and outlaw war itself, or we surely are headed toward a third world war of annihilation. This nation and no other nation can protect itself against atomic power merely by outlawing it as we have outlawed poison gas. There is a defense against poison gas. Within a few years other nations will have mastered the secret of the manufacture of atomic bombs, and against these bombs there is and there will be no defense.

No matter how holy we may be in our determination not to use this absolute weapon aggressively, we will continue to reap the distrust and suspicion of every other nation. We have used it against Japan. Why would we not use it again? Such is the reasoning of worried realists everywhere.

The Baruch report to the United Nations, without question, should be adopted. And the United Nations should ban the bomb, and to keep it banned, should organize an international inspection or police force to make certain there is no evasion afoot.

'Golden Rule' Cited

Speaking on the atomic bomb and atomic energy recently, Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace said:

"We have all heard of the golden rule. Some of us say that it is a beautiful ideal, but not very practical. I say that Christian morality, not as practiced during the last 1900 years, but as Jesus himself taught it, has finally become the most practical thing in the world.

"The golden rule means that we look at things from the other fellow's point of view as well as our own. If every nation in the world could, for one week, drop its selfish, hateful, maneuvering and adopt the golden rule, we would work out an international moral code that would permit us to use atomic energy safely so as to unlock for us one door after another to abundance and joyous living."

The scientists and physicists who discovered and successfully manufactured the atomic bomb are the most international-minded people in the world. They have real international co-operation and international thinking. International peace will not come until the rest of the peoples of the world have this same feeling of co-operation. Scientists are aware of the horror they have created in the atomic bomb . . . they are aware of the danger of the Frankenstein boomerang . . . and no group has been more vocal than they in urging that their secret, now our secret, be given to all the nations and that international control for protection be set up in the United Nations.

The committee report pointed out that the bureau of ships is studying the results of the Bikini tests and says, "undoubtedly they will point the way towards changes in ship size, design and structure." The report further says that such changes in ships can offer increased immunity from flash and blast effect, but such changes will not protect manpower from the catastrophe of deadly gamma and neutron radiation.

This reporter believes that once atomic energy is let loose in war, there will be no need for navies. There will be nothing for them to protect, no cities, no navy yards, nor harbor installations. Neither will there be any need for armies. For war with atomic bombs will mean a war of extermination of civilian populations. The wisest minds now working in our military establishment can see no adequate defense, not even much chance of minimizing the terrible destruction which would ensue even by going deep underground.

by GRANTLAND RICE

THERE seems to be a wide divergence of opinion as to whether the rabid fanatic is entitled to boo a good ball player on an off day and feed him the Old Bronx Cheer in his time of trouble. As you may know, there are two sides to every argument, the same as a plank. Usually both are just as wooden, leading nowhere, but in this case the argument at hand is a big part of baseball.

Booing a visiting or hostile player is another matter. This is often a tribute to the damage said player has slipped to the home club.

Honus Wagner

The argument we are taking up here concerns the ethical side in riding the home athlete when he is in the process of cavorting on the soapy chute, otherwise known as a slump.

The fan's argument is that as long as he pays his entrance fee and the game is offering him no particular thrill for the money invested, he has a perfect right to pick up his enjoyment and entertainment over another route, which is letting the erring or futile ball player know just what the fan thinks about him.

The fan has a good case here as long as he doesn't move into personal invective, involving the player's ancestry and his present family, which often happens. The only half-way shock I ever picked up over a booing incident occurred many years ago when Pittsburgh fans started riding Honus Wagner.

Wagner was then in his 41st year. He had been an outstanding star for over 20 seasons. He had given millions as many thrills as any ball player had ever displayed up to the reign of Babe Ruth, the all-time thrill king. His brilliant work at short with his bushel-basket hands, his great base running, his tremendous hitting through two decades seemed to be quite enough to allow for a few lapses in his fading days.

Home and Visiting Boos

But the theme song of the baseball crowd is: "It isn't what you used to be — it's what you are today." Just what the Flying Dutchman thought of the vocal raspberries thrown his way no one ever will know. But I've figured ever since that if a home crowd could boo Wagner, no one else should be immune.

Ball players tell me they have no feeling about being booed in hostile hamlets. I know John McGraw relished the dislike he deliberately built up in Chicago, St. Louis and other cities away from New York. I've heard Matty booed in New York—but not McGraw, although he may have been.

The swiftest and most effective reaction to booing from a rival crowd came from Cobb years ago. Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, had just been killed by Carl Mays in a Yankee game. Cobb had been quoted in an interview denouncing Mays. Cobb denied the interview with considerable fervor.

The next day, appearing with the Tigers against the Yankees, Ty took a terrific vocal lathering from some 35,000 Yankee fans. "It's no fun," Cobb told me that night, "to be booed, hissed and cursed by 35,000 American citizens."

But in place of curling up or growing sour, Cobb stepped out that day and got four hits, stole two or three bases, scored several runs and broke up the ball game. The answer is that the big crowd was cheering him in his last time up.

Showing Up the Mob

This seems to be the best answer. The best reply to a boo or a vocal cataclysm of hate and derision is to show up the maudlin mob of goat-getters. You rarely hear them booing a fellow who is making good. No ball player ever took the terrific vocal riding Babe Ruth absorbed in the Yankee-Cub world series years ago when he came to bat against Jack Root in Chicago. Packed stands howled and yelled and called Babe names they wouldn't print in the press of purgatory. The Babe applied even viler epithets, one against 45,000, as he pointed to the center field flag pole. That was the most famous home run Babe ever hit in his collection of more than 700.

"All I know about it," the Babe told me later, "is that ball was kinder egg-shaped or flattened out after they found it."

Problem of 1947

We have been talking recently with a number of managers, not club owners or ball players, about the 1947 baseball season. One of the smartest told me this—with the amazing increase in attendance, with the aftermath of the Mexican league and the union arrival, ball players for 1947 are going to demand big pay increases.

"A good many of these deserve such increases," the manager said.

WORK ON FARMS AT STANDSTILL

Hancock county fields were drenched by the heaviest rains of the season during the past week and field work was at a standstill.

Warmer weather was conducive to the development of corn and beans, and corn is beginning to dent in most fields with many others in the dough stage. Several weeks of warm weather is still needed for corn in its race against frost.

Soybeans are rapidly ripening in the earlier fields and leaves are dropping off. Some corn and beans were blown down by heavy winds accompanying some of the thunderstorms the latter part of the week.

Silo filling will get under way this week.

VOTE "NO"

SEPTEMBER 10, 1946 is the date on which the voters of Hancock County will decide upon whether or not a bond issue will be authorized to erect a County Hospital to be located at Britt. The following facts are submitted for the information and guidance of Hancock County voters and taxpayers.

1. The proposed hospital is NOT a Veteran's hospital but would be a county institution supported by taxation of property within Hancock County.

2. Information received from a highely qualified, experienced architect discloses that a forty-five or fifty bed hospital will cost the taxpayers of Hancock County at least $200,000.00 FOR THE BUILDING ALONE. It is immediantely apparent that a $100,000.00 bond issue is only the beginning.

3. The American Hospital Association estimates that the cost of maintaining a hospital is approximately $2000.00 per bed, per year, whether used or not. Statistics show that county hospitals are not generally self-supporting. Any deficit for operating loss will have to be met by additional taxation.

4. If you or a member of your family became seriously ill, would you use the proposed county hospital or would you continue to use hospital facilities available at the present?

5. A hospital in the town the size of Britt will not attract a well-trained surgeon which will result in the fact that most hospital cases will have to go to larger cities for adequate care and treatment.

6. The larger portion of Hancock County residents will still have closer hospital facilities than the proposed hospital at Britt.

7. The people sponsoring this ad, part of whom are Legionaires, feel that the American Legion Posts of Hancock County heve been imposed upon by virtue of the fact that they were asked to endorse one side of a controversial issue. Investigation discloses that the Klemme and Garner Posts endorsed this project with a very small number of the membership present at the meeting and then, only by a small majority.

8. It is fundamental that high taxation results in the decreased value of property.

It has been our purpose to point out some of the more basic propositions and we earnestly hope that you will give these propositions serious consideration. We feel that any citizen is qualified to make up his own mind on this question when he has acquainted himself with the facts involved.

PENICILLIN AID IN MASTITIS CONTROL

Tests at Iowa State College Since 1943 Have Shown It's Best Drug

Iowa dairy farmers who have been plagued with the dreaded disease mastitis in their dairy herds can expect considerable help from penicillin, the wonder drug of medicine.

Dr. R. Allen Packer, Iowa State College veterinarian who was among the first to try the drug on dairy animals infected with the disease, reports gratifying success in the treatments started in 1943.

Packer says the drug is especially fast acting, and treatment can be started on a cow being milked or on a dry cow. In some cases, acute infections improved in 24 hours when treated with the penicillin drug.

Costly Disease

Farmers who have experienced mastitis outbreaks in their herds know that it's a costly disease. A flare-up in the udder results in abnormal, sometimes bloody milk. There is a loss of milk, and the more costly possibility of losing all or part of the udder and having to dispose of a valuable dairy cow.

The first work with penicillin at Iowa State was done in 1943, when the first mold culture was obtained. Steps immediately were taken to increase the supply for the Department of Veterinary Hygiene.

About the same time there was an opportunity to try out the drug on an infected cow in the college herd. Injections were made, and the results were completely satisfactory. The infection was checked and did not appear again during future lactations.

Not a Cure-All

Packer emphasizes, however that penicillin is not a sure cure for all mastitis cases. Different kinds of bacteria cause the disease, and the drug is more effective against some organisms than others. Because of this fact, he urges having laboratory tests made before treatment is started if possible. And because penicillin does not kill bacteria by contact, a concentration of the drug must be kept in the udder for some time. This means it must be injected frequently because it is eliminated from the udder within a few hours after it is placed there.

Farmers also should keep in mind that penicillin won't prevent mastitis. A cow treated with the drug may get the disease again. Treated animals must be given the same protection against infection as the non-treated animals.

AMMATE OR 2,4-D KILLS POISON IVY

They Should Be Applied As Spray In Relatively Cool Weather

The treacherous weed poison ivy, that causes discomfort and suffering to countless Iowans every year, can be fairly easily killed by spraying with either the chemical Ammate or the hormone weed-killer, 2,4-D.

E. P. Sylwester, Iowa State College wed specialist, warns that the job of killing poison ivy should be done cautiously, preferably by a person who is relatively resistant to the poison. Proper preparation for the job may prevent a case of poisoning. However, persons very susceptCollege weed specialist, warns always hire someone to do the work for them.

Spray When Cool

Sylwester says spraying should be done when it is cool. Boots and clothing should be worn that can be thoroughly washed in soapy water before they are worn again. The work should be done slowly, to prevent sweating.

If Ammate is used, the solution should be 1 pound of chemical to a gallon of water. The spray should be applied at a high pressure until the plants are dripping wet. The work should be done in the evenings, but when there is no danger of rain. In 2 or 3 days the plants turn brown and die. Plants that survive should be treated again.

The Ammate kills other plants, too, so care should be taken to see that leaves of other plants are not covered with the spray.

2,4-D Under Trade Names

The 2,4-D compound, which is now available under different trade names, should be mixed and used according to the directions on the package. For the liquid concentrate, Sylwester says 1 tablespoon of the liquid to a gallon of water makes a good spray solution. A pound ible to poisoning from ivy should of the powdered forms should make 100 gallons of spray.

The spray should be applied on a quiet day, preferably in the morning, and the ivy should be thoroughly covered. As with Ammate, desirable plants should not be touched with the spray materials.

Use Wetting Agent

Because the leaves of the poison ivy plant are waxy, adding a teaspoonful of wetting agent to each gallon of spray gives better results. The wetting agents, such as Dreft, Swerl, Vel, Softo and so on, make the spray stick more evenly to the leaves. Soap should not be used because it inactivates the chemicals.

Sylwester says no attempt should be made to rake or burn the dead plants, since they remain poisonous. Smoke from burning plants carries the poisonous oils. Even the roots and berries are poisonous.

After using the 2,4-D or Ammate sprays, the sprayer should be thoroughly washed with soap and water or kerosene to remove all traces of the chemicals.

Expert Gives Views On Cattle Outlook

MORE CATTLE WILL BE FED THIS YEAR

Farmers Divided on Kind of Feeders to Buy and on Feeding Program

There'll be more cattle fed in Iowa this year than last, but farmers are pretty well divided on the question of what feeders to buy and the kind of feeding program to follow.

Rex Beresford, Iowa State College beef cattle specialist, says large numbers of cattle already have been moving from the feeder markets onto Iowa farms. The main reason for the increase over last year is the prospect for a large, sound corn crop.

Cattlemen, however, are looking at the future in two different ways, Beresford says. One group figures that since no one knows how long the present buying power and demand for meat will continue. the smart thing to do is buy cattle for quick turn.

Shorten Time Risk

These men are looking for animals that might be fleshy steers of 750 pounds up, big thin steers, cows, "heiferettes" or perhaps yearling heifers. The general program calls for these cattle to be back on the market while ceilings still will be in force. The aim will shorten the time risk.

Beresford points out that the big problem facing this group of farmers is the cost of the feeders. With ceilings established on fat cattle, the feeders have to be bought at a price to allow sufficient margin under the ceilings.

Members of the other cattle-buying group figure that after July 1 next year, ceilings will be off and selling will be done on an unrestricted market. They say demand will be strong enough to maintain prices at a level high enough to justify a long feed on quality light cattle.

Both May Be Right

Beresford says that it's impossable now to guess which group will be right. He believes there's a possibility that both could be right if the first cost of the feeders can be kept in line and if we have normal distribution of weights and kinds of cattle going on feed.

The man who follows the first course and buys the lower grade cattle with weight enough to make a spring market will want to make as much use as possible of silage and other roughage to get cheap gains. The man with a better grade of cattle bought for a quick turn probably won't want to skimp on corn.

Less protein can be used for the heavier short feed of the bigger cattle. But with the better grade of lightweights, Baresford says it doesn't pay to skimp too much on the protein. Good-quality legume hay can make up a large part of the protein requirement, however.

HAWARDEN COUNCIL PLANS 10% BOOST ON UTILITY RATES

A flat increase of 10% on electricity and water rates in Hawarden has been agreed upon by the city council to cover the general boost in salaries of city employees and other increased operation costs of utilities.

It is estimated that the increase in rates will raise approximately $6,700 a year, on the basis of average consumption of recent years. About $7,000 will be needed to cover the increased city payroll, including $2,706 annually in salary hikes to present employees and $4,380 for the new public works office.

It is expected that an ordinance providing for the increased utility rates will be passed at the regular September meeting of the council, on September 3. The new rates probably will go into effect immediately after the mid-month meter readings in September.

Increased consumption of electricity probably will follow the completion of the power plant expansion program. If the new rates do not bring the added revenue expected and needed, the council may work out a plan to supply electric services to nearby farms and communities.

The "expansion program" was climaxed last year after three years of deliberation when contracts for building, remodeling, new diesel and generator and new switchboard were let for $114,557. Revenue Bonds to be issued for payment, as has been the case for most all major improvements in Iowa M. O. Plants the past year. —The Hawarden Independent, August 22, 1946.

PLANS BEING MADE TO FINANCE NEW COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

Dr. Walter L. Bierring, Commissioner of the Iowa State Department of Health, has assured the Hospital Finance Committee that Hancock County Memorial Hospital is eligible for and entitled to receive a Federal grant or gift under Public Law 725, 79th Congress, to aid and assist in the construction of the hospital in the minium of $50,000.00

In addition to this amount the Federal government will grant an amount equal to 50 percent of any and all contributions gifts or other sums raised or paid in toward the construction of equipment of this hospital. These additional funds made available by Federal law will make it possible to build and equip a better hospital than had been anticipated at the time this question was voted.

In order that timely application for this grant might be on file, an informal application has been forwarded to the State Department of Health pending formal application after the hospital trustees have been appointed.

'Business As Usual' on Capitol Hill

Busy Washington Knows No Rest Even in Summer

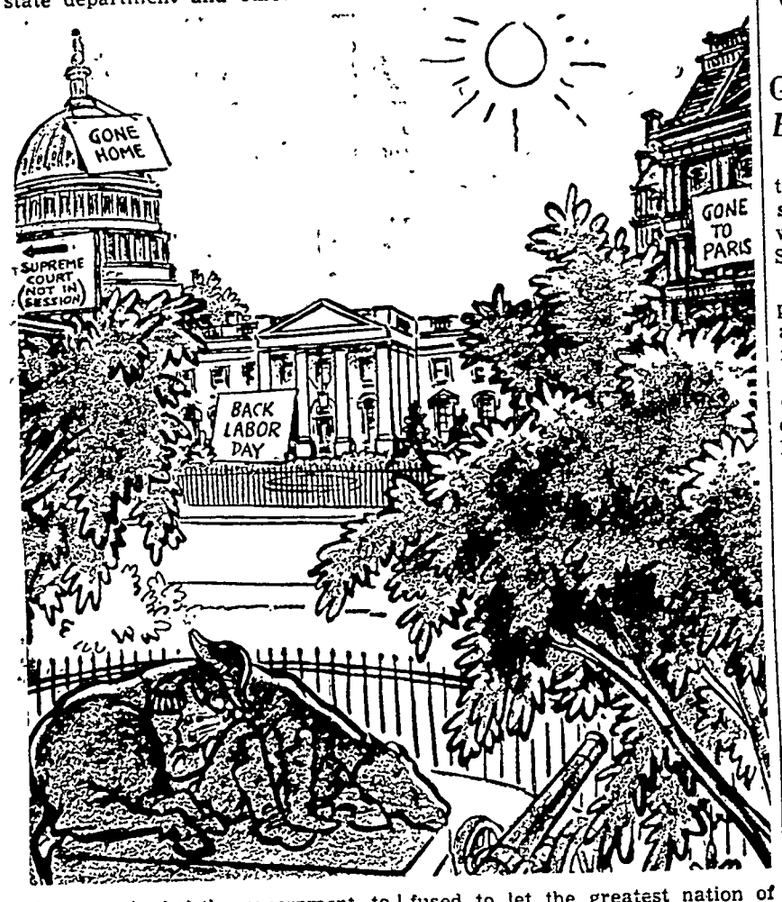
By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—As soon as Labor Day is passed the business world settles down with a sigh of relief. The summer slump is supposed to be over. Most people, I suppose, consider that Washington in the summer is even more dormant and deserted than the ordinary city. If you believe the accompanying cartoon by Herblock which the Washington Post permits me to reproduce, you will be sure we sleep. But don't let Herb spoof you.

Baukhage

True, it did seem that way for awhile but actually this summer it was pretty much "business as usual" in the Capitol, the house and senate office buildings, the offices of the White House and the state department and other executive branches of the government, to say nothing of Washington's marts of trade, limited in comparison to other cities though they may be. Government isn't all congress, and the President and Washington aren't all government.



A year or two ago, William Kiplinger, gathering material for his book, "Washington Is Like That," stood in front of the Willard hotel at Pennsylvania ave, and 14th street and asked 20 people going by who they were and what they did. Of the 20, only five worked for the government and none had jobs which were interrupted (except by vacations) in the summer any more than in any other season.

I have no idea how many members of congress or members of their staffs go down to the Capitol to work every day in the summer months but many offices on the "hill" are open. The regular departments are as busy as they ever are. The very week that the cartoon came out showing "Congress gone home," a sign on the White House door, "Back Labor Day," and another on the state department, "Gone to Paris," the state department was making public two of the most important communications it has dispatched in many a day. One was the ultimatum to Yugoslavia protesting the shooting down of our planes and the other was the refusal to accede to Russia's demand for joint control of the Dardanelles.

At the same time, the investigation of the war surplus sales was going on; the other investigation into war contracts had just closed and the department of justice was taking up the work where the Mead committee had laid it down, and the decontrol board of the OPA was holding hearings in preparation for its first and highly important decision which put controls back on meats and other products.

These were only a few of the activities—not to mention the bubbling campaign kettles assiduously attended by political chiefs behind closed kitchen doors.

No, Washington doesn't hibernate in the summer. Herblock's conception of General Jackson, chin on chest, hunched up against his horse, like a lazy pup, is pure poetic license.

Herblock probably chose that particular figure for contrast because it is one of the most belligerent statues in Washington. Jackson sits there in Lafayette park, across from the White House, (as he does in New Orleans) waving his saber, his rearing charger with its front feet pawing the atmosphere. And I imagine that if "Old Hickory" were here in this hectic period, his old flesh, blood, powder and brimstone self, he would have charged right up to the state department steps when he heard of American planes being shot down in Europe.

The United States has gone a long way toward world leadership since the year 1781 when a little, 14-year-old boy named Andy Jackson, along with his brother "continentals" was fighting the armies of the greatest nation of the day—Great Britain. Andy's two brothers were killed and he was captured but he lived to turn the tables when he led his "long-rifle" heroes to victory in the battle of New Orleans, 31 years later.

"Old Hickory" must be a little confused as he gazes across to the White House, beyond it to the Potomac and the Pentagon and beyond that and the Atlantic to Europe today.

As I pass Lafayette park in the twilight these days I seem to hear him rattling his sword and saying:

"When these United States were in their swaddling clothes we refused to let the greatest nation of the earth interfere with our sailors on the high seas. Who is this impertinent upstart who shoots our soldiers out of the air?"

Let us hope, even if Andy sleeps, that his spirit doesn't.

Profits or Wages—Which Come First?

Recently I received a postcard saying: "Thought OPA was supposed to reduce prices, not increase them." It was signed "Dumbbell."

Well, a lot of us dumbbells thought that was what it was for. But when congress tore OPA to bits and then reshaped it nearer to its heart's desire, it laid down specific orders for raising prices. The law was written on the logical theory that you can't expect a farmer to raise, or a manufacturer to make, things that cost so much in the raising or the making that there is no profit in the game.

Who is to blame for high prices? The manufacturers who made so much out of government contracts; or the workers who got higher wages for making the things the government needed? If you know which came first, the hen or the egg, you know the answers.

Trouble Flares in Greece; Vet Housing Gets Boost

GREECE:
Big Stakes

Greece forged to the front of the troubled European picture as the scene of the latest tug of diplomatic war between the western allies and Soviet Russia.

Working boldly to establish supremacy throughout eastern Europe and adjoining Asia Minor, Moscow recalled Amb. Konstantine K. Rodionov from Greece as a mark of displeasure against the holding of a plebiscite to return King George II to his throne.

Because Britain, supported by the U. S., favored both the restoration of the monarchy and the Populist party government now in the saddle, Russia's move really was pointed against Anglo-American policy. The presence of 40,000 British troops in Greece has acted as a lever against a Communist-inspired seizure of power, and the visit of U. S. warships to Grecian waters before the plebiscite was seen as a gesture of friendship for the rightist regime.

The tussle between the Anglo-American and Russian blocs in Greece is for big stakes: A government friendly to the British would assure them of a toehold in the Balkans and an advance base for the Near East and Suez canal, while Russian domination of the country would result in complete Soviet hegemony in the Balkans and a protected flank in the event of trouble in Asia Minor.

HOUSING:
Aid to Vets

In ordering a 27 per cent reduction in commercial building and channeling greater amounts of material to new housing, the government sought to increase the construction of new dwellings and to reduce the time for their completion.

W. W. Wyatt

Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt and Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small worked out the new controls after the building industry had warned of a serious bogging of the whole emergency housing program for vets.

Leaving a meeting with government officials prior to the announcement of the new program, Joseph Myerhoff, president of the National Association of Home Builders, declared that the industry had failed to get the flow of materials necessary for the completion of 200,000 to 300,000 homes under construction, and that the shortages have lengthened the construction time from 3 to 4 months to 9 to 12 months.

With Small agreeing to the transfer of all housing control to Wyatt, the government instituted sweeping directives to answer the widespread complaints.

J. D. Small

Non-residential construction was cut back from over 48 million dollars weekly to 35 million dollars to divert more materials for home building.

Twenty-seven more materials, including stoves, linoleum and light fixtures, were added to the list of 25 already subject to vet priorities.

MEAT:
Production Incentive

Taking advantage of the new OPA act empowering him to set livestock ceilings, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson called for substantial boosts in cattle and hog prices to encourage feeding this fall and to assure adequate supplies of beef next winter and spring.

Declaring that prospects pointed to plentiful supplies of feed grains this year, Anderson stated that it was necessary to bring stock prices in line with feed costs to spur farmers into fattening stock. Otherwise, he said, large numbers of lean animals would be butchered, creating a serious shortage later.

Anderson's recommendation for a boost in the cattle top to $20.25 per hundredweight, Chicago basis, and in the hog ceiling to $16.25 ran counter to OPAdministrator Paul Porter's desire to establish prices around the old level of $18 and $14.85. As a result of the boosts, retail ceilings were scheduled to rise from two to eight cents on beef and about three cents on pork.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Apathy of Parents Blamed For School System Faults

WNU Feature.

It's the parents of the United States who need education rather than their children. That's the opinion of a representative group of public school teachers from communities throughout the country who studied at Columbia university summer session. The teachers say that only when parents understand and are interested in the problems of educating their children will major flaws of the nation's educational system be fully corrected.

These flaws vary from section to section. In the Midwest, teachers blamed parents' failure to try to understand school problems as the greatest hindrance to more progressive teaching methods. The South's lack of facilities and equipment was traced by instructors to parental apathy. In the East, schools were said to be functioning at far below par only because parents weren't interested enough in seeing that necessary appropriations were made to assure adequate salaries and proper facilities.

Blame Parents' Groups.

Throughout the country, Parent-Teacher associations were fulfilling only a fraction of their theoretical duties and, the teachers say, these groups aren't as vigorous and as powerful as they should be only because parents fail to appear at regular meetings.

Paul Hafer of Alliance, Ohio, who has taught in many rural Ohio towns, said: "Farm people want good education, but aren't willing to pay for it. Sometimes, of course, they just can't afford to."

James Robertson, supervisor of music of the Springfield, Mo., public schools, said progressive methods have been in effect in Springfield schools for 12 years. "But before we can go further," he added, "we need greater public sympathy."

Aid to Delinquency.

In a big city such as Detroit, the parents' "I don't car" attitude was said to be the basis for growing juvenile delinquency. Miss Helen Gilmartin said: "Parents are apt to send their children off to school and then feel that their educational duties are through. Unfortunately they don't realize that education must continue in the home. Closer co-operation between parent and teacher is absolutely necessary."

In the South, teachers put the finger of blame for crowded schools and insufficient play and lunch facilities upon parents' apathy.

Miss Mary E. Evans, teacher in Booker T. Washington school in Richmond, Va., said that "teachers are progressive and willing to fight for some of the needed things, but parents aren't particularly interested."

Mrs. E. H. Ralls, principal of Thankful elementary school for Negro children in North Wilkesboro, N. C., said her institution was "far behind in recreation and equipment, partly because there were only 14 teachers to take care of more than 300 pupils."

Attitude of the eastern teacher was summed up by Robert K. Stuart, principal of La Moille Central academy, Hyde Park, Vt. Stuart asserted: "The worst drawback of education today is the lack of adequate compensation, which drives many good people right out of the profession into more lucrative fields."

Troubles Multiply For Farm Family

GREELEY, COLO.—Trouble runs in bunches for members of the Louis Andolsek family.

It all started when a son, Ed Andolsek, ran a haystacker into a 7,000-volt power line on their farm near here. He was pinned to the power line by the charge. The father ran to his aid and also was burned severely. Another brother, John, went to their rescue and he, too, was burned. Finally, a brother-in-law, John Adams, dragged the men to safety.

An hour after Ed Andolsek was taken to the hospital, Mrs. John Andolsek was stricken with an attack of acute appendicitis and rushed to the same hospital for an emergency operation.

All the Andolseks are reported recovering.

Town Still Claims No Night-time Fires

PAULS VALLEY, OKLA.—Night-time fires are a rarity in this little town. When the siren screeched at 1:45 a. m., volunteer firemen rushed the fire truck to the scene.

When they arrived, smoke was pouring out of a mattress factory. Firemen hooked up their hoses and dashed inside—to find a factory employee calmly smoking out mosquitoes.

"Off We Go"
AVIATION NOTES

POSTWAR YEAR BUSY

With the transition from war to peace accomplished with less trouble than even the most optimistic had anticipated, the aviation industry found the 12 months since V-J Day the busiest in the 40-odd years of flying.

Now the industry starts its second postwar year with more than a billion dollars worth of unfilled airplane orders, fairly well divided between civil and military, and its total personnel nearly four times that of prewar years.

Highlights of the first postwar year were the first official steps along the path to atomic-powered flight. In the course of the year, international aviation agreements took a place in the front line of national policy, making possible the world air routes now being flown.

Airlines doubled the number of planes in use and tripled the carrying capacity. The number of private planes also doubled—from 32,480 to more than 60,000. Return of flying personnel also accounted for a marked gain in the number of certificated civil airmen, from 112,000 to 342,000 during the 12 months, or more than 10 times the total before the war.

Aircraft manufacturers crossed the great divide between war and peace and found themselves intact despite abrupt cancellation of more than 20 billion dollars worth of military contracts.

The change is shown graphically by the fact that in July the industry produced 67 military planes compared with the wartime peak of 9,100, while within the year production of civil aircraft rose from zero to more than 3,000 in July.

RURAL AVIATION GROWS

The average farmer is 33⅓ per cent more eager to buy an airplane than his city brother. That's the conclusion of Civil Aeronautics administration after a survey of the uses for small planes. It estimates that a third more farmers are buying airplanes than city dwellers, in proportion to the percentage of the population that each group represents.

"For some rural owners, the airplane has become a farming tool like the automobile or telephone," the CAA said.

Common rural uses are to spray and dust crops, to spray mosquito-breeding spots, to patrol irrigation ditches or fences, to hunt coyotes, to herd wild horses, to locate lost cattle, and to scare away birds that feed on young plants, the CAA survey showed. Listed as "unusual chores" for farm planes are spreading fertilizers, spraying soil with oil solutions and stocking streams and lakes with fish.

STILL AIR-MINDED . . . When Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary recently, only felicitations from family and friends set the day apart from his usual routine of working in his laboratory seven days a week. Last time he was in the air was two years ago, when he piloted a Constellation.

NEW CLASSIFICATION

A new system for airport classification, rating them by the number of operations per hour, has been proposed by Air Transport association in a manual on selection and layout of airports. The manual is first of a series of six presenting viewpoints of scheduled airlines as to facilities they require. A second manual dealing with airport lighting facilities also is ready for distribution. The publications are part of the general ATA program to solve current operations problems.

NEW YORK.—With the greatest reconditioning job in maritime history now nearing its final stages, the world's largest passenger liner, Cunard's 83,763-ton Queen Elizabeth, is being prepared to launch the career postponed by war for more than six years.

Transformed into a new ship, the Queen Elizabeth will make her maiden voyage starting regular service from Southampton to New York on October 16. The return voyage from New York is scheduled for October 25.

The gray war paint that shrouded the ship when she slipped across the Atlantic in March, 1940, on the first of many vital war missions, has been replaced by the colors of peace—shiny black hull, gleaming white superstructure, red and black funnels, colors of the Cunard line. Thirty tons of paint were required to cover the ship's million square feet of exterior surface.

Decks worn by the tramp of 811,000 pairs of military boots have been relaid. Blackout paint has been scraped off 2,000 portholes. Miles of temporary wiring and piping have been dismantled. The ship has been stripped of such military appurtenances as 10,000 standee berths, temporary sanitary facilities, bulkheads, storerooms and troop fittings.

The reconversion job began immediately after the Queen Elizabeth completed her final voyage as a war transport last March 6.

New a luxury ship, the Queen Elizabeth will be furnished with equipment and decorations ordered and delivered before the advent of war, then stored in the United States, Australia and other places throughout the world for the past six years.

Fittings include 21,000 pieces of furniture and equipment, 4,500 settees, 4,000 mattresses and pillows, 6,000 curtains and bedspreads, 2,000 carpets, 1,500 wardrobes and dressing tables and 10 miles of carpets.

As the final step in reconversion, the ship will enter the graving dock for examinations of the four propellers, each weighing 32 tons, the giant 140-ton rudder and other underwater parts.

One-way rates will start at $165 for tourist class, ranging up to $365 for first class.

One-man School Expands as Veterans Flock for Ratings

DENVER, COLO.—The traditional old one-man school has been put on a wholesale basis here, giving 2,318 veterans the equivalent of a high school diploma in the last 10 weeks.

Operator of the school is a gray-haired, scholarly little man, Dr. John C. Unger, whose main job is that of superintendent of secondary education for Colorado. His present task is to put into practical operation one of the primary guaranties of the G.I. Bill of Rights—the opportunity for each veteran to continue his education.

He has turned the senate chamber of the state house into a school room with men and women of an average age of 21 sitting at senatorial desks and doing harder thinking than most state senators ever do.

In co-operation with the Veterans' administration and armed forces institute, Dr Unger interviews and tests veterans from all over the state to provide them with certificates showing they possess knowledge equal to a high school education.

With such certificates, the veterans go confidently to employers to apply for jobs or enroll in colleges to study anything from the ministry to aeronautical engineering.

The two-hour tests in grammar, mathematics, science, literature and social studies are not required of all applicants. Credits are allowed for training received in the service.

Oldest man to take the tests was a 47-year-old Trinidad naval veteran and the youngest was a 19-year-old Denver youth, who enlisted in the army when only 16.

Dr. Unger tests men still in the service who come in from such posts as Camp Carson at Colorado Springs and Lowry Field in Denver. He has visited Fitzsimmons General hospital several times to examine patients there. Those who can't pass are given friendly counsel on what they need to study to qualify for certificates.

Wedding Drinks Tip Most Britons Off Wagon

LONDON.—Why do people take to drink?

Drinking toasts at weddings is the principal reason for tipping a person off the wagon, say Britons who like a quick one now and then. Teetotalers, however, say "not wishing to be different" is the hardest push off the wagon.

Twelve hundred young people, including doctors, parlor maids, government clerks and miners, gave the answers to a questionnaire sent out by the British Temperance league.

Tipplers gave these four main reasons for their weakness: Toasting at weddings, loneliness, not wishing to be different and enjoyment of the drinking fraternity's company.

All the reasons were among 17 "possible causes" suggested by Herbert Jones, league secretary who is a non-drinker

Oklahoma Sets Sesquicentennial Noting First White Settlement

Historical Pageant Planned As Highlight of State Fair

By WNU Features.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—To the astronomer and the geologist 150 years is the merest fragment of time. Even the student of recorded history stands in no awe of such a period. But to the more finite-minded people of Oklahoma it represents a considerable span of time. In fact, it measures the period that has elapsed since the first white settlement in their state. That is why they're going all out this year to celebrate the 150th anniversary of that event.

In accordance with a joint resolution of the state senate and house of representatives passed in 1939, Oklahoma will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the day when Maj. Jean Pierre Chouteau, a French fur trader, led a peaceful invasion into the uncharted Southwest and set up a trading post at the site of the present-day city of Salina in Mayes county of northeastern Oklahoma.

In Muskogee, some 50 miles south of the site of Chouteau's settlement, plans are being pushed for a celebration to carry out the legislative resolution.

Seeks Trading Post.

In the early spring of 1796, Chouteau left St. Louis, where he was a member of an influential family of traders and merchants, to find a suitable location for a new trading post among the Indians of the Southwest.

Traveling southward along the Grand river, the Frenchman found the site he had dreamed of—a place where an abundant supply of game, mostly deer and wild turkeys, abounded among thick timber which would provide a ready source of building material. By what Chouteau must have regarded as providential good luck, the site also stood near an inexhaustible supply of salt, a vital necessity to his men and animals. To crown the good features of the location, the river itself would furnish transportation facilities.

The pioneer lost no time in constructing a large log trading post at what is now Salina.

Post Abandoned.

Economic reverses, however, disappointed the French explorer, who discovered that the territory was not the permanent home of any Indian tribe and that prospects of supporting a trading post, however propitious the location in other respects, were insufficient to justify making the venture a permanent settlement in the area.

Chouteau returned to St. Louis and for six years the little trading post stood silent and abandoned in the wild loveliness of a primitive country. But in 1802 events transpired that gave new life to the settlement. Through the traders' efforts the Osage Indians of the Missouri valley removed their homes to eastern Oklahoma.

It was a double victory for the Frenchman. He had sought revenge on the Spanish government which had taken his trading monopoly and given it to one of its subjects. By the migration of the Indian from the Spaniard's trade territory, his business was virtually ruined.

In addition, it created a market for Chouteau's abandoned trading post to which he returned to start the 150-year parade of progress which has made a great, modern state from a wilderness.

A celebration to be held in connection with the annual Free State fair at Muskogee, scheduled for the week of September 29 through October 6, will bear Gov. Robert S. Kerr's stamp as the "official" Oklahoma commemoration of her sesquicentennial.

Pioneers to Participate.

During three days of the fair, a colorful pageant will be presented. Several hundred eastern Oklahomans, many of them direct descendants of early-day pioneers, will appear in the pageant, which will portray the arrival of Chouteau in the state and the story of the little trading post.

C. E. Chouteau, an official of the Indian agency at Muskogee, will fill the role of his illustrious ancestor.

The fair, a gala panorama of midway gaiety and agricultural and educational exhibits, yearly draws thousands of visitors from eastern Oklahoma and adjacent Arkansas.

In addition to the sesquicentennial pageant, fair visitors will be able to view a comprehensive display of the state's agricultural and industrial outputs. The fertile farms which dot Oklahoma will contribute their animal and vegetable produce to the fair and the modern educational institutions of the section will present exhibits.

Fairgoers may see the original site of Chouteau's landing by a short drive from Muskogee and may visit other interesting historical spots near this city, the original capital of the Five Civilized tribes.

War Treks Fail To Lead Farm Youths to City

Life in the armed forces, which introduced thousands of farm youths to glittering cities and faraway lands, did not dim their love for farm life. More than a million veterans of World War II have returned to farm work throughout the nation, it is revealed in a bureau of agricultural economics report.

Veterans on farms by July 1 totaled 1,045,000, according to the bureau report, the number including 713,000 farm operators or members of farm operators' families, and 2,000 hired workers.

Veterans comprised 9 per cent of all persons employed on the nation's farms.

The number of veterans on farms was slightly more than three-fourths the number of farm workers who enlisted or were inducted up to July 1, 1945.

In the Northeast and on the Pacific coast, the number of veterans returning to farms was larger than the number who entered the armed services. In other sections they were from 70 to 80 per cent.

A total of 11 million was engaged in farm work.

Program To Stress Value of Citizenship To New Prospects

WASHINGTON.—Plans for a nationwide program to emphasize the "worth and meaning of American citizenship" to prospective citizens were announced by the justice department.

The department said the program "will be a continuous effort to stress the ideals of this country and the significance of American citizenship from the time of entry of a potential citizen to the moment when citizenship is granted him by the court, and even beyond that."

A national advisory committee on citizenship is to be named by Atty. Gen. Tom Clark to assist with the program.

The program will include:

1. Publication of a pamphlet containing significant facts about the United States to be given to prospective citizens and visitors to this country.

2. Preparation of a booklet to be given to each new citizen to emphasize his responsibilities to this country.

3. Enlisting the aid of the bench and bar, civil and educational authorities and patriotic organizations in the effort to stress the significance of citizenship.

TRAVELERS ARE 'JOLTED'

Vacation Costs Soar to New All-time Peak

War-weary Americans, reveling in the lifting of travel restrictions, gasoline rationing and steady wartime duties, are hitting the highways and byways by the millions this summer and fall bound for their first vacation jaunt in long years.

Not only on the highways are they receiving a jolt, however, for vacation costs, which climbed throughout the war years, now have soared to a new all-time high.

Thousands are being jolted by boosts in the rates of resort hotels, inns and cottages. A few resort places haven't raised the ante since last year, but virtually all charge substantially more than they did in prewar and early war years.

Surveys of hotel directories show that the increase in rates range generally from 15 per cent to more than 100 per cent since prewar days. Many inns which were abandoned before the war because of guest shortages have reopened and are doing a capacity business at rates as high as $50 a day for two persons.

Travel experts say an increase amounting to more than 50 per cent is quite typical in most sections.

A few old inns, apparently desirous of maintaining the goodwill of patrons, have made surprisingly small increases. At the other extreme, say officials of travel organizations, are some unscrupulous operators who have used room shortages to gouge the vacationing public.

Other Costs Hiked.

Food sold along the highway also costs more. Boat and bicycle rentals and golf fees have been raised, in many instances by more than 100 per cent. Fishing and hunting guides also are asking bigger pay.

Barring a business slump, vacation costs probably will be as high or higher next year. The American Automobile association expects that many potential vacationers, now hesitant about driving the old car any distance on poor rubber, will have new cars or new tires by next summer.

Here's Fish Stories—but These Didn't Get Away from Census Takers

LONG BEACH, CALIF.—Here's another fish story—it concerns size—but not those that got away. At least, California fish and game commission hopes none got away, for the story deals with the commission's semiannual population census of fish.

The commission takes its census by three major methods, the results of all three being correlated to determine estimated number of fish to be offered for sale or taken to canneries.

In the first method, a list of commercial fishing boats, together with their time and place of catch, is kept.

As the second step, five samples of 50 fish each are taken from catches throughout the fishing season to check the average size of fish in each catch. Size is determined by counting the rings on the scales, following the method utilized by archeologists in checking tree rings to determine a tree's age. For each year a fish lives a ring is seen on its scales.

Third method involves tagging samples of 100 fish taken from a representative catch, the fish then being turned loose until the next season, when researchers check catches to determine percentage of older fish reappearing.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

U. S. Army Fights Nazi 'Baloney'

Occupation Troops Urged To Get Facts on Efforts To Feed Germany.

BERLIN.—So he would not be obliged to "swallow baloney fed him by complaining Germans but be able to answer back," each United States occupation soldier in Germany was urged by the army to arm himself with the facts on America's efforts to feed Germany and the world, says the Associated Press.

The army distributed among the troops an article by Dr. Carl F. Taeusch, former department of agriculture publicist who recently joined the staff of the food and agriculture branch of the military government.

"It would be helpful to the military government in Germany," said the article, which contained statistics on food in Germany, "if you would regard yourself as a goodwill ambassador of the U. S. A. vested with powers of initiative in getting this story across to the German people. We have a firm policy, but it is human, and we have a record of achievement of which every American can well feel proud."

Tells the Story.

The article's distribution recalled a story in the army newspaper Stars and Stripes a few weeks ago which said that large sections of the German population were ignorant of America's food contributions and that many Germans believed the United States army was to a large extent living off the land.

The article, used by the army's information and education section in its courses for soldiers, said that in the 10 months from August, 1945, through May, 1946, American sources supplied more than 600,000 tons of food to help support the German civilian ration.

Of this, 57 per cent came from army stocks, 4 per cent from army excess subsistence, and 39 per cent from direct imports. Seventy per cent of the contribution consisted of wheat flour, cereals and biscuits. This, the article said, was 75 to 80 pounds of food for each German in the American occupied territory.

In addition, the United States, to boost German food production, supervised the importation of 87,000 tons of fertilizers, insecticides and other products for agriculture, the article added.

Anti-British Feeling.

Dr. Taeusch told the soldiers that neither "wet eyed sentiment nor a hard-boiled attitude toward the Germans" determined the military government's food policy. He said efforts first were made to "put it up to the Germans to maximize their own production and help make up the difference between home production and dietary needs."

Anti-British feeling is mounting in the Ruhr, encouraged by underground propaganda designed to split the Allies.

A senior military government officer here said the task of governing the area was becoming more difficult in view of mass criticism directed at the military government, which is being openly expressed.

Investigators discovered that anti-British feelings were fanned by the circulation of underground propaganda leaflets that implied that conditions, food and materials were more plentiful in the other zones.

Two Girls Hunt Flowers And Find Man Shot Dead

PRINCETON, N. J. — Two girls picking violets recently found the body of a former theater booking agent, shot through the head and dumped beside the Delaware and Raritan canal in nearby Lawrence township.

State police detective Claude Patterson identified him as Thomas Madeo, 40, of Brooklyn, N. Y., discharged from the army last November. A physician said he had been dead about 10 hours.

Patterson said Madeo apparently had died elsewhere and had been brought to Lawrence township. His body was found by Helen Borodeff, 15, and Janet Hawkins, 12.

Health Is Deteriorating In British Zone Cities

HERFORD, GERMANY. — A marked deterioration in the health of city dwellers in the British zone of Germany was reported in a British military government statement recently. Reports from all urban regions of the British zone, the statement said, show signs of increased loss of weight and increased hospitalization, absenteeism and lowered resistance to disease. Signs of starvation were not noticeable in rural districts, where the population suffers little from lack of food, the reports said.

British Police Renew Search for 'Dead' Bose

LONDON. — Calcutta news dispatches report Scotland Yard and Indian police authorities are maintaining vigilant watch along the entire Indo-Burma border in a possible effort to capture Subhas Chandra Bose, former leader of a Japanese-sponsored Free India movement, Exchange Telegraph agency said.

Bose was reported to have been killed in an airplane crash.

Warns Against Spotted Fever

Health Service Urges Folks To Guard Themselves From Bite of Ticks.

WASHINGTON. — The public is appealed to by the public health service to safeguard themselves from Rocky mountain spotted fever.

Ticks, the blood-sucking insects which carry the often fatal malady, flourish during the summer months. Several cases of the disease already have been reported this year, reports the United Press.

Infected ticks have been found in 42 of the 48 states but the greatest danger is in the Rocky mountain and Eastern states. One of the most heavily infected regions is made up of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, where 133 fever cases were reported last year.

Public health officials estimated that one tick out of 300 is infected. The disease is so acute, however, that the public is urged to consider all ticks dangerous.

The health service said that any one exposed to ticks should be examined carefully at least once a day.

Effective Vaccines.

"Children playing in uncleared land, campers, fishermen, picknickers and people who work in tick-infested areas should have this inspection," it said.

Two effective vaccines have been developed for prevention of the fever but because of the limited supply, it is usually recommended only for persons exposed to ticks in the most heavily infected areas. The vaccines must be administered each year, preferably during April and May.

The National Institute of Health recently developed an immune rabbit serum which, according to health officials, is "probably of value" in treating infected persons. It is the first specific treatment ever developed.

The first symptoms of the malady appear from 4 to 12 days after the tick bite.

The attack usually comes on suddenly with a chill, rapid rise in temperature, headache and insomnia. After three or four days a skin rash, pinkish in color, appears.

The rabbit serum should be given as early as possible in the course of illness, preferably before the rash has been present for three days. An emergency supply of the serum is kept at the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md., and at the Rocky Mountain laboratory at Hamilton, Mont.

Dogs Carry Insects.

The public health service said that dogs which run at large also are dangerous because they frequently bring infected ticks into the home. The danger can be lessened by examining the dog carefully each day or having the entire family vaccinated.

If you discover a tick on yourself or your child, here is the best procedure to follow:

Remove the tick with a small forceps, eyebrow tweezers or a small piece of paper or cotton. Be careful not to crush the insect; it is possible to contact spotted fever by getting the blood of an infected tick on the skin. Paint the tick bite with an antiseptic, such as iodine. Then wash hands and forceps thoroughly or rinse them in alcohol.

There is danger of acquiring the fever if an infected tick has been attached to the skin from 6 to 8 hours or more. If it is removed before it attaches itself or within an hour or two afterwards, the danger of infection is considerably less.

After removing the tick, a careful watch must be kept on the person involved for any symptom of the fever. At the first suspicious sign, call your doctor.

Dentist Beside Patient Robbed at Point of Gun

CHICAGO.—Dr. R. A. Behnke, a dentist, was held up by a masked bandit while attending a patient in his office at 5803 W. National avenue.

The robber, about 18 or 19, took Dr. Behnke's wallet containing $175. He made no effort to rob Mrs. Anne Blair, 1444 S. 56th street, the patient who was in the chair.

A blue stocking cap pulled over his eyes and a red bandana handkerchief covering the lower part of his face, the youth burst into the office brandishing a .32 caliber revolver.

"Stick 'em up—give me your wallet," he shouted to Dr. Behnke.

The dentist handed him the wallet and he ran out.

The robber was described as six feet tall and wearing khaki trousers and a brown leather jacket.

Bumper Crop of Peaches Expected, Say Reports

WASHINGTON.—Peaches will be plentiful this season.

But the crop will be 1 per cent smaller than the all-time record crop of last year, the department of agriculture forecast.

Putting up peaches is especially important, officials said, because commercially canned fruits will not meet consumer demands next winter and spring.

Prehistoric City Being Excavated

Centuries-Old Mystery of Southwest May Be Bared.

TUCSON, ARIZ. — Excavations this year in the San Carlos reservation may clear up one of the southwest's great mysteries — the sudden migration from this section of thousands of early Americans who abandoned almost overnight a civilization built over many centuries.

Many theories have been advanced in explanation of the strange actions of the people who lived here long before the coming of Columbus, but definite proof is lacking.

Dr. Emil Haury of the University of Arizona is head of the first archeological expedition into the untouched region south of Arizona's White mountains.

He hopes to find a definite solution to the mystery in the ruins of a prehistoric city now being excavated.

Last summer Dr. Haury and E. B. Sayles, curator of the Arizona state museum, visited nearly 200 ruins before locating a semi-permanent camp for archeological students at Point-of-Pines.

Because modern science has not yet provided the means for irrigation, and the area is too arid to support agriculture without it, Point-of-Pines and the entire San Carlos reservation today are used mainly for cattle ranching.

But 500 years ago, with similar climatic conditions, the people of this lost civilization intelligently used water supplied by nature to create productive farms.

Oldest of these ancient Americans, says Haury, were members of the MoGollon culture, who took up permanent residence in pit houses on the foothill slopes of the White mountains.

Here they lived until between 800 and 900 A. D., when the Anasazi (basket-makers) moved down from the north.

Civilization flourished, the population increased, and more ground was devoted to agriculture.

Larger pueblos were built and two-story apartment houses, containing hundreds of rooms, dominated the city.

Then, in the 14th century, at the peak of the Anasazi culture, their flourishing farms, elaborate irrigation system and great homes, were deserted. The reason is not known.

Wife Given Weight In Silver Dollars

MINNEAPOLIS. — The mortgage on the home of a Minneapolis couple was smaller by $2,896 because the feminine member of the pair weighed 165 pounds.

As a surprise for their 25th wedding anniversary, R. H. Zima of Minneapolis balanced his wife's weight with silver dollars. He rigged up a balance scales, seated Mrs. Zima on one end and then clinked silver dollars on the other end until the balance indicator pointed straight upwards. It took 2,896 dollar coins to balance Mrs. Zima's 165 pounds.

The immediate decision of Mrs. Zima was that the money be used to help pay off the balance on their home.

U. S. Pardons Ex-G.I. Who Sold Secrets to Russia

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. — Hafis Salich, convicted here in 1939 of selling naval intelligence to a Russian agent, was pardoned recently under a general amnesty order for World War II veterans issued last Christmas by President Truman, Assistant U. S. Attorney Ronald Walker announced.

Walker filed with the clerk of the district court Salich's honorable discharge showing three years and two months' army service, and a $10,000 fine was remitted.

Salich was granted military leave after serving two years and nine months of a four year prison sentence at McNeil island. He was convicted of selling navy secrets, while attached to the naval intelligence, to Mikhail Nicholas Gorin, Soviet tourist agent here.

Specialist Would Tattoo Baby When It Is Born

LONDON, ENGLAND. — C. Hamblen-Thomas, a Harley street specialist, proposed in the British Medical Journal recently that a national identity number should be tattooed on the buttock of each baby at birth.

He recommended the right buttock for males and the left for females. He said nobody could lose or change his number.

The number, he said, would be "in a position easy for reference, and yet sufficiently private."

Kasper also has turned out an inlaid model of a house in a little less than seven years, and a cocktail table in 1,014 hours.

WAGE WAR ON RATS TO FIGHT HUNGER ,DISEASE

Iowans this year have been enlisted in a renewed battle against hunger. Rats may be the victors in this battle unless farmers destroy them.

Where Iowans to see their total food production for 1946 on the point of being destroyed, knowing that thousands of humans in liberated countries were starving, they'd make an all-out effort to prevent that destruction. Yet Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, points out that the United States Department of Agriculture and the United States Fish and Wildlife Service have estimated that rats annually destroy food in the United States equivalent to the amount produced by 200,000 farmers.

In 1943 alone, rats ate, contaminated or destroyed at least 50 million bushels of corn. In addition to that, they ate as dessert, large quantities of small grain, protein foods and vegetables.

And the food loss isn't all the loss that's chalked up to the rodent family each year. They destroy buildings and equipment. And they carry diseases, such as trichinosis, plague and typhus fever. Trichinosis, the only one known to be present in Iowa, is carried by rats to hogs and from hogs to humans through improperly cooked pork.

To be effective, everyone in a community, farmers and townfolk alike, should cooperate in a rat control campaign, Gunderson emphasizes.

Gardeners are wise to keep a wary eye on weather reports during September, when frost has been known to occur. When frost is predicted, gardeners will want to get busy and harvest squashes, pumkins, tomatoes, peppers and other tender vegetables. Fruits when even slightly injured by frost will not store well. Sweet potatoes, however, can be left until the day after frost. But since rot is likely to pass from frosted vines down to the roots, it is dangerous to leave sweet potatoes out for any length of time after frost.

Tomato plants, peppers and eggplants and other tender, bushy vegetables may be pulled up by the roots and taken indoors the evening frost is predicted. Time is usually short and the job can be done in a short while. The fruits can be removed from the plants the following day and stored in a cool place. It will help to wrap peppers and eggplants in wax paper.

The tomato plants may be hung upside down in a cool, dark corner of the basement. Fruits may be picked as they ripen. The tomatoes to be stored should be picked when light green and placed in shallow boxes or trays one layer deep. Cover and store in a dark place at 55 degrees temperture.

Handle pumkins and squashes as you would eggs at harvest time. If the first frost is very light, the leaves may show little effect. But if the frost is heavy, remove all fruits from the vines the day following the freeze. Pumpkins and squashes do not store well if the stems are broken from the fruits. Several inches of the stem should be remain. Allow the fruits to stand in the field several days if weather is favorable.

Most families are thankful that they had gardens this year. In most areas gardens were very productive. The pinch of inflation has been making itself felt with increasing pressure. Increasing high cost of living makes a garden practically a necessity with a majority of families. Next year the pinch is likely to be greater.

A hard winter is ahead, and wise is the family that not only cans but stores plenty of cabbage and root crops for fresh vegetables this winter.

BEST TO CUT AND FEED BORER-INFESTED CORN

Iowa farmers can get higher value from borer-infested corn by cutting it and feeding the entire plant this fall or winter. Doing this will also aid in controlling borers and will make oat seeding easier next spring, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist.

By feeding late corn which is heavily infested with corn borers, farmers can get the greatest value out of the crop. With its infestation, it would be of little value as grain. The ears are small and the yield low. If it is fed as a green, chopped feed or as silage, cattle transform it into money. This late, infested corn can be fed to beef, feeder and dairy cattle as well as sheep.

Feeding this corn aids in another problem of the farmer. It destroys the borers, or at least a good percentage of them. These are borers which normally would hatch into moths and spread more of their kind over Iowa cornfields.

The third advantage is that oat seeding is made easier. After the corn has been cut, it is no great job for the farmer to disk his oats in on the infested stubble field next spring. Borers are mainly a one-crop pest and usually will not harm oats. This operation of disking in oats saves the farmer time and wear on equipment by eliminating the plowing step in the planting operation.

Relatives and friends of Mrs. George Theiman gathered at her home Saturday afternoon to honor her with a birthday party, Mrs. Theiman received many nice gifts. Refreshments were enjoyed after the social hour.

Northwest Lumber Dealers To Take Action On Material Shortages

The Board of Directors of the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association, Minneapolis, d representatives of the Iowa, North Dakota and South Dakota Retail Lumbermen's sociations met in Minneapolis last week to discuss the problems of material shortages d a program of wide scope was designed and adopted to break the bottlenecks that st in lumber and building materials, according to W. H. Badeux, Secretary.

Committees will be appointed to contact the producers of lumber and building materials on the West Coast, the Decontrol Board of the OPA, the Civilian Production Administration, and National Housing Administration, Washington, D. C.

A meeting of all Northwest Senators, Representatives and Governors will be held Minneapolis in the immediate future to discuss the problem so that when Congress convenes they WILL HAVE A CLEAR PICTURE OF WHAT MUST BE DONE IF THE ORTHWEST is to get the homes and housing facilities so badly needed.

THE PRESENT CONTROLS AND MALADJUSTMENT OF OPA CEILING PRICES AKE IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR ACTUAL PROCUREMENT OF MATERIALS TO BUILD OMES, and the prices allowed producers on lumber items that do not go into home conuction have reduced the production of the kind of lumber that goes into homes. Not unsuch conditions are adjusted or eliminated can homes be built in the quanity needed to e care of the housing situation.

Under the Wilson Wyatt program, which to date is a dismal failure with thousands of terans' homes started and not completed, and will not be completed for months to come, e red tape and controls Wyatt has programmed make it impossible not only to procure mber and building materials, but all other materials needed to complete homes. That is expected when the Government has selected a man who has never had any experience in e construction industry and who is not familiar with what is necessary to do to get homes ilt in America.

It is hoped that veterans and the various veteran organization will co-operate with the ogram of the Northwestern "to get homes built" by writing to the Northwestern telling of eir problem in detail. All information will be turned over to the Committees to be used their contracts on the west coast and with the various government agencies in Washin.

THE BUILDING INDUSTRY OF THE NORTHWEST HAS BEFORE AND CAN AGAIN UILD THE HOMES NEEDED IF THE MATERIAL BOTTLENECKS CAN BE BROKEN HE RED TAPE ELIMINATED, AND THE OPA DECONTROL BOARD IN WASHINGTON HOWN THE LIGHT.

This information is given so that customers in this vicinity might better understand me of the problems with which our industry is faced. We trust that you will bear with with the hope that the situation will be improved in the not to distant future.

"Feed the cows when they take their vacation"

IT'S a pretty good idea to take some time off at the fishing hole . . . if you've got a good lunch packed. Gives you a chance to get caught up . . . get ready for the next job.

My Dad says cows are the same way. They can't be milked 12 months a year and still grow strong, healthy calves. They need a vacation . . . from 6 to 8 weeks.

And it doesn't help any just to turn them out in the lot. They need some good feed.

The Wild Animal Crisis

Wild animals are now on the "we can't get the stuff" list. Inflation has struck the jungles. Reconversion snafu rages on the veldt. The waterhole needs ceiling prices.

The highest prices in history are being quoted to zoos seeking beasts of the fields. You may think you are being soaked for cowmeat, but suppose you wanted elephant-steak!

African lions are bringing $10 a snarl, Bengal tigers are being sold by the stripe, giraffes are higher than ever and camels are quoted at $2,500 for single humped ones. A double-humper brings twice as much and no deliveries until 1947!!

A seal with no ear for music is up 80 per cent and one that can only toot three notes of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" sells higher than used to be asked for a seal that knew Irving Berlin's repertoire.

"Why is this?" we asked John Kieran, the well-known animal, fish, bird and bug man.

"Production line troubles," said Kieran—presto, like that!—"Africa hasn't reconverted yet at all. It's the old story of supply and demand."

"What, no OPA in the bush or at the waterhole?" we asked.

"They sent some OPA fellows into the lion country to study the situation, but nothing further was heard from them," he replied.

"A lion can resent that sort of thing," we suggested.

"You just try to put a ceiling on one," said the Sage of the Airwaves. "Once when I was on a safari I encountered. . . ."

"But what about elephants?" we interrupted

"What about 'em?" he repeated.

"Why should it be hard to get a good elephant now that the controls are off?"

"An elephant with his controls off is harder to get than any other kind," he said. "In 1927 I was bicycling through India when I encountered—"

"What will happen to American economy if it can't get elephants?" we put in.

"Oh, the GOP can't get back anyhow, I fear," he replied, "I remember one night encountering. . . ."

"Have you been able to get any wildcats lately?" we asked.

"No, but a friend of mine got one."

"How?"

"He says it was in a hamburger."

"What do you hear about black panthers?" we asked.

"You can get 'em, but not in colors. Black is as hard to find as white."

"What do you think about the wild animal market for the next few months?" we inquired.

"I dunno. There may be a big animal backlog, but on the other hand it may all be due to a slow up on the production line."

"Do you suspect anybody is holding back wild animals?"

"Not the really wild ones."

"Is there anything in the story a scientist is making a rhinoceros out of the soybean?"

"I consider that as unlikely as the plastic hippopotamus'"

"Any chance to get a porcupine in the present situation?"

"Only with points."

Kieran was pretty depressed. He suggested sending some fact-finding board into the jungle. The deep jungle. By night. Blindfolded. And with no weapons. Good here!

We understand Byrnes and Molotov made a big error at Paris. They went into action without sending mine-finders ahead.

Channing Pollock is dead. One of the first of our assignments as a cub reporter back home was to go to the old New Haven house at College and Chapel street and interview Pollock. He was there for the opening of one of his early plays, "Such a Little Queen." Somebody had broken into his room at the hotel and taken a pair of his pants, including a roll of money, as we recall it. Pollock, the papers say, wrote a drama called "The Pit." If this was a dramatization of a Norris novel with Wilton Lackaye in the leading role, then we were in it. For with a mob of youngsters from around the Webster school area, including John Quigley; Herb Moeller and Mike Sarasohn, we managed to get in as "supers" in the big wheat market scene.

Sportlight by Grantland Rice

THE somewhat dusty files show that a Boston club has never lost a world series contest, with six victories out of six starts — five for the Red Sox and one for the Braves.

This world series mop up began 43 years ago. It began when the Boston A. L. entry of 1903 came from behind to whip the able Pirates with such stars aboard as Hans Wagner, Tommy Leach, Fred Clarke, Sam Leever, Deacon Phillippe, Jimmy Sebring and a few others. Apparently beaten, the Bostonian delegation rallied to ride home on the stout right arm and the stouter heart of Big Bill Dineen. That was victory No. 1, although the world series of 1903 was on the unofficial side.

Grantland Rice

Nine years later the Red Sox found John McGraw and his Giants in the road. This series went to eight games, where in the final spasm Giant support blew wide open as Christy Mathewson lost a contest he should have won in a common canter.

Earlier in this meeting around the fifth inning, Harry Hooper saved the day for Boston with the most spectacular of all world series catches when he pulled down Larry Doyle's almost sure home run over the right field fence. The ball already had passed over the fence when Hooper made the miracle catch, crashing into the crowd. He must have used a net.

Speaker Clinches Flag

After that Fred Snodgrass dropped Clyde Engle's easy fly to center that popped into his glove—and then popped out again, Engle reaching second. That was a bit discouraging. But a moment later on, Matty fed Tris Speaker a slow floater and Tris lifted the ball on a high foul pop-up near first base that Fred Merkle lost. Chief Myers made a futile chase as Merkle was vainly looking in various directions for the ball. The high pop-up dropped between these two only 10 feet from first base. Then Speaker broke it up with a single scoring Engle.

Two years later the Braves crashed into the big show by beating the Athletics four straight. Rudolph, Tyler and James did it. The famous Athletics curled up like a feather attached to a burning match. In these three world series Boston was three up.

In 1915 the Red Sox broke back into the great white spotlight again. They lost to Alexander, one of the great pitchers of all time, and then won the next four games.

In 1916 they won the pennant again and took on the Dodgers. The main feature here was Babe Ruth's extra inning victory over Sherrod Smith. The Babe was then a great left-hander in the box.

Ruth's Last Hurling

In 1918, the Red Sox returned to the post-season carnival for the fifth time. That year they whipped the Cubs where Babe Ruth, dating back to 1916, turned in 29 scoreless innings. Babe was the master of that party, his final as a pitcher before he turned to home-run hitting at Ed Barrows' suggestion. Babe usually carried the world series along with him, using his pitching or batting eye for this worthy purpose. It has now been a matter of 28 years since Boston saw its last world series.

In the last 10 years, Tom Yawkey has spent enough money to win three championships, but this happened in the era or epoch where the Yankees had too much stuff.

It is only natural that Boston supporters are looking for another world series mop-up, making it seven in a row. This time they have the best team the home of the bean and the cod ever has sent into action. It is an even better team than the 1912 outfit that knew Speaker, Lewis and Hooper for the finest defensive outfield in baseball history. Plus Smoky Joe Wood in the box. Plus Bill Carrigan back of the bat.

The 1946 Red Sox carry baseball's two essentials — hitting and pitching. But the Red Sox road record proves that Joe Cronin's young men are far from being invincible. They are the best team in baseball, anyway, although their man-against-man selection doesn't leave any wide margin over the Dodgers or Cardinals, who also can play their share of baseball.

JESUS AND THE LAW OF THE STRANGER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 22:21-23; Deuteronomy 24:14, 15; Matthew 25:34-41.

MEMORY SELECTION — The King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.—Matthew 25:40.

There is as much need today for the words of counsel and admonition regarding strangers which we find in our lesson, as there was in the days of Moses, for there seems to be an almost complete breakdown of neighborliness both between nations and individuals.

I. The Law Required Neighborliness (Exod. 22:21-23; Deut. 24:14, 15).

Our heavenly Father as revealed to us in his Word is a Father indeed, one greatly concerned about his many children; but especially does he care for those who are weak and needy.

The laws of ancient Israel made provision for the feeding of those who had no fields. The corners of the field were left uncut at harvest time, some of the grapes were to be left on the vine, etc., so that the poor could enjoy the sense of self-respect as they picked for themselves what God had provided (see Lev. 19:9, 10; 23:22; Deut. 24:19-21, and other passages).

The poor man who found work was to receive his pay when needed. For the one who hired him to do otherwise was to bring upon himself the judgment of God. He listens to the cry of the hungry worker and his family (Deut. 24:15).

Strangers were in a peculiar way subject to the possibility of extortion. They are even today the easy mark of the one who lives by his wits, the "confidence" man and sneak thief.

If any such person reads these notes let me warn him solemnly to keep his tricky hands off the stranger, for God is watching and will hear their cry (Exod. 22:23).

The same is true of widows and orphans. God is their keeper and their defender.

Someone may say that all this is Old Testament in its background and principle. What about the follower of Christ in our day? The answer is that

II. Christ Expects Neighborliness (Matt. 25:34-41).

This is a prophetic picture of a great judgment scene. It is not, as many suppose, the same as the judgment of the Great White Throne of Revelation 20.

The scene here is not in heaven, but upon the earth. It is not individuals who are being judged, but the nations of the earth. They are not being judged regarding personal salvation, but for their treatment of Christ's brethren.

Who are his brethren? First we think of his brethren, after the flesh, the people of the Jewish race. Scripture reveals again and again that God is watching over his chosen people, even though they are now scattered in judgment for their unbelief. He will not hold any guiltless who harm his people (Gen. 12:1-3).

The word "brethren" is also used in such a passage as Matthew 12: 46-50 to include all who do the will of God. That suggests a broader application of these words.

Our attitude toward God expresses itself in our attitude toward our fellow man. That which we do toward those about us is not a matter of indifference, but is the basis for God's judgment of our lives. Each of us must answer for the deeds done in the flesh whether they be good or evil. That is true even of the believer (II Cor. 5:10), whose salvation has already been determined by his faith in Christ.

Here in our lesson, however, the failure to do that which shows forth God's law of love is made the ground of eternal judgment. This is not because an act of kindness itself can be regarded as the ground of division, but because the failure to give it or do it reflects an attitude of heart toward our God and his Christ which is in reality a rejection of his way of salvation.

Judgment is thus a revelation of the attitude of the heart, which marks a man or woman as being either saved or lost. It may be possible to so becloud the thinking of our friends and neighbors that we may go through life looking something like a Christian, but when Christ judges, it will all be revealed.

Notice the importance of a proper attitude toward those who need our kindness and help. All too often the only concern of men and women is to look out for "number one" and let the rest of the world shift for itself.

Observe also that the Lord identifies himself with his brethren—what is done to and for them is counted as done to and for him. Compare the experience of Samuel (I Sam. 8:7) and of Paul (Acts 9:5). Touch God's people and you touch him. Fail them and you fail him. Serve them and you serve him.

You, too, can have extra time for yourself on baking day when you use the new, quick-rising Red Star Dry Yeast.

This wonder-yeast starts working instantly. It works faster, gives extra flavor. And more "rise" means bigger loaves from the same quantity of precious flour, sugar and shortening!

EXTRA! EXTRA!

We hear that some fine new equipment has been added to the laboratory to aid in the study of Biology and Physics. We know this is greatly appreciated and will make our class work more interesting.

Mrs. Patterson is our Music director. We have had a try outs and one class in both Glee Club and Mixed Chorus. We will get out of it just what we put in, and I believe we all appreciate a director enough to really work hard.

Dorothy Ellingson and Elizabeth Goll.

A Note From The Juniors

Well, here we are back for another year of school as Juniors. We still have the largest class in school as there are thirty-two class members.

Charlotte Lewis is the only one to join our class this year. Ruby Ella Anderson and Donna Heivilin are not with us this year. Ruby Ella is going to school in Goodell and Donna has moved away.

Now to get down to our studies! This past week in Literature we studied a story about Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. It was a psychological story and was rather deep sometimes but was interesting after you got the picture of it in your mind. This week we are using our English books and we are studying about how to choose magazines and books, and how to get the most out of them.

The Juniors who are taking Business Law find it quite interesting. We have been studying about Laws, Courts, Torts, Crimes, and Contracts. We have had two tests and as Mr. Patterson says, "They are very simple if you know the right answer."

In Economics we have been studying about how man lives, how he makes a living, and some facts for consumers. Mr. Kingery has asked us to keep note books for this and to illustrate the terms in pictures.

Wednesday we had election of class officers. Mr. Patterson is our class sponsor this year.

Edward Grosshuesch was elected presiden, Ruth Kurtz as Vice President, and Esther Klinge as Secretary and Treasurer.

We all seem to like typing. The only trouble we have is when we are asked to hand in accurate papers at the end of the period and then it seems as though we can't hit the right Keys. But we hope to improve before too long.

Esther Klinge

Our Sophomore Class

School has been in progress for three weeks now and everyone has finally decided to settle down and study. Now if we only keep on studying won't the teachers be thrilled?

Geometry is everyone's headache but gradually we are beginning to understand it. Perhaps by the end of the semester we will be able to master it. Mrs. Leith says we should.

English is rather easy for at this time we have just finished the Unit on Good Manners. We are supposed to have good manners at all times. Wouldn't it be grand if everyone could remember that there is such a thing as good manners?

In History we are back in ancient times studying all about kings and slaves. We are also studying about our ancestors.

Biology is quite interesting because we are studying about living and non-living things. We should all know soon which things are living and which are non-living.

Election day has passed and our class officers are a follows:

President, Ardell Rosendahl
Vice Pres., Donna Greiman
Sec. and Treas., Phyllis Boland
Entertainment, Joan Smith and Wilford Back

We are all well pleased with our class officers and we hope they will perform their duties well.

On the night of October 4 we shall mix pleasure with study and have a school party. I am sure we will have lots of fun.

A TRIP TO WISCONSIN

By Arthur Wellemeyer

Last week end Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wellemeyer of Klemme and Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hanson and daughter Linda of Wesley, Iowa, visited at the James Carlson farm home near Glen Flora, Wisconsin.

We said to Jim," How come we drove thru a hundred miles of timberland to get here and not a Deer or a Bear came out to wave at us. Now when tourests drive thru Iowa our Pheaants fly across the highway at frequent intervals to show their beautiful feathers, we wondered if Wisconsin realy had Deer."

Jim said he would show us some Deer. So after dark we piled into the automobile and drove about a mile over a smoth narrow road thru the timber, we then coasted swiftly and silently down a little hill onto a clover field, switched on the lights and there they were, five deer assorted sizes, eating clover. Then, like a flash, away they went over the fence and into the timber. These five were hardly gone when right in front of our Auto not more than 150 feet was a large "Buck" who had been lying in the clover chewing his cud, arose, quite leisurely, gave Jim a "dirty look" and followed the others into the forest.

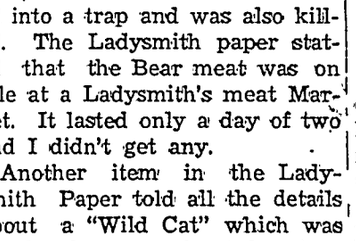
That night I looked thru the Ladysmith Newspaper and two items interested me. A farmer near the Carlson's has several hives of Bees, and once in a while a Bear would come at night, tip over a hive and eat honey, so the farmer set several large traps, and also watched for a few nights, and sure enough, two large bears came, when they were close by, he shot one bear, and the other bear stumbled into a trap and was also killed. The Ladysmith paper stated that the Bear meat was on sale at a Ladysmith's meat Market. It lasted only a day of two and I didn't get any.

Another item in the Ladysmith Paper told all the details about a "Wild Cat" which was caught by one front foot in a trap set for a bear, the Wild Cat weighed 47 pounds, the lucky man collected a bounty, the paper stated that it was perhaps the largest wild cat killed there in many years.

We discovered that Wisconsin people are well fed this time of year. They serve Cranberry juice at breakfast. It is a suprisingly mellow drink and is a pleasant change from Orange or Tomato juice. Our daughter Clarice prepared a deliciouse beef roast with herbs and fixings, it had a rich, rather gamey flavor. I asked if it was really beef and was assured that Wisconsin beef had a flavor all its own.

If you like Blueberry pie, they make it from fresh blueberries in Wisconsin.

We certainly enjoyed our visit to "America's Dairyland."



HELLO, FOLKS!

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hanson are the proud parents of a baby son born September 18th at the Mercy Hospital at Mason City. Before her marriage Mrs. Hanson was Miss Lena Polsdofer.

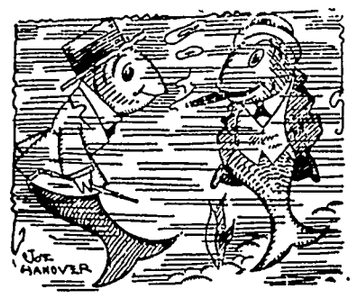
REALLY CLEVER



Two little sardines were swimming aimlessly in San Diego bay. One suggested, "Let's go up to San Francisco for the week-end."

"Oh, no," objected his companion. "It's much too long a swim."

"We could go by train," ventured the first sardine.

"What! And be jammed in like people!"

Too Busy

Tony was being examined for naturalization as an American citizen, and he was doing very well. He had given the name of the President glibly, and the vice president with only a slight hesitation.

"Could you be President, Tony?" was the next question.

"Na," came the answer, promptly this time.

The examiner nodded approvingly. "And why not, Tony?"

Tony squirmed. "You 'scuse me. I gotta steady job now."

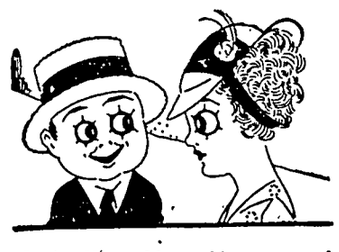
Matter of Depth

The youthful mountaineer had just been brought into court and sentenced for breach of the peace. Testimony showed that he had done some feuding, featured by his adept handling of a knife.

After the trial his grizzled old father stood with a group of cronies on the courthouse lawn.

"I swear," he said, "I don't know whar that boy gits his meanness. Now, you take me—I never stuck a knife deep in nobody."

DANGEROUS AGE



Jack—How old would you say she is?

Jill—Oh, somewhere in the middle flirties.

Taking the Air

My little granddaughter, a very active child three years old, came slowly into the living room. Her mother, always accustomed to seeing her bursting with energy, looked at her and said, worriedly, "Why, Louise, your nose is stopped up. You can hardly breathe."

Louise replied, "Don't worry, Mama. I'll just open my mouth and fool my nose."

Imaginary Fishing

Sheriff—What you fishin' fer in that little ole mud hole?

Village Idiot—Fishin' fer sharks, I be!

Sheriff — Gosh, all hemlock! They's no sharks in there, yuh goldurn simpleton!

Village Idiot—Hain't nothin' else, neither, so I might as well fish fer sharks.

A Way Out

John Barrymore rarely was tactful. Once he was cornered by a society matron, who insisted that he come to dinner the following Saturday.

Barrymore, who thought the woman a bore, declined.

"I have a previous engagement, madam," he icily explained, "which I shall make as soon as possible!"

Too Hard to Take

The weather forecaster hadn't been right for months, so his resignation didn't surprise anybody. But his alibi did tickle the city council. "I can't stand this town any longer," his note read. "The climate is killing me."

Neat Definition

Teacher — What's the difference between caution and cowardice?

Tommy—Caution is when you're afraid, and cowardice is when the other fellow's afraid.

Fats and Oils

The stout lady stopped at a service station. "I want some oil."

"Heavy?"

"Impertinent! Keep your oil!"

About Face!

Momma—Why did you kick your little brother in the stomach?

Jennings—Well, it was his own fault. He turned around.

Household Hints

To prevent milk from boiling over while being heated, rub the rim of the saucepan with butter.

Use lukewarm water and borax to wash out your refrigerator. It will keep it sweet and clean.

When painting, wear an old sock over your shoe to wipe up drips on the floor without stooping.

If sunshine fades your colored clothes, you are an accessory after the fact. Hang colored garments in the shade after laundering to preserve their colors.

The lint from white clothes is apt to cling to the clothes of succeeding tubfuls, and shows badly on dark pieces. Pull a wire strainer, about 5 inches in diameter, through the water in the machine and rinsing tubs and you'll be surprised at the amount of lint you get.

Romantic Pacific Isles Prove Lure to Many Ex-Servicemen

NAMES REMEMBERED

Jungle Is Creeping Back On Historic War Sites

Guadalcanal, Hollandia, Manus, Tarawa, Kwajalein, Iwo Jima, Okinawa—all were but spots on a map of the Pacific (a large-scale chart at that) until American soldiers, sailors and marines battled and bled there on their long march to victory in World War II.

By dint of sheer manpower, many of them became bases hacked out of the wilderness of the jungle Now, only a year after the war clouds have cleared, many of them are creeping back to their jungle vastness.

Guadalcanal, site of America's first major land stand against the Jap invaders, has slipped back into obscurity. British civil officials once more rule the Solomon Island bastion and far-famed Henderson Field is quiet except for an occasional plane.

Airfield Disappears.

The remorseless jungle is reconquering the big airfield hacked out by the Americans at Buna, New Guinea.

Few signs of conflict remain on battle - scarred Kwajalein. Developed as a major base in closing days of the war, it also served as an advance base for the atomic-bomb tests.

At Tarawa, one of the costliest battlefields of the Pacific, a small navy garrison maintains the air base, but it may be decommissioned soon.

The name, Leyte, where Gen. Douglas MacArthur kept his pledge to return to the Philippines, is kept alive by the navy, which maintains a major base there. The bay teems with activity, an airfield, air depot, hospital, radio station and naval repair yards being located there.

Manila Is Shambles.

Manila, most dramatic battleground of the war, still is in shabby ruins. Army trucks and jeeps wind through the streets, past heaps of rubble cleared from the thoroughfares and gaunt frames of once-beautiful buildings. Tourists gaze in awe at the maze of rubble in the Walled City, historic battlesite.

Waves lap the wrecked and rusting landing craft which litter the shoreline at Iwo Jima, a volcanic stepping stone in the march to Tokyo. The American flag still flutters from Mount Surabachi, for a small garrison maintains a relatively unimportant air base on Iwo.

In less than two years, Guam has become the most powerful navy base in the distant Pacific. Of all the Mid-Pacific bases it alone has taken on an air of permanency.

Okinawa, at Japan's southern threshold, still lives in much of the misery that war left. Army air forces and navy bases are maintained on the island. Naha, capital city, is a wilderness of destruction, and sunken ships stud Buckner bay.

POPULAR PASTIME . . . Most popular diversion for sailors in the Pacific was the hula show.

Kahoolawe Ranks Most Bombarded Island In Pacific

Ask any veteran of the Pacific warfare which bastion was the "most shot at island" during World War II and he'll probably answer Saipan, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, Tarawa or one of the other Japanese strongholds.

But that dubious distinction belongs to the small, desolate, insignificant, waterless, uninhabited island of Kahoolawe in the Hawaiian chain. Former smugglers' haven, the island, only eight miles by five and of rugged terrain, has been reduced to a mass of rubble by countless shells and bombs.

The explanation is that naval and marine forces used Kahoolawe, uninhabited and commercially worthless, as a testing ground for theories of naval gunfire support of landing forces.

More than 800 ships, ranging from small amphibious craft to battlewagons, poured thousands upon thousands of rounds into Kahoolawe's barren sides. The tiny island took a greater shelling than either Iwo Jima or Okinawa, where naval gunfire reached its peak in the Pacific.

10,000 Navy Men Take Discharges At Island Bases

Long heralded in song and film as the land of beauty and romance, glamour and adventure, the myriad islands of the Pacific left a lasting imprint on thousands of American servicemen whose war duties gave them their first glimpse of the palm-fringed and coral-studded atolls.

The romantic lure of these Pacific isles already has drawn nearly 10,000 discharged American navy men, who have decided not to go home after the war's end.

The navy department reports that 9,372 navy men who were stationed on Pacific islands during the war have received special authority to be demobilized at their stations instead of returning to the United States for discharge

All were required to have jobs or some other source of income before this permission was granted. Most of the voluntary ex-patriates have obtained civil service employment in the military government, the navy announces. Others have jobs in private enterprises, mainly in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Some sailors have "gone native" — marrying native girls and deciding to make their permanent homes on one of the islands.

A few were reported interested in starting commercial enterprises which import consumer durable goods from the United States. Private business has been impeded, however, because of the relative scarcity of radios, automobiles, refrigerators and other durable goods.

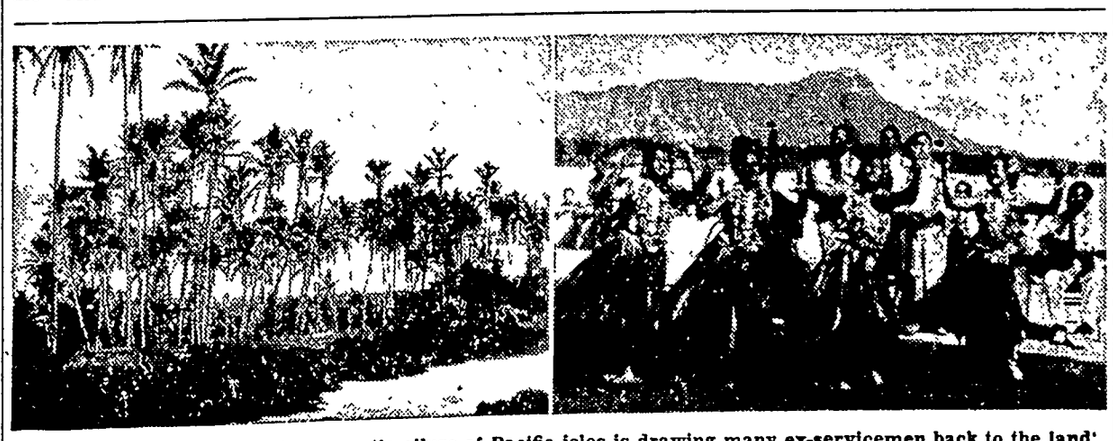
Look for Retreat.

Occasionally the navy department receives a wistful letter from a former sailor or marine, discouraged by peacetime conditions at home, asking if there is a little island in the Pacific he can buy inexpensively for a retreat "to get away from it all."

As during the war, Americans find a warm reception on most of the islands of the Pacific. Almost without exception the natives regarded the United States as their defender and liberator, and now they wait hopefully for the return of the men they saw during the war.

The Americans brought a taste of modernity and of big enterprise to the peoples of the island groups. The natives saw a picture of the United States as a place of vast wealth and immense physical resources. The huge quantities of materials which moved through these places made an indelible impression on the people.

Revelation of United States' standards of comfort, of transportation, of eating and of public health has given the natives an incentive to move forward. Americans were friendly, and generally there was immediate response to this offer of friendship.



FOND MEMORIES . . . The romantic allure of Pacific isles is drawing many ex-servicemen back to the land of palm trees, coral beaches and hula girls. The navy itself has discharged nearly 10,000 sailors at Pacific bases because the men decided not to go home after war's end.

High School Graduates Flock to Army

NEW YORK.—One of every four boys graduated from high school this year either has joined the army or has indicated his intention of doing so, it is disclosed in an army enlistment survey. The survey was taken in connection with the campaign to secure a million enlistments.

Army life still holds an element of adventure for youth, the survey indicates, as about 22 per cent of the approximate 900,000 volunteers so far were in the 17 to 18-year-old age bracket.

Former army men constituted 13 per cent of the total, although that category is diminishing.

Largest single group, about 65 per cent, represent men already in the army who signed up for extended service.

Many responding to the survey reported that they considered the army a "better deal" than a civilian's job, especially since the pay has been increased materially.

Others expressed a desire to join the army because it provides a "chance to learn." In addition to army training, soldiers joining the regular army at this time are eligible to secure a college education under the extended G.I. Bill of Rights.

With the goal of a million enlistments in sight, the army now is planning a new approach—a search for quality. Maj. Gen. Harold N. Gilbert, assistant to the adjutant general for military personnel procurement, said the army soon would be putting quality above all; that the service wanted men who could absorb the technical training necessary for soldiers who must deal with electronics, chemistry, communications, intelligence, languages, civil administration, high speed aviation and the other factors of a scientific army in the atomic age.

6-Year-Old Boy Carries Pal To Save Foot

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Six-year-old Randy Tays, who acted like a man in an emergency, is happy to learn that doctors have saved the left foot of a five-year-old playmate after Randy carried him in his arms for a quarter of a mile when a freight train crushed the lad's foot.

Hunting pigeons with slingshots did not prove adventuresome enough for Randy's playmate, John Joseph Filsinger Jr., so he decided to ride a few blocks on a slow-moving train. Missing his jump for a freight car ladder, he fell under the wheels, and his foot was crushed.

A white-faced Randy struggled home, carrying his injured playmate. Physicians, who saved all except a few of the boy's toes, credited Randy's prompt action with preventing more severe shock and loss of blood.

Cigaret Smokers Puffing to Record

WASHINGTON.—Americans are smoking themselves right into a new record.

Cigarette production during the first six months of the year totaled 172 billion, the agriculture department reports. "If this rate continues for the rest of the year," it said, "the annual total will exceed any on record." Previous record was set in 1945.

JESUS AND THE LAW OF LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 119:33-38; Matthew 5:43-48

MEMORY SELECTION—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.—Romans 13:10

Love fulfilled the law—in Christ. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son (John 3:16). The law of love is therefore appropriate as the subject of our closing lesson on the general theme, "Jesus Interprets Old Testament Laws."

Love is the heavenly gift of God, who is love, to man who so much needs its grace and power for his own life and for his living with others.

I. The Mind of Love (Ps. 119:33-35).

Eight times in this psalm there is found the cry of verse 33 for instruction in the laws of God. Man not only must know them, but he must know how they operate. The picture here is that of a man who wants to get in step with God, marching out to spiritual warfare and being prepared to respond in prompt obedience to the commands of his divine leader.

Here we have the true mind of love. The one rightly instructed in the principles of God's rule in the world sees that love is the basic requirement, but that it expresses itself in a life that is in accord with the will of God.

The thought of this passage is well expressed by Dr. W. R. White: "The psalmist had the highest possible conception of love before the revelation in Christ. He saw it as the basic order of things. He conceived it as identical with the will of God. He viewed it as the safe, happy path for man. He considered it as the way of wisdom. He passionately desired to embrace it and order his life by it. He saw it imparting to the naive and simple the benefits of extraordinary judgment. To measure up he knew that he had to be quickened or made alive to it by the power of God."

II. The Manner of Love (Ps. 119:36-38).

Love operates not from necessity, but because of an inner urge which will not be denied. The psalmist prays that his heart may be so inclined toward the Lord and so quickened within that he may be eager to do the will of God.

Love has a technique, if you will, a manner of operation. It avoids certain things which would hinder or prevent its full function and seeks out those attitudes and experiences which will encourage and enlarge.

Covetousness must be avoided, for that is idolatry (Col. 3:5). We noted in our lesson of two weeks ago that covetousness makes a man stingy, envious, selfish, proud and foolish. That means that love must rule out this destructive element. Love cannot live in such an atmosphere.

Love turns away from vanity. The vain things of this world are usually presented in such attractive dress that to look at them is to be tempted. The answer is to turn your eyes away, or better still, ask God to give you special grace not only to turn away, but to stay turned away. The vain passions of this world destroy real love, even while using the word to describe their base counterfeit.

The positive side of the matter is also clear. The manner in which love best expresses itself is in the fear of God, in the established order of a life according to the law of God (v. 38). By being inclined to his testimonies it finds the right way—God's way (v. 37).

III. The Measure of Love (Matt. 5:43-48).

How far does love go? Does it have a limit? Does it choose those toward whom it will express itself, loving the lovely and ignoring or hating the rest? In answer to these questions let us first ask, What is the general attitude of the world? The answer is evident. The world has established its own principle of conduct based on selfish advantage. It pays to be polite to those who can favor you, so cultivate their good will by acts of courtesy and kindness. Your neighbor may be able to help you in an hour of need, so do good to him as you have opportunity.

But an enemy—what can you gain from kindness to him? Hate him, and treat him like an enemy.

Christianity knows nothing of such a spirit. Even though it be necessary to oppose wicked men in order to hinder their evil plans, we need not lose our love for them. Even those who despitefully use us may be loved for Christ's sake.

"Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself (and went right on loving them) lest ye be wearied" in your own love for those who bear the sad name of enemies (see Heb. 12:3).

This is admittedly a high standard, but it is not too high for those who know the love of Christ.

LOST ST. BERNARD

Earl Rush, of West Des Moines, lost a dog. Nothing unusual about that, but this dog wasa St. Bernard, about the size of a young calf. The mystery was cleared up three days later when the dog, gaunt and hungry, was found in an excavation into which it had fallen.

Going Fishing? Here's How!

To hear Willie Wells and Basil Strube arguing about trout fishing, you'd think it was more important than the atom bomb.

Willie favors dry flies, Basil pooh-poohs anything but wet flies. Willie swears by a Royal Coachman; Basil won't hear of anything but a Silver Doctor. And by the time it comes to steel rods versus bamboo rods ... #!X&!?!

But on Saturday, each got back from Seward's creek with a catch that couldn't have differed by more than several ounces!

Each had used his favorite of fly, his favorite rod and favorite place to cast. So friendly glass of beer, the lowed as how maybe they both right ... which is many arguments should end.

From where I sit, if we spected one another's opinions—whether about flies, or drinking beer, or life would be a whole lot pleas

If Isabella had ice cubes...

Christopher Columbus would never have discovered America!

Isabella, Queen of Spain, had caskets full of jewels. She had velvet robes and silken gowns and handsome hand-made shoes. But she had no electric refrigerator! So the jewels were pawned. Three little ships set out against the sea. And Columbus happened on America back in 1492.

Fantastic? Not really. In Isabella's day, they tried to keep food from spoiling by spices brought overland at great expense from India. Columbus believed he could reach the Indies by sailing westward on the unknown Atlantic. The rest is in history books.

Poor Isabella, with all her clumsy luxuries, never dreamed of ice cubes—nor radios to whisk music from the very air—nor any of the miracles of modern electric living!

Though electricity plays such a great part in today's comforts and conveniences—you're scarcely conscious of electric service. That's because it's always on hand—all you want—at little cost.

Pumkins and squashes should be taken indoors shortly after harvest and spread out in a room so they don't touch. Here they should be cured at 75 to 85 degrees for about 2 weeks. Cured in this way the fruits will store longer. The furnace room is a good place to store pumkins and squashes after the curing treatment. Bruised fruits and fruits without stems attached should not be stored.

Carrots, beets, parsnips, salsify, cabbage and other hardy vegetables can stand repeated light frosts. It is well not to be in too much of a hurry to harvest such vegetables. Early in the fall the ground is still too warm to store vegetables in common storages. The root crops are usually safer in the garden until the ground surrounding the common storage is chilled.

Root vegetables should be dug carefully to avoid injury, because cut and bruised vegetables do not store well. As soon as the vegetables are dug, the tops should be removed to prevent loss of moisture from the roots. All root vegetables should be thoroughly dry on the surface before they are placed in the storage. The vegetables should be cold when stored and the storage room should be cold. Sweating will occur if cold vegetables are stored in a warm storage or vice versa.

* * *

Root crops should be stored in crocks with lids or in paper-lined baskets with lids. This method of handling prevents shriveling of the stored product if the humidity in the cave or basement storage is not kept high enough. Roots can be stored in crocks covered with sand to prevent shriveling. This is not necessary, however, since a lid will do the job as well.

* * *

There should be no let-up in the control of insects even though the season is late. Watch particularly after the first killing freeze. Insects on the tender vegetables will pile onto the hardier vegetables that were not killed by frost. Keep dusting at least 7 days with a dust containing rotenone.

TO CLEAN DITCH

William Henschen was appointed as engineer on the cleanout of Hancock county drainage district No. 7, Sec. 5. The appointment was made by the Hancock county supervisors after a petition had been filed for the repair by certain taxpayers on the district.

Now is the time to make arrangements for storing this year's bumper corn crop. On most farms this will mean building new storage facilities and putting existing cribs in shape.

Diary of 46 Years Ago Points Way for Present

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — Mary Condit-Smith, a young Washington society girl, visiting diplomatic friends in China, and a 'leven-year-old boy in a little town on the Erie Canal both were keeping diaries at the turn of the century.

Baukhage

Mary, alone in her room in the American legation in Peking on June 11, 1900, slipped on her pink silk dressing gown, sat down and wrote:

"The telegraph was broken last night. We have no more communication with the outside world; our world is this dangerous Peking."

That same day, though it was really the day before, according to the strange tricks Old Sol plays as he pushes the clock around while he marches westward and paradoxically reaches the Far East—that same day, Monday, June 11, a boy in the fifth grade of the High street school painfully inscribed this entry in his book:

"It rained this A. M. Two more weeks and we'll be free from this School of Misery." (The next day it is of record that he broke the crank of his "wheel"—bicycle to you.)

The boy's name appears at the head of this column and what he wrote isn't important, but just 46 years later he was to read Mary's diary. She had gone to her reward long since but not until her diary became a book and she had become Mrs. Hooker, a colonel's lady.

White Man's Prestige Slipped to Low

As I read this fascinating story, told in simple, boarding-school English, those awful days when the foreign colony in Peking lived in the daily horror of massacre during the Boxer rebellion, became very real.

Today the fires of civil war are spreading in China. Voices are being raised, demanding that our marines be withdrawn. American prestige has fallen almost as low as it was when Mary Hooker in her diary told the dramatic story of the Boxer Rebellion—that moment in China's history when Americans, along with all foreigners reached their nadir. History repeats.

The Empress Tzuhsi, a reactionary, encouraged the activities of the Boxers and other groups whose chief purpose was to cleanse China of the "foreign devils." It is only fair to say that China had passed through a period during which the occidental powers had exploited her to the hilt.

Attacks on foreigners, especially missionaries, began in 1899, but as Mary Hooker records, "the diplomats and people in general put these things down to the usual spring riots which yearly seized Peking."

By June and July of 1900, however, the foreigners found themselves besieged in Peking. As late as June 7 Mary's diary reports:

"Mr. Pethick . . . forty years a resident of China and an intimate friend of half the political leaders, knowing their weaknesses by heart, urges the minister to state to Washington the situation as it is, but all to no avail."

Three days later, as I mentioned, the foreign colony "had no communication with the outside world."

The next day's entry states:

"Such intense excitement! This afternoon the Japanese Chancellor of the Legation went down to the railway station in the official legation car to see if there was any sign of troops. Returning by the principal gate, he was seized by the Imperial (Chinese) troops, disemboweled and cut to pieces."

Eagerly Awaited Arrival of Troops

From then on the entries become even more exciting ". . . twenty of our marines have been sent by an officer to guard the big Methodist Mission . . . the Russian secretary . . . has figures at the ends of his fingers about the number of troops Russia can land in Tien-Tsin . . . are they trying to prepare us for a Russian coup d'etat? . . .

Each day the arrival of foreign troops was awaited. On June 17 the entry reads:

"Just one week ago today we got the telegram that the combined forces of England, the United States, France, Japan, etc. . . . had left to go to the relief of the legations in Peking . . . when the time comes that the American and Russian legations can no longer hold out, the British legation will be the stage for the terrible last act."

The Roman Catholic church was only one of many burned, and the converts and their families in the vicinity slaughtered.

"In some cases," says the diary, "the Christians thought it better to be roasted in their houses than try to escape." (She herself had decided that she might as well be massacred in her pink silk dressing gown with a pink bow at her neck as in her golf clothes.)

On the 19th of June, the Chinese government offered to give legation members their passports and escort them and their families to the port. There was a division of opinion as to whether to trust the Chinese. In the evening the German minister started to confer a second time on the question when he was murdered in the streets.

The situation grows worse.

Dead Piled Around Ramparts

A bullet knocks off the headpiece of a baby's crib.

All the women are sewing sandbags.

The Dutch and Austrian legations burn.

On July 1: "There are so many dead dogs, horses and Chinese lying in heaps all around the defended lines, but too far for us to bury or burn them."

They used the dead horses closer by, however: "The [illegible] mess has an invariable menu. At breakfast, rice, tea and jam; at tiffin, rice and horse; at dinner, rice, horse and jam."

With the privations and fear of the Boxers grew the suspicion and distrust of the members of the foreign missions of each other. Russians and English hated each other; Americans were the buffers. Racial ructions have no date lines. Mary Hooker notes:

"The dislike of the Russians for the British is so cordial that it is only equaled by the feeling the British entertain toward them. Our compound joins the Russians, and they love us and we love them in as strong a fashion as they hate their English neighbors on their other side."

And so pretty Mary Hooker wrote history. . . .

But it was more than history. It was drama. It was tragedy. Just look over her shoulder once again:

"July 9 . . . day before yesterday, the Austrian Charge d'Affaires was shot at the French legation. . . . At first we kept a record of the dead or badly wounded . . . but now they come in so often we cease to note the exact number. . . .

"July 16 . . . I was en route to the hospital carrying a pot of coffee to the doctors and nurses when some soldiers passed me, carrying a rough litter, bearing Captain Strouts (the British commanding officer) mortally wounded."

Then, July 16:

"It is discussed quietly by men that they will certainly kill their wives when that time comes (to make a final stand). God grant it never may! Apropos of this, I have in my pocket a small pistol loaded with several cartridges, to use if the worst happens. A Belgian secretary stole it from the armoury for me—'in case you need it, mademoiselle.'"

Then finally this note on August 15, when the Chinese were closing in on the improvised fortifications manned by lord and flunky, soldier and civilian making their last stand . . . "a veritable ring of flame on all sides of the defenses."

And then! — "Through that racket that was around us all night, we could faintly hear the unmistakable sound of the foreign guns of our troops."

That page of history, let us hope, will not be repeated.

FACES MIRROR JOY . . . Happy faces of these Belgian children show what they think of the American food just arrived at their camp at Tervueren, near Brussels.

Means Devised To Halt Further Lags in Housing

HOUSING:
Fear New Obstacle

Having trimmed commercial construction and tightened allocation of materials to speed up the veterans' emergency housing program, Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt feared a prospective labor shortage as a new obstacle to the rapid erection of dwellings.

Revealing his apprehensions in his August report on the vet housing situation, Wyatt indicated that the government would strive to head off the latest bogeyman with an intensive recruiting and apprentice training program.

Despite a pickup in new building in July, Wyatt disclosed in his report, the emergency housing program is lagging behind the announced goal of 1,200,000 homes and apartments for this year. During the first seven months of 1946, 607,100 new dwellings were started and 287,100 completed.

AUTO OUTPUT:
Hits Lag

In calling a press conference in Detroit, Mich., C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors corporation, presented the company's case against both the government and workers for the serious lag in auto production.

Pointing out that G.M. had turned out only 400,000 cars and trucks in the year following V-J Day instead of the 1,400,000 scheduled, Wilson charged the Truman administration with having attempted to appease labor unions by taking the lid off wages while at the same time stating that price increases were unnecessary. As a result, manufacturers were "put in the nutcracker," he averred.

Although G.M. has 88,000 more employees on its payroll than in 1941, production is about half, Wilson said. Tests on relative jobs have shown that worker productivity is about 80 per cent of the prewar rate. Refusal of employees to extend themselves, a high absenteeism rate, inexperience and a large turnover partly due to the ease in collecting unemployment compensation all have contributed to the inefficiency, Wilson declared.

VFW:
Ask Vet Aid

Adoption of resolutions calling for increased benefits to World War I vets and satisfaction of domestic needs first before providing for those of other nations highlighted the Veterans of Foreign Wars national encampment in Boston, Mass.

Congress was urged to authorize pensions for World War I vets for old age and disability, with payments made for the latter regardless of whether the disabilities resulted from military duty. Such payments are made to Spanish-American war vets.

The government was asked to halt shipments of food to former enemy countries as long as any American was unable to obtain sufficient food stuffs to maintain proper health. A protest was raised against deliveries of grain abroad at the expense of U. S. brewers while beer was being imported from England, Belgium and Holland.

Other resolutions called for the trial of Yugoslav airmen who shot down American fliers; support of the Anglo-American recommendations for admission of 100,000 Jews to Palestine, and condemnation of the practice of awarding actors combat awards for troop entertainment.

NAVY:
To Provide Comforts

One could almost have heard the rattle down in Davey Jones' locker when the navy announced that it was air-conditioning the new cruisers, Salem and Newport News, to determine the best kind of equipment for eventually cooling all of its ships.

In announcing the navy's plans for providing additional comfort for crews on the bounding main, Vice-Adm. Edward L. Cochrane, chief of the bureau of ships, emphasized that air-conditioning had proved invaluable in boosting morale and fighting efficiency in combat.

Various types of new air-conditioning equipment will be used in the tests in the new 17,000-ton cruisers, with the cool air transmitted into all living and working compartments save machinery areas where the heat is too intense. Simplified coils will be shockproof and easily cleaned, it was said.

THIS IS THE HOUSE! . . . Out at Lemont, Ill., a house is rising which is different than the house that Jack built in the nursery rhyme, because much of the work is being done by a couple of Janes. Mrs. Joseph Gurski, center, is laying brick on the new family home, assisted by willing friends.

NO 'SWEET TOOTH' YET

Sugar Shortage Remains Acute

WASHINGTON.—No general improvement in the sugar supply situation is possible until the 1947 Caribbean crops, particularly the Cuban and Puerto Rican output, begin to move to market in large volume about six months from now, the agriculture department reports.

Chances that supplies will increase sufficiently to permit abandonment of consumer rationing next year appear "rather slim," officials declare.

The forecast was made in connection with announcement that 1,187,000 short tons of sugar will be allocated for civilian distribution in the October-December quarter. The figure compares with an allotment of 1,147,000 tons for the corresponding quarter last year.

Below Prewar Figure.

Total amount allotted civilians for 1945 is 5,400,000 tons. This compares with a prewar consumption that reached a peak of 7,587,000 tons in 1940. The per capita supply this year is officially estimated at 72.3 pounds compared with 108 pounds in 1940.

The present short domestic supply situation reflects a drastic decrease in world production resulting from the war. World production this year has been estimated at 27,200,000 tons, or 7,300,000 tons less than the prewar average.

Sharpest declines in production were in Europe, the Philippine Islands and the Netherlands East Indies. In Europe, where normally considerable beet sugar is produced, shortages of fertilizers and farm motive power, lack of coal for operating sugar mills and disrupted transportation have interfered with production.

The sugar industry in the Philippines, important prewar source of supply for the United States, was practically eliminated under Japanese occupation. In prewar years, the islands exported nearly 1,000,000 tons a year, nearly all to this country.

Party Line Disappears but Neighbors Still 'Listen In'

CHEYENNE WELLS, COLO. — Another signpost in rural American living was threatened here when the party line gave way to a radio telephone hookup.

One consolation, however, is that the time-honored rural practice of "listening in" will survive the changeover to modern communication methods. It is still possible to pick up the receiver when a neighbor's ring sounds and "listen in" on the conversation, a habit which has brought relief from boredom and monotony to lonely farm women for generations.

An eight-party circuit, utilizing both short wave radio - telephone and standard wire, was turned over to eight ranchers in the eastern Colorado plains surrounding this little town for the first actual operation of the new equipment.

Officials of Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph company emphasized that the service still was experimental although under actual commercial conditions. It was installed here because company officials decided this is a typical plains community.

The new equipment is one of the plans by which the Bell system, with which the local company is affiliated, is seeking to extend service to one million more homes within the next few years.

The eight ranches using the new equipment vary in distance from 11 to 21 miles from the central office and are in a region without previous telephone or power lines.

Equipment at each ranch includes a receiver, 10-watt transmitter, telephone, two antennae and home power plant. Only the telephone is in view.

Ma, Pa and Baby Bush Tail Pose Acute Housing Problem

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—Latest victim of the housing shortage is the bushy-tailed squirrel.

Growth in squirrel families and heavy lumbering operations in the state's forests have combined to result in an acute situation for man's bushy-tailed friends, Missouri conservationists report.

The tree-housing shortage is made even more desperate by the papa squirrel's insistence on continuing one of his age-old customs. It seems that when the female gives birth to young, the father is ousted from the tree to pace the ground and is allowed to return only when the youngsters have found homes of their own.

That means that every couple really needs three trees — one for the home, one for papa's bachelor apartment and one for the young to use when they are partially grown.

Lumbering operations to provide material for man's housing take only the older trees, leaving the young and cavity-less trees which are most unsuitable for squirrels.

Only solution advanced by conservationists is that nature groups plant "temporary" housing in areas where the tree-housing situation is most acute.

Hoboes Again Heed Call of Open Road As Regulations Ease

BLOOMINGTON, ILL. — Hoboes are hitting the road again, and in this one phase of the rush of peacetime traffic the travelers find little trouble securing accommodations.

As Bloomington is a division point for several railroads, local police and charity agencies consider this city a fairly accurate gauge of the activities of knights of the road. Now, as before the war, hoboes make Bloomington an important stop.

To care for the itinerants, two charity agencies, the Salvation Army and Home Mission, maintain facilities for quartering nearly 200 men.

Increased hobo traffic results from closing of war plants and discharge of many hoboes from the army, believes O. K. Torgenson, Salvation Army adjutant.

Billy Shelper of the Home Mission attributes the increase to easing of wartime travel restrictions that kept tramps off trains to prevent sabotage. The 'boes can get a ride in comparative safety now, he adds.

Camp Fire Girls Open Nationwide Membership Drive

NEW YORK. — With 360,000 members participating, the annual membership march of camp fire girls is underway throughout the country. The campaign will extend through November 30.

"America always has used the past to build for the future; it is a nation that looks to tomorrow." Dr. Bernice Baxter, national president, said in a statement urging local units to extend the benefits of the camp fire program to larger numbers of girls in the community.

"The youth of today, who will carry on the spirit of our nation, must be grounded and trained in those principles which make for better living, for it is youth who will decide whether we continue to build or whether we fall back to the past," Dr. Baxter continued.

In connection with the national campaign, local Camp Fire Girls units will hold special activities designed to interest non-members in aims of the organization. Special emphasis will be placed on events showing the program in action.

Backing the campaign, Tom C. Clark, attorney general, declared that Camp Fire Girls and other youth-serving agencies foster health and character-building programs which are "the first line of attack" in combating juvenile delinquency.

War Searches Recalled as Derelict Drydock Hunted

NEW YORK.—In the most intensive sea search in the Atlantic since the end of the war, the coast guard launched a hunt for a partially submerged derelict floating drydock capable of sinking a ship the size of the Queen Mary.

The navy drydock originally slipped from a navy tug in heavy seas about 330 miles off Norfolk, Va., and broke in two parts.

After one section was sighted, carrier based planes dropped 500 pound bombs on the target, scoring two direct hits but failing to sink the derelict drydock. A coast guard cutter armed with TNT demolition mines then launched a new search.

Coast guard planes and vessels and a navy tug were searching in another sector for the second section of the drydock.

AVIATION NOTES

BOOST AIRPORT REVENUES

Soaring air traffic figures at passenger-jammed terminals throughout the United States are spurring municipal efforts to pull airports out of debt by development of non-aviation concessions as well as increased charges to airlines, according to a report of the American Municipal association.

Example of current action aimed at making airports self-sustaining community centers instead of mere air depots is the agreement made between the city of Chicago and operators of a new municipal air terminal restaurant now under construction. The restaurant concessionaire will pay Chicago 5 per cent of gross sales plus 40 per cent of net receipts as well as regular cafe permits and license fees.

Such non-aviation concessions are the subject of increased interest to municipal airport authorities who expect postwar air traffic growth to boost airport operating expenses to $200,000,000 annually within the next decade. Increased revenues from concessions and increased landing fee revenues are suggested as the principal means available to balance airport budgets.

EXIT THE PILOT

An automatic flight controller—a "push button" system assisted by secondary control devices — is enabling Douglas C-54 Skymasters to make blind take-offs and landings.

The new development differs from the robot plane since the full automatic flight is performed in a plane without a "mother ship." It is possible with the automatic flight controller for a plane to take off by "pushbutton" and reach a destination without further manipulation of any controls.

The device regulates the plane's altitude, sends the plane into glider range and operates the landing gear. When the plane touches the runway, the throttle automatically cuts back and the brakes are applied automatically.

The nation's first air milk delivery service will be inaugurated soon by the Hawthorn-Mellody dairy farm of Chicago. The dairy hopes to use refrigerated planes to carry milk from Wisconsin farms to its dairy at Libertyville, Ill., where it is constructing a "milk landing field."

NEW SAFETY DEVICE

Heralded as a new safety device, the "fault detector" has been developed in Sweden and installed on Swedish commercial airliners. Exhaustively tested, the new invention quickly indicates imperfections in the engine even before ordinary instruments show any reaction. The device consists of a small steel pin placed in a metal cylinder attached to the battery of the plane and connected with a warning bulb on the instrument panel.

THE REVOLT

President Truman is a President among Presidents! He has just come out openly with a statement that he considers fishing a waste of time!

—*—

He caught some fish on the Bermuda trip without posing for photographs. This supplemented a similar thumbs down on newsreel pictures of him holding a fish in Puget Sound last year. What's the Presidency of this country coming to, anyhow?

—*—

We think Harry Truman lost the fishermen's vote by this attitude. But he more than offset it by gaining the vote of their wives.

—*—

It has been an inviolable custom for Presidents to act as if they liked fishing, no matter how they really felt. Tradition has required that any White House occupant get himself into fishing regalia, go fishing and invite the photographers.

—*—

No President ever looked as sad in fishing clothes as Cal Coolidge, but we loved him for it. Herb Hoover never seemed the type in a trout brook, but it helped with the votes.

—*—

Roosvelt was a great one for photographic angling. Grover Cleveland is better known as a fisherman than as a ruler. Even Harding fished in response to the public demand But now comes a President who says: "I say it is spinach and the heck with it!"

—*—

Personally, we think Harry is an old fresh-water, Missouri type fisherman who can go for bullheads and catfish, but thinks nothing else counts. But we welcome his position. It may be that nothing would do America more good today than less fishing. It certainly must interfere with reconversion.

—*—

Truman might make a tremendous hit by a White House statement declaring that fishing takes too much time, that it is far too unproductive, that it encourages deceit, causes pneumonia, breeds alcoholism and, furthermore, that most fishermen go fishing to avoid necessary work around the house.

—*—

The fisherman never lived who was 100 per cent honest and reliable. Fishing makes liars of the best of us. It is a racket conducted for the benefit of bait salesmen, tackle stores and rowboat renters. Long live Harry Truman. (Hi Phillips has wasted most of August trying to catch one striped bass.—Editorial explanation.)

Desire

Let me build me a house by the side of the road—
(If those race tracks are complete);
A house unpretentious but still a home
That won't balk some racing meet;
I crave a home of the modest type,
With fireplace quite new—
(If the builders of some new grandstand
Can spare a plank or two!)

Oh, I yearn for my home by the side of the road,
With four walls, even three—
(If the boys who are building the paddock sheds
Will waive their priority)—
A little house where the sun comes in
And contentment seldom fails—
(If the lads who are rushing the clubhouse plant
Can spare me a couple of nails!)

Oh I care not for any handsome manse—
Just a plain four walls will do—
(If the contemplated amusement park Doesn't need stuff P. D. Q.)
All I want's a place fit to hang my hat,
And I've got an outside chance—
(If the football parks and the new fight clubs Plan no superdooper plants!)

Oh, give me a shack by the side of the road
(If the play world has enough) —
A little place for the wife and me
(If no night club needs the stuff);
Just a simple hut with a chimney there
Which need not be extra thick—
(If the race tracks, parks and the honky-tonks
Will just give a guy a brick!)

The influences of the movies on child life is getting pretty terrifying. We heard a nine-year-old child decline an offer to go to a picture the other night because, "I'm sick of murders with just guns and hatchets; I wanna wait for a good poison story."

The time seems at hand when we shall hear of a peace conference delegate being decommissioned for somebody with more modern armaments.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

WHETHER it is Eddie Dyer's Cardinals or Leo Durocher's Dodgers who will be called on to meet Joe Cronin's Red Sox this fall, there is one basic idea you can keep in mind—neither National league team is going to surrender in advance.

No other teams in baseball have been so well seasoned under fire from April into the final September stretch.

Stan Musial

There has been no resting spot for either club — no loafing time or any recess in the day-by-day battle for the top. Both Cardinals and Dodgers by now should have steel - shod nerves under the pressure that has kept both teams hustling to the limit in an all summer dog fight that has been one of the best in many years.

Both Cardinals and Dodgers are loaded with dead-game ball players out to give all they have—such men as Pete Reiser, Peewee Reese, Ed Stankey, Dixie Walker, Stan Musial, Marty Marion, Country Slaughter, Whitey Kurowski, Terry Moore and others from both scrappy camps.

Their batting records show no such power as the Red Sox command. Howie Pollet may be their only 20-game winner. But there is more than enough class on either team to give anyone a battle over the sprint route that a world series calls for. While neither Musial nor Walker has been able to turn on Ted Williams' power, both have been outhitting the Red Sox star through the greater part of the year.

The averages tell you that. Reiser, in condition, is one of the most valuable ball players baseball can show when you consider his worth at bat, in a pinch, in the field and around the bases.

The averages and the records of the field also prove that Musial is quite likely to out-hit Williams by a rather wide margin; not in the way of home runs, but in league leadership. Musial is one of the finest hitters we've seen in many years. His lifetime average is close to Williams', who has slipped a trifle from .356 to something around .353, which isn't too soggy for several years.

Outside of Musial and Walker, neither Cardinals nor Dodgers has other run-making hitters to match Pesky, Doerr and York, slashing Ted's three aiding musketeers.

Eddie Dyer on Pitching

After all, the pitching can play a star part in any world series, as pitching usually does.

We were talking with Eddie Dyer, the Cardinal manager, about this section of the world series argument.

"In the first place," Dyer said, "the Cardinals haven't yet won the National league pennant this season The Dodgers are a tough team to catch and shake loose. They don't seem to discourage easily. But if the Cardinals do manage to break in and get a shot at the Red Sox, I have a rather hazy idea our pitching staff can worry them a lot.

"We have some left-handers that Williams and a number of others might not like too well. And if George Munger can work back to his old form in the next few weeks, we'll have our share of good right-handers to match any staff — and that includes the Red Sox staff."

No one can be sure yet just how good the Red Sox pitching is. There have been too many games where a Red Sox pitcher could dish out a flock of hits and runs, and yet breeze home. We were rather astonished to see that Dave Ferris and Tex Hughson, two Red Sox mainstays, had allowed more hostile hits than any two pitchers in their circuit. Both had been tapped safely well over 200 times, where Spud Chandler had allowed only 151 hits and Hal Newhouser only 173, far below the Ferris-Hughson totals.

The Red Sox have wrecked the American league through a killing margin in runs, base hits and runs batted in. Their stampede has been based on raw power, on attack, not on defense.

Hughson, undoubtedly one of the best pitchers now at work, has had a rather spotty year, being slightly over the .500 mark with a great run-making machine at his back. Ferris has been their star workman, but even the able Ferris has absorbed his share of manhandling more than once.

Red Sox No Cinch Bet

The Red Sox will be favored to win, but anyone who makes them lopsided favorites can be labelled a trifle curious in the cupola. As all around good as the Red Sox are, and they are good enough, up and down the line, they are no invincible, overwhelming force against either of the two fast, game outfits.

The main burden of proof is also on broad Red Sox backs who are expected by too many camp followers to win a four or five game romp.

Iowa, Too! Sunflower Grow Tall /In

When Mrs. Frances Ridder was reading the Klemme Times a couple weeks ago she saw a picture in the syndicated service of the paper showing a little boy standing on a step ladder trying to reach the top of a sunflower growing in their Chicago yard.

Mrs. Ridder thought that perhaps the sunflowers in her garden were just as tall as the 10 ft. 3 in. variety in Chicago, so she had her son, Levi measure a couple which he brought to the Times office last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Ridder's sunflowers were nearly two feet taller! They measured 12 feet 2 inches in heighth. And that should hold the Chicago folks for a while.

WATCH CHILDREN FOR ILLNESS

The Iowa State Department of Health today warned the parents of school children to be alert for an increase now that school is in full swing. "A sick child should not be in school", the department said. 'Parents can help prevent the spread of disease by keeping children home at the earliest sign of illness."

"The exposure rate to infection mounts when children are confined in the relatively close quarters of a schoolroom." according to the department, "there one infected child may expose many others."

School authorities realize the dangers involved in sending such children to school and no longer insist on 100 per cent attendance at the cost of spreading a disease.

The Department of Health warned that "several of the fastest spreading diseasees, including scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough and mumps, are precisely the ones which work their way in the schools."

The worst part of these diseases is that they are most infectious in the very early stages, even before full diagnosis can be made, and for that reason the child should be kept at home the moment illness is suspected. The first sign generally will be a respiratory disturbance often resembling a cold."

"Equally dangerous, if children are not protected against them, are diphtheria and smallpox," the department added, urging immunization and vaccination to safeguard against these diseases.

KLEMME BOY ESCAPES INJURY WHEN STRUCK BY CAR

Galen, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Bridges, was accidently struck by a car on the Klemme Main street one evening a couple weeks ago, but luckly his injuries amounted only to a few bruises.

Mr. Bridges stated that the driver of the car was not to blame, and that he was not driving fast. However, Mr. Bridges says drivers should take warning and to slow down driving through Klemme streets as the next time some child might be killed.

There are a few drivers in the community who drive through the streets too fast, and is some cases quite recklessly. The Times urges all to drive carefully hereafter and to keep a special lookout for children who thoughtlessly dart into the street while playing. Keep your speed down Mr. Driver, where you can "stop on a dime" if necessary and save a life of a child.

It might be YOUR boy or girl fatally injured by a careless driver. THINK!

ELMER TWITCHELL ON THE BEER OUTLOOK

"Well," said Elmer Twitchell, "I see where it is announced that on account of the government's 15 per cent increase in grain allotments to the breweries the beer shortage will be over in a few months but I am still betting that there is a big battle ahead before the old time glass of beer comes back. The demi-tasse glass of suds has become routine stuff and it would break a lot of barkeepers' hearts if they ever had to serve the stuff in a man-sized goblet again.

"I admit there has been a real beer shortage and that with costs of operation and high taxes the schooner of beer and the growler had to go. But my point is that once the size of anything sold to the consumer is cut down it rarely comes back. And I know of nothing that was cut down so much as the size of the beer glass since Pearl Harbor.

"In my opinion the barkeepers could have served a much larger glass at the price they were getting and not have gone to the poorhouse. But be that as it may, what America needs as much as anything else is a good five-cent glass of beer. Or maybe I should say a good glass of beer, even if it costs 10 cents.

"There will be no rest, peace and contentment in this country until a man can get a decent glass of suds at a decent price. You can talk about all the things that have caused unhappiness, trouble and low morale here, but among the top causes is the custom of serving beer through an eye-dropper and getting as high as 20 cents a glass for it.

"This nation knew its most contented and peaceful years when beer was passed out in a glass that was hard to lift and when, all over town, there were signs 'The Biggest Glass of Beer in Town for a Nickel.'

"There was little of the brother-hate-brother stuff, every man didn't suspect every other man's motives, the soap-box orator on the green was almost talking to himself, the country wasn't echoing to the cries of 'We're being exploited,' and war was about the last thing anybody had in mind.

"Bring back the five-cent glass of beer and the free lunch and civilization will take on its old-time appearance!"

Elmer was quite excited. "It's something the U. N. should put on its agenda," he declared. "Let it drop half the stuff it is studying as the cause of war and just study the beer situation. Let it drop everything else and come out for the return of the free lunch! Even Russia will be appeased!"

THE SOARING ORANGE

The ceilings have been taken off all fruits except oranges and bananas, lest the prices run away. Personally, we can't remember back to a time when the price of an orange didn't seem to be not only to be running away but going for the record.

Secretary Anderson, we note, also has suspended ceilings on "edible tree nuts." That simplifies our food problem for the fall and winter, provided we can get a priority on ladders and shoe-spikes.

RED BLAIK'S brilliant Army football team is on the march again. With a record of 18 consecutive victories picked up in 1944 and 1945, Army's first team should carry it through another big year, even if its spotless record so far happens to be dented before December arrives.

Doc Blanchard

At least no one should expect any further wild romping over such teams as Notre Dame, Michigan, Duke, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Navy.

"Our first line strength is extremely good," Red Blaik tells you, as he looks over his eager talent—talent that includes such backfield stars as Blanchard, Davis, McWilliams and Tucker. "But we are no longer three deep. We are no longer even two deep. In addition to our starting backfield, which will match any in football, we have Fuson at center, Poole and Foldberg at ends and two good guards."

As good as Blanchard and Davis are, they are not as likely to steal the entire show again from such fine backs as young Tucker at quarter and Shorty McWilliams at halfback.

A look at the complete records in McWilliams' case proved the Army was entirely blameless in connection with Coach McKean's charges from Mississippi State. It was McWilliams, backed up by his family, who wanted to come to West Point. McWilliams made application while still in high school, before he ever entered Mississippi State. Letter after letter has proved this.

The trouble started on his home furlough when rather luscious financial inducements, apart from any Mississippi State official connection, were made. And don't believe this was the only large financial inducement offered a college football player this year.

A Smart Choice

McWilliams elected to stay at West Point of his own free will. It was a smart move in his case, as too many leaving service football have come under the gossip of ducking the draft, whether or not the charges are true. I might add that his opponents will find the able entry from Mississippi is one of the best backs in football. He is a great kid with unusual ability. And if there is a better quarterback in college football than young Tucker, or a much better passer, I'd like to have his name.

This year of 1946 may be the last season in some time that Army can field any winning team.

For one reason, too many colleges are paying good football players money that West Point and Annapolis won't and have no desire to meet. For another reason, too many young men have no yearning to get up at 5 a. m. and work 16 hours a day.

It is my belief that college paychecks are going to lead to a national scandal unless there is a sudden check. The fight for young stars, plus inducements offered, already have broken all past records.

Athletic scholarships and jobs that can take a young fellow through college, are O. K. But not the substantial paycheck on the side, usually handled by keyed-up alumni.

Back again to this 1946 Army squad—

In my opinion Army will have the best backfield in college football—Blanchard, Davis, McWilliams and Tucker—power, speed, smartness and spirit. Once again, keep a more open eye on McWilliams and Tucker.

Tough Year for Army

"This is the hardest year we've known since 1943," Blaik says.

"Frank Lahey at Notre Dame is three deep with a flock of veterans who range back to his great team of 1943. Many have picked Notre Dame as the best team in football. It may be Pennsylvania will give us all the trouble we can handle. Navy had some hard luck in losing men, but Tom Hamilton will do a fine job with a squad that will give anyone a battle.

"Few men on our squad," Red added, "have ever known defeat. They love football. They are all fine officer material, and that is what West Point is supposed to turn out. We can be beaten and we may be beaten, but unless we are handicapped by injuries to key men, it will take quite a team to turn the trick."

At this point, Athletic Director Colonel Biff Jones was gazing moodily into the autumn sky.

"I was just thinking," he said, "that if we had enough parking space for the human body, we could play to at least 300,000 in the Michigan game, and over 800,000 in the Notre Dame and Navy games. We might do 300,000 in the Pennsylvania game.

"You don't think so? Come along to my office and see the ticket requests already piled up. There were over 110,000 applications for the Michigan game early in June.

NORMAL FOR FORMALS

Here are some facts about formals that every Chick and Joe should know. After all, formals are the most important events of your social careers. If you're a girl, you brood for months, that you won't get a bid; then you brood for weeks that you won't get your quota of cut-ins. If you're a boy, you brood about which girl to ask and what kind of flowers to bring her. Formals certainly take a heap of worryin', but they're worth it.

It's Your Bid—She wants to be asked well in advance; none of the zero-hour stuff that may be O. K. for a Saturday night movie. After all, she probably has to get a new dress for the occasion, and it may take weeks to break her family down. If it's she who does the asking, give her your "yes" or "no" answer promptly. Don't keep her dangling until only the Drips are left.

Listen, Joe, don't be late on the big night. Her ruffles wilt with her spirits if you keep her languishing around the house long after she's finished dressing. And, be sure to ask what color dress she's wearing so you can bring the right flowers. Also, if you're taking her any distance, don't think she enjoys hiking in a floor-length skirt and evening shoes. Better arrange ahead of time for some free wheeling.

Calling All Girls — Listen, Josephine, don't use his coat pockets as a salvage station for all your cosmetics and bobby pins. Carry your own evening bag. And, don't keep fussing with yourself all evening; he wouldn't have asked you if he'd known you were going to spend the night in the dressing room. And don't watch the stag line too eagerly; he expects to be top man with you, at least for the evening.

Well, as the Optician's daughter said as she started to Lindy: "Here's where I make a spectacle of myself!"

There's a big difference between good manners and affectations. For instance, it's important to use the right knives and forks at a dinner party, but it's silly to keep your little finger curled up high. It's important to talk in a well-modulated voice, but you don't have to broaden your "A's" like Bette Davis in a big emotional scene. Yes, you're judged by the manners you keep—but, don't make the mistake of confusing good manners with bad mannerisms.

Our Sophomore Class

Well, four weeks of school are past and just think, pretty soon six weeks tests.

But, to forget the tests until they come, and get back to the studies. In Geometry we have had our first two Theorems.. I think many of us are having a quite a time mastering them. We had a test in Geometry the first of the week, but we all came out fair in them.

We have been working in our Literature book this week with the study of Short Stories. Many of these we find very interesting.

Biology is about the same. A gi.. e and whisper now and then, but Mr. Rector informed us of a test next week which brought out a number of ohs! and ahs!

A Note From The Juniors

Everyone in the Junior class is working hard trying to keep up their studies because we are all starting to get excited over the prospect of our class play which we are about to begin.

We are studying about contracts in Business Law class. We find some of them very easy and others very hard to understand. We find class interesting especially when Mr. Patterson forgets about Business Law and talks about his experience in Europe during the war.

Writing paragraphs is our topic of discussion in English Literature class. Most of us are fairly good at writing them but we all hate to stand up and give them orally.

Our first speed test in Typing came on Wednesday. Many of us found that after we took off 10 points for errors we had very few words per minute.

In Economics we have completed and had a test over Part 1 which was the Introduction and now we are working on a unit on "Consumption."

"Molecules and Their Behavior" and "Pressure in Liquids" are the topics under discussion in Physics this past week. Many of us find a lot of the drawing hard to reproduce in our notebooks.

Those who take Sociology find it very interesting, especially since it is held in the Manual Training room. They have been studying a unit on "How We Live."

In music a Girl's Glee Club and a Mixed Chorus has been formed. We also have a Girl's Sextette composed of Jean Kurtz, Phyllis Christiance, Peggy Coobs Elizabeth Goll, Charlotte Lewis, and LaVonne Beier. The Boy's Quartette is composed of Ardell Rosendahl, Robert Baack, Dean Jacobs, and Francis Sherwood.

The Seniors

The fourth week of school is past and right now we find the Seniors doing the following work:

Those in Business Law had pleasent dreams Thursday night, as Mr. Patterson told them to go home and sleep on their Law books rather than to cram for the test they had Friday. (Kinda hard pillow.) But, much to their surprise, the test was not too hard.

Yes, Mr. Rector also gives tests. He sprang one of his brain busters on Thursday and well, lets not go into the grades. We are now starting the chapter on Colonial Life and Culture. We find it very interesting.

The Physics class is studying about Pressure In Liquids. The drawings that have to be put into our note-books are getting more complicated.

The Bookkeeping class has now an increase of one over last weeks enrollment. We now have ten in our class. Bookkeeping depends upon your best knowledge of the subject and many of us find that we have already forgotten what we have learned three weeks ago. We are now learning how to close accounts.

Paragraph building has been the subject in English and many of us find we don't yet know how to write one. Mrs. Harvey has set a box on her desk for the purpose of improving our speech. Anyone finding an error in the way words are stated out of class, will write it down on paper and put it in the box. She has established an honor roll for the ones finding the most errors.

In Sociology part of the Seniors have been discussing the topic of "Cultural Heritage."

SPORTS NEWS

The Klemme Baseball nine played Crystal Lake Tuesday afternoon at Crystal Lake. The score was 3-2 in Klemme's favor. Abe Blummer hit two good two baggers, while Dick Finders struck out ten men. This game was really hot in comparison with the Kanawha game Saturday. Kanawha took Klemme for a 14-2 loss at the end of the 4th inning. Finders and Blumer were both hit by a pitched ball. In our first game with Kanawha Eddie Grosshuesch was hit and Charles Christie took a close miss.

Garden Talks

Garden storage space should be placed in order as soon as possible. Some cave storages are under construction now. Observation show that many caves have too small a vent in the top of the structure. One square foot of vent is needed per 1,200 cubic feet of storage space. The small basement room with at least one window can be made into a satisfactory storage by nailing insulation batting on the ceiling and on the sides exposed to the furnace room.

In general, vegetables may be divided into three groups according to their storage requirements. Onions require a cold (32 to 35 degrees), dry storage space over winter. Onions will sprout when warm, and roots will develop if the air is moist. An unheated room or attic may be used for storing onions.

Pumkins, squashes and sweet potatoes, after curing at a warm temperture for several weeks, should be stored in a dry, cool (45 to 50 degrees) place. The far wall in the furnace room is usually satisfactory.

The majority of vegetables, including the root vegetables, will store well only when the storage space is moist and between 32 and 40 degrees.

Green, mature tomatoes require 40 to 50 days to ripen when they are stored at 50 degrees temperature. At 5 degrees higher temperature, 10 to 15 days less time is required. At room temperature it may take only 10 days. Ripe tomatoes may be kept a week or longer by storing at 50 degrees temperature. Tomatoes ripen more uniformly when stored in a dark place.

* * *

Here are a few suggestions for storing vegetables in drain tiles and other kinds of pit storages: Store three or four kinds of vegetables in small sacks or other containers before placing them in the pit storage. In this way, an assortment of vegetables can be quickly removed from the pit from time to time during the winter. If only two kinds of vegetables are to be stored, the pit storage may be divided with a large strip of cardboard.

* * *

Care must be used in managing the pit storage. Store the vegetables late in October or during November, depending on the weather. Allow the cover on the pit storage to remain open at night and closed during the day for a week before storing. After storing, place a thermometer on top of the vegetables. When the temperature is 35 degrees, close up and place plenty of mulch on top to keep the temperature uniform and prevent freezing.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Bert Childers and the Melon Patch

Bert Childers put an ad in the Clarion the other day. Here's what it said:

"Planted more melons than I can eat this year. Stop by and pick as many as you want. All free."

As you can guess, plenty of folks sent their kids over and plenty of the parents came too. Stripped Bert's melon patch in no time. And as they went away, Bert treated the kids to lemonade, and offered the grownups a glass of ice-cold sparkling beer.

Naturally it puzzled some folks ... but Bert explains: "It gives me a kick to share things when I can afford to—whether it's the melons, or the lemonade, or beer. I guess I just like to indulge my whims."

From where I sit, if we had more "self-indulgent" people like Bert—who believe in share and share alike, live and let live, this tired world would be a whole lot better off!

Small Business Surveys WAA Sales

Democratic Leaders Fear Surplus Property Scandals

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is an old political axiom attributed to various national figures of the past which runs something like this: Never argue about charges of the opposition party; either admit them frankly and fully, or deny them with every tissue of your oratory.

Baukhage

Mistakes of the "ins" are the chief grist-of-the-mill for the "outs" in an election year.

There is a small but very earnest body of Democrats in Washington today which believes that unless certain mistakes of the administration are freely and frankly admitted and given a thorough airing, they will come back to haunt the Democrats even unto the third and fourth generation.

These mistakes, they say, are the ones which have been made by the War Assets administration. There is a segment of the administration, on the other hand, including some of the White House chief counsellors, who don't approve of this theory. They think that the best thing to do is to get rid of the surplus property as quickly as possible and forget all about the whole mess.

But the whole mess is not going to be forgotten. In fact, it is quite safe to predict some riotous headlines shortly after election, which will make the rather limited revelations of the Mead committee on war contracts look like very pale and limpid prose.

The headlines are likely to concern that matter which already has emitted some rather noxious odors but which, when exhumed, will cause a still stronger stench in the public nostrils. This is the disposal of surplus steel equipment and facilities connected with the Geneva plant in Utah—a layout that cost the government some 200 million dollars. It was sold to the United States Steel corporation for $47,500,000 in May of this year, over the bid of the Colorado Fuel and Iron corporation, the dominant figure in manufacturing and distribution of steel products west of the Rockies. Congressman Chenoweth of Colorado questioned this WAA disposal.

The Small Business committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Murray, has made a long and careful study of the distribution of some 500 plants and facilities to date. It intends to have a report on this subject early in November. The committee likewise intends to air the assembled material and other testimony in hearings thereafter with emphasis on certain industries; steel, for instance, because of its many ramifications, the chemical industry for similar reasons, and the makers of farm tools and other implements because of the crying need for such commodities and the many veteran users interested.

Members of the Small Business committee believe that the pattern of the distribution so far has been haphazard and not in accordance with that provision of the law which plainly states that war material may not be sold to buyers in a manner that will encourage monopoly, but that instead will stimulate free competition. Members believe that the faults of the past must be studied carefully in order, negatively, to prevent further encouragement of monopoly and, positively, to establish a pattern which will stand as a standard of operations for the future.

Disposal of Aluminum Plants Sets Pattern

They point out the distribution of facilities for the manufacture of the light metals, especially aluminum. It was feared that the Aluminum Company of America might benefit to the exclusion of competition or potential competition. But as a result of the co-operation of Stuart Symington, when he was Surplus Property administrator, there are now three lusty competitors in the field, all apparently having benefited from a fair distribution of the war enterprises made available to them on equal terms.

However, other Pharaohs came to Egypt. Haste and other incentives are said to have destroyed the pattern. Present WAA officials deny this, but the Small Business committeemen expect to prove their charges in open court.

Senator Murray

The first step which the Small Business boys would like to see taken is the appointment of an administrator on whom they agree. They feel the official should be a civilian rather than an army man. The incumbent, at this writing, Maj. Gen. Robert Littlejohn, is said to have expressed the desire to be relieved of WAA responsibilities, but no successor has been indicated.

The next step desired, after the hearings, is a thorough reorganization of methods and, if necessary, an overhauling of the whole set-up of the agency. This, proponents of the idea claim, will not only be in the good of the veteran, the business man and the national economy but in the good of the party, as well.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Smart Politicos Outsmart Themselves

When Senator La Follette raised a memorial to his senatorial career in the form of one of the most progressive pieces of legislation affecting the internal affairs of the congress, the reorganization act, something occurred which the liberal wing of the Democratic party didn't realize was being done, and which has caused them no little concern ever since its practical application dawned upon them.

What happened was not Senator La Follette's fault, but the result of that ancient evil, seniority, which the original reorganization measure would have eliminated. Congress couldn't accept that radical departure and seniority still operates. Under this procedure a senator automatically becomes chairman of any committee to which he is appointed if he has been a member of the senate longer than any other member of the majority party on the committee. This system has long been recognized as an evil.

Just having been around longer than anybody else is frequently less than a recommendation. Unfortunately there are too many cases where a stuffed shirt and an empty head, although they can win votes from a constituency, provide a contribution which contributes less than nothing to the highly important function of running a committee. And chairmen have become even more important now that there are fewer of them.

Administration Democrats might have acted otherwise had they realized what they were doing. Because of the seniority rule, only two northern Democrats will retain their chairmanships when the new and modernized congress organizes next January. They are Walsh of Massachusetts and Wagner of New York (provided, of course, they are re-elected and the Democrats hold their place as majority party).

The rest of the chairmanships go to the South and since some southern senators persist in voting against the more liberal measures of the administration and joining with the Republicans on others just to show their independence, it leaves the liberal Democrats in a somewhat precarious position.

There is another factor which doesn't sit too well with a number of northern Democrats, either. Under the new set-up, the chairman of a committee will be more influential than ever for he now is provided with a large and efficient staff. The work of his committee will be more important than formerly because committee work won't be spread as thin as it was.

RETURN FROM EXILE . . . Some of the 800 Poles who returned to Poland after seven years of exile in Siberia are shown arriving at Lublin, where they received clothing from the American Red Cross. They were among two million Poles taken to Siberia when Russia divided Poland with the Nazis in 1939.

NEWS REVIEW

Strike Front Spreads; Meat Crisis Sharpens

MEAT:
New Crisis

As housewives scoured their neighborhoods for scarce meat and exercised their culinary arts for putting up more meatless meals, men folk were left to tussle with the difficult task of overcoming the distressing shortage.

It was hard to tell which job was harder, the women's or the men's, for the heavy shipments of livestock to market during the recent suspension of OPA and reluctance of feeders to fatten up the small supply of range cattle under OPA ceilings complicated the policy-makers' problems.

As the crisis sharpened, department of agriculture had the only word of encouragement, stating that late fall runs of grass-feds would partially relieve the stringent shortage. But their predictions were tempered somewhat by livestock experts' statements that the high prices for range cattle would make feeders' purchases less profitable and further cut the supply of finished animals in late winter and spring.

With packers laying off thousands of workers in the face of diminished receipts of livestock, AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen called for restoration of free markets to stimulate shipments. President Truman was asked to recognize the "futility of OPA and chuck it out the window."

Leather and pharmaceutical industries also felt repercussions of the livestock situation, with shortages of hides and animal organs affecting their production.

With supplies of hides approximating only 35 per cent of needs, tanneries have been forced to lay off numerous workers, it was reported. And with supplies for October and November estimated at even less, more employees will have to be laid off.

LABOR:
Teamsters Revolt

With union officials branding the strike of 25,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in New York City "the worst rank and file revolt in history," IBT Pres. Dan Tobin stepped into the picture at the request of Mayor O'Dwyer to help settle the walkout.

Tobin acted after O'Dwyer had cited the union's refusal to permit the transport of essential food and medicines and warned him that the IBT would have to accept responsibility for "bloodshed and injury." Tobin ordered 10,000 sympathy strikers of 23 locals in New York and New Jersey to return to work and suggested that employer approval of an 18½ cent an hour raise for 15,000 strikers would serve as a basis for negotiation.

CANADA:
Farmers Strike

Following the technique of "direct action," 20,000 members of the Alberta Farmers' union in the western Canadian province withheld all produce except milk from market in their drive for a readjustment of parity prices.

Pickets appeared at many points but concentrated their strength at grain elevators. Some operators were warned that they would lose striking farmers business if they accepted deliveries from non-strikers.

With the strike in full swing and union members of neighboring Saskatchewan joining the movement, government officials promised thorough consideration of the parity question. Farmers demanded an increase in the parity level to compensate for the higher cost of commodities they must purchase.

READY FOR BLACKOUT . . . Getting set for a scheduled light company strike, these Pittsburgh, Pa., youngsters do a little work on some lanterns and flashlights.

WORRY NO LONGER

Vets Allow Insurance To Lapse

WASHINGTON. — Since leaving the armed forces, World War II veterans have allowed 90 billion dollars in government life insurance to lapse through non-payment of premiums, records of Veterans' administration disclose. More than 10 million veterans have failed to keep their policies in force, and VA officials estimate that these policies had a face value of $9,000 or more.

About 2,700,000 former servicemen of World War II have kept their policies in force, the agency estimates.

Officials offered no explanation for the large number of policies allowed to lapse.

Veterans may reinstate their policies by the payment of two monthly premiums, one payment covering the 30-day grace period, the other the current month.

Until February 1, 1947, no physical examination will be required to reinstate a policy. A veteran, however, must sign a statement that his physical condition is as good as when he allowed his policy to lapse.

Temporary waiving of a physical examination has caused no stampede to reinstate policies, officials said.

While doing its best to induce veterans to reinstate their low-cost government insurance, VA is not encouraging those with policies in force to be in any hurry to convert their present policies into higher-cost coverage.

Veterans who obtained policies prior to January 1, 1946, have eight years from that date to convert their policies; those issued policies after January 1, 1946, have five years.

So far 430,000 veterans have converted their policies into ordinary straight life, 20-payment and 30-payment policies. The 20-payment plan is by far the most popular, with 302,500 taking this option.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Picturesque Wilderness Becomes National Park

City-weary Americans will have an opportunity to step into the past to see the northern forest as it was centuries before Columbus stumbled onto a new world through dedication of forest-green and rugged Isle Royale, "the jewel of Lake Superior," as the nation's newest national park.

The island, jutting boldly from the blue Superior waters, 55 miles from the mainland, stood for centuries before its discovery by the Indians.

French explorers followed the Red Men across the lake to the island, a virtually untouched laboratory of nature where rich mineral deposits lie buried deep beneath the grandeur of the surface.

Mecca for Thousands.

Centuries later the modern sportsman and tourist rediscovered Isle Royale, and now it has become a mecca for several thousand persons each year.

Dubbed the "Lake Superior icebox," Isle Royale is isolated by the ice over Lake Superior for seven months a year—November to May. It is the permanent winter home of only fishermen and trappers. In the summer months the population is increased greatly when more fishermen arrive and when vacationists flock to the picturesque wilderness.

Years ago the state of Michigan took initial steps to save the island from the pulp loggers, already starting their operations there, for a cut-over Isle Royale would have been such a bleak and barren wilderness that probably not even the moose would have liked the place.

Came in 'Big Freeze.'

The famous Isle Royale moose, incidentally, are not native to the island. They have been there only since the very cold winter of 1912 when that part of the big lake froze so solidly that the herds' ancestors migrated from Canada 10 miles across the ice. The island proved a perfect place for the moose, the herd thriving and increasing.

The caribou and white-tailed deer, which were native to the island long before the moose came, are no longer found there. But of other wild life there is a good variety and an abundant amount: mink, beaver, coyote, brush wolves, rabbits.

The island is the home of a great many water birds that fish on its shores and streams. Like every well watered wilderness, Isle Royale is a forested area with groves of white and black birch, sugar, red and mountain maples. Black ash, mountain ash, quaking aspen, alders and willow trees also thrive.

Because the winters are subarctic and the nutriment for trees is meager and the summers short, some trees are more than four centuries old and only five feet tall.

The area abounds in wild flowers, including 30 varieties of orchids.

Starts Campaign.

The man who made the modern discovery of Isle Royale was Dr. William P. Scott, who in 1890 was sent there to look after the miners and their families. He made leisurely explorations over the place, fell in love with the rugged island far out in the cold, cold lake and was the first to campaign for its nationalization.

Fishermen, meantime, built huts, groups of them clustered into tiny shoreline villages, and worked the rich waters around the island, taking out whitefish by the ton. Life in the summertime there was pleasant and profitable.

But life on Isle Royale in the winter was always rugged, bleak, lonesome and dangerous. Once a winter worker had an eye pecked out by an owl made so desperate by hunger that it dared attack a man.

Formerly there was no communication between the island and the rest of the world from the time the last boat sailed away in November until the next one broke through the ice in May. In late years, of course, there has been radio.

Compared to Battlewagon.

The big island is 46 miles long, contains 205 square miles of area and has a number of small islets around it so that it is sometimes compared to a battleship escorted by a flotilla of destroyers. Transportation around the island is by boat from port to port, or by foot over the moose or old miner trails, some of which were cleared a bit and marked a few years ago by the CCC. There are no railroads, not even any wagon roads on Isle Royale.

In 1931 congress voted to make a national park out of the area, and in 1933 President Roosevelt approved the spending of $750,000 of federal funds to purchase land of the island in danger of being logged for pulp. By 1939 all claims were cleared and the department of interior took over administration of the area, making it a national park. The war intervened to delay dedication of the new park until this fall.

Doctors Abandoned Hope—But Injured Vet Now Can Talk

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—"He'll never talk again," doctors agreed after Richard J. Werner, 20, of Jamestown, was wounded in action on a battlefield in Germany March 25, 1945 — but now Werner plans to try out for his school glee club.

Seriously injured by a blast from a German howitzer, Werner had a hole in this throat, severed vocal cords, fractured larnyx and severed windpipe. After lying in an army hospital for more than a month, breathing through a silver tube inserted through the wound in his throat, Werner heard a doctor say:

"We're going to try to suture your vocal cords, fella. Not much chance it will work, but we may get a squawk or two out of you."

Three months in a hospital in England and another at Fort Devens, Mass., passed before a doctor removed the tube and asked: "How you feeling, boy?"

"Okay," Werner rasped without thinking—and then, in a fever of excitement, he croaked: "Hey! I can talk!"

MOBILE X-RAY ROOM . . . Designed particularly for use in sparsely populated areas, a powerful new weapon against tuberculosis and other chest diseases has been acquired by the U. S. Public Health service. It is a bus-mounted x-ray room which can be taken to people in their homes, factories, stores and schools to make routine chest examinations as a phase of the program to "nip TB in the bud." The dread disease has no symptoms in its early stage, yet in that stage it is most easily curable.

Even Beavers Occasionally Are too Eager

GREELEY, COLO.—Even beavers occasionally become too eager, county road workmen insist.

Called to repair a flooded section of county road, the workers at first thought some farmer had been careless with irrigation water. Later they discovered that beavers were building a dam across a nearby irrigation ditch, causing water to run onto the road. The road workers pulled out the dam. That night the beavers put it back in. The battle continued, the roadmen working like beavers taking out the dam during the daytime and the beavers living up to their name at night by putting the dam back.

Finally Sheriff Gus Anderson was called into the case. He refused to take legal action to dispossess the beavers, but he did notify Game Warden W. O. Adkins, who will trap the beavers.

m Unique School.

ition was the Columbus School of four grades, standard scholastic curriculum with emphasis placed on choral training. Admission to the school—then and now—had two requisites, musical aptitude and the possibility of a good voice. Forty-eight boys attended the opening session, the enrollment increasing consistently to reach the present total of 97.

A non-profit, interdenominational institution, the school relies on returns from its own concerts and public subscriptions for support.

Although the teachers in the early days of the struggling school were given no assurance of a salary, they came anyway as a result of their faith in the genius of Huffman and the conviction that their ideal eventually would be realized.

Make Town Hall Debut.

In the third year of its existence, the unique, tuition-free organization got its long-awaited opportunity. Siegfried Hearst, representative of the National Concerts and Artists corporation, attended a rehearsal of the Boychoir in Columbus. Captivated by the group, he advised a Town Hall debut in New York. Ignoring the financial drain, the choir went to New York to score its first outstanding success. Reviewers were lavish in their praise.

Only disappointment following the Town Hall debut was that the anticipated request from N.C.A.C. to manage the Boychoir failed to materialize. Now, however, the N.C.A.C. has full management of the choir's affairs.

Second major opportunity for the choir came three years ago when the choir appeared in concert at the Radio institute's annual convention at Ohio State university. Leading radio executives arranged to present the Boychoir in a six-month series of broadcasts.

Radio appearances and concerts brought the work of the choir to the attention of music lovers throughout the nation, with subscriptions guaranteeing future of the school beginning to pour in. Two-thirds of the back salaries now have been paid. Huffman, who had received nothing for his labors for the first five years, has started to draw his well-earned wages. The school, which started with faith and a $6,000 budget, has set its goal at $25,000 next year.

Lack of housing and boarding facilities for out-of-town applicants has prevented many deserving boys from taking advantage of the unique opportunities offered by the school. To remedy this situation, more than $100,000 of a $150,000 quota has been raised in an intensive building campaign.

Plan Major Tours.

For the past six years, the Boychoir confined its choral activities to Columbus and its environs. Expanding its activities, the choir conducted its first organized tour through the East last spring.

In response to requests from parents in all parts of the country, the Columbus Boychoir summer camp at Chautauqua, N. Y., was established to make the unique training of the school available to boys from other communities.

Supported at first by nothing but an abounding faith, Columbus Boychoir School today ranks as one of the nation's major achievements in the artistic and educational world.

In setting aside her will, Vice-chancellor John O. Bigelow said the woman's hatred of men went beyond the borderline of sanity.

"Miss Strittmater regarded men with an instant hatred and looked forward to the scientific day when women could bear children without the aid of men," the prerogative court justice said.

"In 1937 she wrote: 'It remains for feministic organizations to make exposure of women's 'protectors' and 'lovers' for what their vicious and contemptible selves are,'" Bigelow said.

PAUL'S BACKGROUND AND EARLY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4, 5; Philippians 3:5, 6.

MEMORY SELECTION—Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth —Ecclesiastes 12:1.

God works through men. When we study his work we study the lives of men—all types of men—but all yielded to him, and used by him.

Paul stands out as one of the most influential characters in all history. His life and letters, which we are to study the next three months, have had a tremendous effect on the human race. Especially is this true of his position and influence in the Christian church.

Under God he was the one who carried the gospel to the Gentile world, and then began the great missionary program of the church, which goes on to this very day. His writings are the steady and extensive foundation of much of our study and teaching of Christian doctrine.

I. Birthplace (Acts 21:39).

The place of a man's birth has a definite influence on his personality and usefulness. Tarsus, where Paul was born, was one of the most cosmopolitan cities in the world of that day. It was a Roman province, where men proudly held their citizenship in the great empire. Greek, the language of world culture, was spoken there.

Tarsus was a great educational and university center. It was in a rich and fertile area. It was at the head of navigation on the river Cydnus and on a great Roman highway. It was the capital of the province.

II. Education (Acts 22:3).

After his early training in the home and under rabbis in Tarsus, he went to Jerusalem to study in what was probably the best-equipped Hebrew college of that day, under one of the greatest teachers, Gamaliel.

Somewhere in his rearing he was taught a trade, for every Jewish boy learned to support himself with his own hands (see Acts 18:3).

He was instructed in the Word of God, and had a consuming zeal for religious things. Until he was converted, it counted against Christianity, but afterward it became a flaming fire to spread the truth in all the world.

His combined zeal and knowledge made him a man of truly broad mind and tolerant spirit (Acts 5:35-39).

III. Citizenship (Acts 22:27, 28).

The mighty power and prestige of Rome stood behind every Roman citizen. Paul used his citizenship for protection. It helped him in his service for the Lord. Its prestige was used for God's glory.

It is a good sign when a man is proud of his national background, and it speaks well for the nation to which he belongs. But Paul came (as every Christian does) to know and appreciate a higher citizenship.

IV. Religion (Acts 26:4, 5).

Though a free-born Roman citizen, Paul was a Jew, and loyal to the religion of his people. He was a member of the strictest sect, the Pharisees, in which his family had held membership for generations.

He lived consistently in the observance of the laws and customs of his religious faith, and none could point to any flaw in his doctrine or failure in his life.

When he became a follower of Christ, there was no ground on which anyone could dismiss his conversion and his witness as the outbreak of a new viewpoint on the part of a renegade Jew.

It is to a man's credit that he faithfully lives up to the beliefs of the religion he professes. The result of such sincerity will be conversion, if he, like Paul, meets Christ and honestly faces the question of loyalty to him.

V. Race (Phil. 3:5, 6).

Paul counted it to be an honor to be known as a Hebrew and gloried in the fact that he was born, trained and lived within that racial as well as religious circle.

No one need ever be ashamed of his race, although he may be ashamed of things which members of his race have done. But there are even more things of which to be proud, and a man may add to the standing of his race by living his own life in cleanness of character and nobility of purpose. It is never a commendable thing to be ashamed of the race of one's fathers.

We must remember, however, that all the things in which Paul gloried, he found to be but refuse when he compared them with Christ (see Phil. 3:7, 8).

Everything worthwhile in a man's life God can glorify and use. But none of them, no matter how precious they may seem to be, compares with fellowship with and service for the Lord.

SITE OF SANATORIUM . . . Shown above is the Ottawa Arthritis sanatorium and Diagnostic clinic, where revolutionary new methods of treating arthritis have been evolved.

NO LONGER 'HOPELESS'

New Concepts in Treating Arthritic Patients Evolved

OTTAWA, ILL. — Convinced that "something could be done" to end the futility which has characterized most efforts to treat arthritic patients, Dr. E. C. Andrews, director of the Ottawa Arthritis sanatorium and Diagnostic clinic, has developed a revolutionary new concept in treatment of the disease and other rheumatic conditions.

The new method, which Dr. Andrews describes as "completely outmoding procedures generally followed by present-day doctors," is providing permanent relief for hundreds of arthritis sufferers who once believed their cases to be hopeless, he adds. Success of the new procedure, he continues, lies in its ability to treat the body as a whole rather than merely the part affected by the arthritic ailment.

DR. ANDREWS

Located in quiet, spacious surroundings in an industrial community of central Illinois, the Ottawa sanatorium places main emphasis on a thorough, 48-point examination of the arthritis patient. Findings of the examination, which usually requires about six days, then are correlated to determine cause of the affliction. A complete report and prescribed treatment are forwarded to the patient's own doctor, to be carried out under his supervision when the patient returns home.

Pointing out that arthritis never "heals itself," Dr. Andrews insists that success of any program to control the disease is based on adequate diagnosis followed by treatment of the entire body to return it to a normal condition.

"There is no such thing as a hopeless case of arthritis," the specialist maintains.

Dutch Give Food Grants as Means To Spur Weddings

AMSTERDAM. — Special inducements to marriage have been authorized by the distribution service of the Dutch government, including food as wedding "bait."

The grants stress extra food allowances for wedding feasts, including a half pound loaf of bread for every guest, one pound of margarine, six ration coupons for sweets (or three for tobacco), two ounces of meat, one ounce of coffee, four quarts of milk and two pounds of sugar for the festive board.

Shortage of Males Termed 'Sabotage'

WASHINGTON. — Reports that the war left a scarce supply of single eligible males were revealed as so much "romantic sabotage" in census figures.

On the contrary, the girls have an edge in the marriage odds. Statistics disclose that in the marriageable age groups there are more single men than single women.

"There still are more than enough men to go around," Dr. Hope T. Eldridge, census bureau analysis expert, reports.

Bobcats Are Peril In Oil Field Areas

THERMOPOLIS, WYO. — Increases in the bobcat population near the Warm Springs oil field represent a new menace, according to Gayle Lewis. Lewis, who uses tomcats to catch mice at his house in the oil field area, reports that three of his tomcats have been killed by foraging bobcats. Now, he says, the mice walk around in the oil at the field, then track up his house.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

College football fans are becoming air-minded, with many prospective rooters planning to fly to major grid classics this fall. Both private planes and commercial airliners will be used in carrying grid enthusiasts to their favorite stadiums.

Ernie Nordstrom, Northwestern university ticket manager, reports many inquiries from fans planning to fly to Evanston, Ill., for Wildcat games. An alumnus in Seattle, Wash., has purchased two season tickets, he and his wife planning to make the trip each weekend by regular airline travel. Season tickets also have been purchased by alumni in Colorado and Texas, who plan to travel to Evanston by air.

A block of 150 seats has been sold to a group of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., fans for the Ohio State game. The party has chartered planes for the trip. Another party in a far western city plans to charter a DC-3 plane for the Northwestern-Illinois game.

Add novel uses for airplanes: A means of keeping farm kids "home on the range." Dewey C. Shaffer, O'Neill, Neb., farmer, uses an airplane to cover his 25,000 acres of ranch land, oversee his 3,000 Herefords and check his 45 windmills and 175 miles of fencing. Main advantage to the plane, however, is that the shiny red two-seater has added a glamorous punch to ranching for his son, Larry, and two daughters. It will be the means, Shaffer hopes, of "keeping them down on the farm."

FLYING SCHOOLS DOUBLED

Postwar increase in private flying and flying training for veterans under the G.I. bill of rights are reflected in the more than twofold increase in the number of flying schools approved by Civil Aeronautics administration in the first seven months of 1946.

The number of CAA approved ground and flying schools operating in this country totaled 1,021 on August 1, compared with 405 at the first of the year. In the month of July alone 188 new schools were approved while another 70 were given reapproval.

Among the 1,021 new schools there are 1,306 CAA ratings, some schools holding two or more ratings for different kinds of flying. Broken down, the ratings are as follows: basic flying, 129; advanced flying, 50; primary flying, 637; instrument flying, 193, and flight instructor, 221.

NEW HELICOPTER . . . Introduced to the public for the first time at the Cleveland national air races, Firestone's new helicopter jumps off the ground vertically before the small plane in the background can gain flying speed on its short take-off run.

AIR EXPRESS SERVICE

Direct air express service to Anchorage, Alaska, from all parts of the United States now is available. The new service is operated nonstop between Anchorage and Seattle, Wash., marking the first extension of Northwest Airlines routes beyond U. S. borders in accordance with its recently certificated routes to Tokyo, Shanghai and the Philippines. The air express rate is 60 cents a pound between Seattle and Anchorage, with a minimum of $1 a shipment.

Harley and Norene set up two experiments for us in Science. One showed us the expansion of water when heated and the other showed the expansion of air.

In Art we have been trying to make interesting designs for borders and all over patterns.

FRESHMAN REPORT

Reporter, Marian Kastler

Most of the freshmen have finally settled down to business, although I will admit there are a few who think they don't have to study. We only have about a week until six weeks tests, then the teachers will really find out how much we know.

In History we are studying about Athens and their way of living. We have been having quite a few tests. They usually take us by surprise so you can imagine what kind of grades we get. In Algebra we are studying simple Algebra. We are beginning to like it much better since we can understand it. English has become quite interesting because we are studying the parts of a sentence. For one week we had Literature. During this time we read a few stories and poems and discussed them in class. In Science we have been studying about matter and horsepower. We are having experiment No. 3 Monday, by Beverly Beier. This subject most of us enjoy very much. There have been two base ball games played here. The last was with Crystal Lake. Klemme won the game.

The girls have been having P. T. when they don't have Glee Club. We have been playing base ball against the Sophomores.

The boys have baseball practice and some play football.

Since we have got into the swing of High School I think we all will like it because it is fun.

Our Sophomore Class

Reporter, Marjorie Lau

In Geometry we have started work on Theorems and on the drawing of them. We are finding this quite interesting, but hard work.

In English we are learning the parts of speech and how to use them in sentences.

Our Biology class is still studying about plants and animals and what they need in order to live. We hope to start on aquarium soon and be have many new Biology supplies.

In World History we are learning about Greece and Athens. We read about the Peloponesian war and some of the great men of that time.

A Note From The Juniors

The Juniors are now thinking strongly about the class play which is to be presented in about four weeks. They have decided on a three-act comedy, "Dear Papa."

Mr. Rector is directing the cast and has picked out very good characters to act the parts. There is a lot of acting to be done in the play this year and it is expected to make a great hit with the public and really go over big.

The Seniors

Reporter, Peggy Coobs

The class have received the good news that their class rings will arrive sometime in October. We are looking forward to wearing them.

The nine seniors taking Bookkeeping have finished one cycle. We are now beginning a chapter on checks. Some of us have given up the idea of Bookkeeping as a career, but to be honest, we all like it and think it is fun. We are having a pre-six-weeks test, Friday.

"The Statute of Frauds," is the topic in Business Law class. Jack Ziefenback visited our class Wednesday morning. He is a Yougoslavian and is making his home with Mr. Patterson.

The Struggle for Control is an interesting topic for discussion in American History class. Current Events is also a part of our History class and are discussed ever, Friday.

The seniors in Sociology class are working on the chapter "The Roots of Orderlineas."

The Short Story is a part of English Literature and a very interesting part too. We have read several short stories and have learned the difference between the American and English short stories. The different styles of several authors are also distinguished.

Pressure and Buoyancy are the subjects talked about in Physics class this week.

You have just read a summary of what the seniors have been doing in school this week. We find our subjects more interesting as we go along. It hardly seems possible that next week will be the end of the six weeks. This means tests so we will probably be sleeping on our books the night before.

RURAL SCHOOLS AID IN FIRE PREVENTION WORK

Iowa's rural school children will be on hand this fall to take part in National Fire Prevention Week, October 6-12. They're entering a fire prevention contest for rural schoolls in an effort to remove fire hazards in their homes and schools. The fact is they've been recognizing fire hazards and realizing the value of fire prevention via this contest for 4 years.

Because farm building had little repair during the war period when materials and manpower wages and supplies at the light sion agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, praises the work rural school children have done in reducing fire waste and loss of life. This year during their inspection tours they'll be looking lightning rods and boxes, cartons lighting rods and boxes, cartons and stacks of paper near the furnace and other fire hazards.

Points in this year's contest beginning October 6 and continuing until November 15 will stack up for 100 percent cooperation of all families represented by the school, the number of pupil's homes and other farms and homes inspected, the number of fire hazards discovered and removed and any extra activities relating to fire prevention carried out by the school or pupils. The contest is sponsored jointly by the state fire prevention committee and the Agriculture Extension Service.

According to Beaty, the 1945-46 fire prevention program carried out by rural schools resulted in the finding of 4,266 fire hazards. The 2,386 children from 332 337 inspections of their own farms and neighboring homes. and neighboring homes.

INJURED GOODELL YANK RETURNS FROM NORWAY

Mrs. T. R. Burgess, of Goodell, recently received a telephone call from her son, S Sgt. Richard Burgess, that he had just arrived at Fort Killmer, N. J., from Germany.

Last June he was in a truck accident, suffered a broken leg and since then has been in hospitals. He is in a body cast and will be in a hospital at Trenton, N. J.

His sister, Mrs. Paul Halfpop, received a call from him saying his wife had been to see him. She is staying with her father at Long Island, N. Y. while Richard has been overseas.

CARELESSNESS IS MAIN FIRE CAUSE

Poor Construction Also Is Important Reason for Losses on Farms

Statistics show that experinece has'nt been the best teacher where farm fires are concerned. Since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern to start $168,000,000 Chicago fire 75 years ago, farm fire lossss have increased. In the nation last year $484,000,000 worth of property went up in smoke.

The tragic thing is that 90 percent of all fires are preventable, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agricultural engineer. Most can be blamed on human carelessness and failure to use fire resistant construction.

Prevention

During fire prevention week now in progress, Beaty urges farmers to take care of the hazards around the farm home. This includes storing gasoline and kerosene in metal containers, well away from the buildings; replacing defective electrical equipment and worn and frayed cords; and keeping gasoline-powered machinery clean and in good repair. A rural fire department also should be organized and maintained.

Another "must" is to clean up old papers, magazines, rags, bedding and trash. Be careful, too, with matches, lanterns and when smoking.

To take care of structural fire hazards, plans should call for installing lightning rods on all main buildings. Heating equipment should have necessary safeguards. And wire systems should be adequate.

IOWA WILL HAVE SHORT SEASON ON DUCK HUNTING; NO GEESE THIS YEAR

45 DAY DUCK HUNTING SEASON OPENS OCT 26TH

Most Drastic Rules Since 1938 Imposed By State Commission

The most drastic duck hunting rules since 1938, as set by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, have been approved by the state conservation commission and an administrative order concurring with the federal regulations, where not in conflict with Iowa law, has been issued.

Under the new regulations the season has been shortened, bag limit reduced, Iowa placed in the intermediete zone, and Canada goose shooting in Iowa prohibited.

The 1946 duck season opens October 26, 30 minutes before sunrise and closes Dec. 9, 30 minutes before sunset. Shooting is allowed 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes before sunset each day of the open season. Daily bag limit on ducks, except American and red-breasted mergansers and wood ducks, is 7 with the possession limit of 14 after the first day. Not more than one wood duck may be in possession. Bag limit on American and red-breasted mergansers is 25 with no possession limit. Bag and possession limit on coots is 25.

The only geese on which there is an open season in Iowa during 1946 are blue and snow geese with a bag and possession limit of four, singly or in the aggregate.

The administrative order specifically prohibits taking the following birds: Canada, Hutchins, cackling, Ross', and white-fronted geese, Wilson's or jacksnipe, grebe, rails, gallinules, swan, woodcock, and mourning dove. Sunrise and sunset schedules for the entire state are being printed and will be mailed to all nwspapers as soon as they are available.

HANCOCK COUNTY FARM BUREAU COMMITTEE MET

Before Using Furnace Check On Fire Hazard

A little time spent now checking possible fire hazards may well save a home this winter, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agriculture engineer.

Soot-clogged chimneys, fuzzy shingles on the roof and the first furnace fire of fall make a combination which can spell disaster. Not only may the home be lost, but, with the critical shortage of materials, the lumber will be difficult to replace.

On the first cool day the homemaker often stuffs the furnace or coal stove full of quick-burning paper and wood or boxes and lights a match, The hot flames ignite the soot which has been accumulating. Sparks flying out and landing on cured fuzzy shingles are enough to start a fire. And on the farm, such a blaze is almost impossible to stop.

Beaty says such a warning is old but can't be repeated too often. If fires are to be prevented, cleaning stoves of soot and rust is one of the first steps to be taken. Then all drafts should be put in top working order, and stovepipes should be checked for soundness and rust-weakened spots.

The next place to check is the top of the house. The chimney should be checked to make sure it's clean and free from soot and bird's nests. Holes in the chimney near the roof also are serious fire hazards. It pays to check, too, for weathered shingles. Those that are found should be replaced. Lighting rods can be given a quick check at the same time to save a later trip. Beaty says fire-resistant asphalt and asbestos roofing is the best for roof repair when available. Or edge-grained wood shingles can be used. They will lie tight against the roof with less warping.

MRS. G. W. KLUCKHOHN HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Came To Ell Township Over 75 Years Ago

Thirty relatives, representing four generations of direct descendants, gathered at the Klemme Community Hall at high noon, Sunday, October 6, to celebrate the 87th birthday of Mrs. G. W. Kluckhohn.

After Mrs. Kluckhohn was presented with two lovely bouquets of gladiolas, the flowers were placed on the large table which was set with white linen, and at each of the thirty places a tiny decorated individual cake with candle was lighted as was the large decorated birthday cake which served as a center piece.

After everyone was seated the candles were lighted, and evryone sang the "Happy Birthday" sang.

Fried chicken, with the usual cullinary trimmings constituted the main fare of the noon meal.

After dinner, gifts were then opened and the many messages of Congratulations and best wishes were read.

The great grand children all sang their special birthday song and presented "Grandma" with their own personal gifts.

Mrs. Kluckhohn is one of the few remaining original settlers of Ell township. She was born in 1859, at White Rock, Ill., the eighth child of Sebastian and Katherine Ell, she came with her parents to this uninhabited spot of Iowa in 1870 and remained to make this her lifetime residence, and through the ensuing years has witnessed the development of the then unbroken prairie sod to the present modern farming community.

At the age of 87 Mrs. Kluckhohn remains in remarkably good health, and derives great increasing enjoyment from the visits of her many descendents and friends.

She points with pride to the fact that her family life has been carried into the fourth generation through each of her five living children.

Those present at the gathering included:

Mrs. G. W. Kluckhohn; Mrs. Sadie Turgasen; Donald O. Turgasen of State Center, Iowa; F. W. Kluckhohn; Franklin Kluckhohn; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kluckhohn; Mr. and Mrs. Lynford Bock and daughter Rox Anne; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kluckhohn; Mr. and Mrs. Carold Larson, and sons Robert and Craig; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kluckhohn; Clarence Kluckhohn Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kluckhohn and daughter Shannon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Keraus; Otho Keraus of Osage, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Verle Keraus and son Mickey and daughter Kay of Garner; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Turgasen of Chicago, Illinois.

Mrs. D. O. Turgasen and son, John Charles of State Center, Iowa were unable to attend.

HUNG OUT THE WASH

At Centerville, Tommy McDonald "ribbed" Mrs. Cecil, proprietor of a lunch room, about hanging tea-towels that were tattle tale gray. They accused her of hanging out the "wash" in the alley so no one would see it. Mrs. Cecil said that if there was a clothes-line in the courthouse square, she would hang the tea-towles there. The two men went to a hardware store, purchased a clothes-line and rigged it in the square. Then Mrs. Cecil was through with her part of the bargain, which explains why Centerville residents see a clothes-line full of [illegible] flapping in the breeze in courthouse square [illegible] ly.

BASEBALL FOR JOSEF

The Army and Navy journal proposes that baseball be introduced to Russia. It would equip and uniform 1,000 Russian teams in the belief this would be one sure way to create a spirit of good will and make the Russians a little less tense.

This may be the best suggestion of postwar times. A world series between Moscow and Petrograd might cure the crustiness. It might even soften up Pravda. Certainly Molotov would not be the same difficult guy if he had a season in the bleachers. And does anybody think Gromyko would be the killjoy that he is if he could get an afternoon now and then at a crucial series?

We are for baseball on the Volga. It would be O.K. up to the time when a home-run swatter got too big a public following or a star pitcher got his picture in the papers above that of Joe Stalin.

Of course baseball in Russia would present some difficulties. Would the Soviets stand for any home-run hitter being called a "king"? Will the three strikes and out rule be subject to a veto? Will the base on balls, being a democratic institution, be ruled out as capitalistic?

Isn't there a possibility that any team that licked Moscow in a series would be liquidated?

Suppose Joe Stalin likes Minsk to cop a pennant and the Pinsk club takes it?

If Joe thinks a player is safe at first and the decision is that he is out by a mile can the umpire escape being sent to the salt mines?

Suppose the Russian baseball teams have a bad season and Stalin wants some big hitters and fast runners from American lend-lease?

Could there be any hope of peace if Stalin arranged to go to Teheran for a crucial conference with Larry MacPhail and Leo Durocher?

What? No Reason . . . For Nervousness?

"No good reason for the break in stock prices and the current nervousness could be found."—News Item.

It couldn't be that reconversion is still behind the eight ball, that there's an ultimatum in every pot and two border incidents in every garage, that strikes are in flower again, that the administration recently set a course for Newfoundland and wound up in Bahama, and that meat, shirttails, peace and brotherly love are to continue shorter, could it?

The uneasiness wouldn't have a thing to do with the fact that Gromyko is still talking . . . that the only industry without bottlenecks is the holdup industry . . . that the victors in the global war trust one another less than they did Hitler—that general snafu has reached a new high in America and that there are increasing signs that the American public regards the Four Freedoms as (1) freedom of the daily double; (2) freedom to mob any depraved criminal for his autograph; (3) freedom to operate a black market in choice steaks; (4) freedom to dope out a newer and screwier program with audience participation.

Nervousness? Uneasiness? A return of the jitters? Well, possibly it has something to do with the fact that the world seems on fire, brass knuckles are becoming compulsory equipment in diplomacy, peace in Europe doesn't even look like a good show bet, labor and capital are still demonstrating new wrestling grips, you can't get a new auto except on a radio quiz program, nine more well-known Americans have become newspaper columnists. Russia still has the veto power, a couple aged 86 eloped the other day. 226 more strikes threatened east of the Rockies and Fala is back in the news!

BYRNES MAY RESIGN

WASHINGTON.—Friends of Secretary of State Byrnes have received word that he may have to resign shortly after the end of the Paris peace conference—for reasons of health. The news has come as a great blow to President Truman, who has leaned heavily on Byrnes.

Byrnes' doctors have told him that he might be able to continue as secretary of state provided he took long and periodic rests. However, Byrnes does not believe he should do this. Cordell Hull used to spend several months a year away from his office. In 1942, our first year in the war, he was away a total of six months.

Byrnes has told intimates that conducting the foreign affairs of the United States today is a constant, day-to-day job. He does not feel that a secretary of state can be off the job a minute, and he does not believe it would be fair to the American people for him to take a prolonged rest.

For instance, immediately after the Paris conference is the assembly of the United Nations, now already late. After that comes the Pan American security conference and the regular Pan American conference, to say nothing of various meetings of the United Nations security council.

WORKS AT TERRIFIC PACE

Byrnes has been hopping back and forth across the Atlantic ever since he became secretary of state. In 15 months he has made seven round trips. Cordell Hull, in 12 long years, made only one air flight across the Atlantic, plus two leisurely steamship trips to Latin America.

In Paris, Byrnes has worked at a terrific pace. Sitting in the peace conference all day, keeping on the alert to watch the moves of rival delegates, is a grueling job. It would wear out a younger man. But by going to bed every night immediately after dinner, Byrnes has kept going.

However, he is no longer young—68—and when the peace conference closes, he will have to decide whether to follow his doctor's advice and resign, or face eventualities.

MONTY'S POLITICS

Some of those who served in the American command in Europe are lifting their eyebrows over the U. S. visit of dapper, publicity-wise Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery.

Seared in their minds during those bloody months in Europe are certain events involving the famed Monty which personally they would like to forget, but which nationally they hope won't be forgotten—especially in view of the fear of impending war.

General Patton's officers, for instance, remember Patton's race up the west coast of Sicily, in contrast to Montgomery's snail's pace up the east coast. Nobody can blame a commander for having hard luck or necessarily going slow. But what only a few officers around Patton know, and what has never been published, is the telegram he received from the vaunted Montgomery.

Montgomery actually sent Patton a telegram asking him to halt his offensive and wait until he, Monty, caught up. In other words, American troops were going too fast for Monty. He was afraid Patton would envelope not only the enemy, but also the British army. Inside fact is that Patton pretended he never received the telegram, showed it only to a few top aides, later told Monty it never arrived. Patton's army kept on moving.

Later, in the Normandy offensive, Gen. Omar Bradley's officers recall all too vividly how Monty was supposed to break through at Caen, but sat there day after day, yelling at Eisenhower for more troops (American troops). Finally Bradley, Patton and Joe Collins made the American breakthrough at St. Lo, leaving Monty still sitting at Caen.

British papers all this time were featuring headlines: "Monty Pivots at Caen." Actually all the pivoting he did was to break up a few tanks in the Normandy hedgerows.

Shortly after that Eisenhower made General Bradley top field commander, giving him a higher place than Montgomery—a shift that brought such a roar from the British press and Mr. Churchill that Eisenhower later took two armies away from Bradley and gave them to Montgomery.

Johnny on his ninth birthday had had a party. It was all over and he was now gazing wistfully at the remains of the cake.

"Mother," he said, "may I have a piece of cake—only a small piece, please?"

"No," replied his mother. "You've had quite enough."

"Well, may I sleep with a bit under my pillow?" asked the boy.

"Very well, here you are, and remember to keep it under your pillow. Now run along to bed and go to sleep."

On going up to Johnnie's room some time later his mother was amazed to see Johnnie sleeping peacefully with the pillow over his stomach.

PAUL MAKES A NEW START

LESSON TEXT—Acts 26:9-18; I Corinthians 15:8-10.

MEMORY SELECTION — This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—I Timothy 1:15.

All that a man has by nature is not enough. We saw last week the preparation by heredity, education and environment which Paul had for a place of leadership. But it was not enough. The capable, well-born, well-trained young Jewish aristocrat had to be born again spiritually before he could do God's work.

Careful Bible students regard the conversion of Paul and the resurrection of Christ as the two outstanding events of the New Testament. Without the resurrection of Jesus, the conversion of Saul of Tarsus (whom we know as Paul the apostle) would not have been possible, and at the same time his conversion is one of the strongest proofs of the resurrection.

We find him in three relationships.

I. By Nature—Contrary to Christ (Acts 26:9-12).

It is not enough, as some of us suppose, that a man be sincere. Paul was entirely sincere in his conviction that he ought to persecute the Christians. He did it with a good conscience (Acts 23:1), for a man's conscience commends him for doing what he believes to be right, even though he may be wrong in his thinking.

He was sincere, but he was anti-Christian. By nature man is at enmity with God. No good thing dwells in the flesh apart from the redeeming grace of God (Rom. 8:7; James 4:4; Rom. 7:18).

Stirred, probably by the faithful testimony of Stephen, to even greater zeal against the followers of Christ, Paul had to find new worlds to conquer, so he set out "breathing out threatenings and slaughter to destroy the church in Damascus" as he had sought to do in Jerusalem.

He was a bold persecutor, doing all he could "contrary to the name of Jesus" (v. 9), until he met the Lord himself on the Damascus road. Ah, that meeting made him a different man and he became

II. By Faith—Converted to Christ (Acts 26:13-18).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he found himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He heard from his holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people —"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands upon, or brings untrue accusation against, God's children had better beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with his people that when they suffer, it is he who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposed of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul entered into Damascus not as the haughty persecutor, but as a man trembling and astonished. He spent three days shut in with his own soul and God; not seeing, not caring to eat, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life was pulled up by the roots as it was displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus.

God had a great commission awaiting Paul as soon as he was ready for it (vv. 16-18). He was to be the apostle to the Gentiles, and that includes so many of us. The gospel which had come first to the Jews, was now to go out into all the world and to all people.

The change in Paul was a drastic one. He was as one who was alive from the dead. It was not a case of adjusting or refurbishing the old persecutor Saul—here was a new creature in Christ, ordained to good works (Eph. 2:8-10).

III. By Grace—Confessing Christ (I Cor. 15:8-10).

Twenty years had passed since Paul's conversion. He had been out serving Christ, in season and out of season. He had known persecution, suffering and opposition. Now he was writing, by inspiration of the Holy Spirit, about the resurrection, telling of those who had seen the risen Christ. He included himself as one born out of his time.

It is a personal vision of the living Saviour which vitalizes the spirit of a witness and makes his testimony ring true. Paul saw Christ. We too may see Him with the eye of faith, and by His grace become witnesses.

Effort and labor are involved. This matter of witnessing is not something which automatically does itself. "I labored more abundantly," said Paul, and yet he knew that it was the grace of God in him which accomplished the result (see v. 10 and Phil. 2:13).

That is it! The grace of God working on and in and through a man. And at the same time, that man laboring diligently, that the grace bestowed upon him should not be found vain. It is in this manner God's work gets done on earth!

Pupils who were absent from school this week are: Robert Arnold, Dick Dulmes, Adeline Medaus, and Dennis Haefner.

SEVENTH AND EIGHTH GRADE NEWS

Clara Smith

We are learning obout the arrangement of books in a library in our eighth grade English. We have found out obout the Dewey Decimal System, the Card Catalog and call numbers.

Harley and Norene set up two experiments for us in Science. One showed us the expansion of water when heated and the other showed the expansion of air.

In Art we have been trying to make interesting designs for borders and all over patterns.

FRESHMAN REPORT

Reporter, Marian Kastler

Most of the freshmen have finally settled down to business, although I will admit there are a few who think they don't have to study. We only have about a week until six weeks tests, then the teachers will really find out how much we know.

In History we are studying about Athens and their way of living. We have been having quite a few tests. They usually take us by surprise so you can imagine what kind of grades we get. In Algebra we are studying simple Algebra. We are beginning to like it much better since we can understand it. English has become quite interesting because we are studying the parts of a sentence. For one week we had Literature. During this time we read a few stories and poems and discussed them in class. In Science we have been studying about matter and horsepower. We are having experiment No. 3 Monday, by Beverly Beier. This subject most of us enjoy very much. There have been two base ball games played here. The last was with Crystal Lake. Klemme won the game.

The girls have been having P. T. when they don't have Glee Club. We have been playing base ball against the Sophomores.

The boys have baseball practice and some play football.

Since we have got into the swing of High School I think we all will like it because it is fun.

Our Sophomore Class

Reporter, Marjorie Lau

In Geometry we have started work on Theorems and on the drawing of them. We are finding this quite interesting, but hard work.

In English we are learning the parts of speech and how to use them in sentences.

Our Biology class is still studying about plants and animals and what they need in order to live. We hope to start on aquarium soon and be have many new Biology supplies.

In World History we are learning about Greece and Athens. We read about the Pelopponesian war and some of the great men of that time.

A Note From The Juniors

The Juniors are now thinking strongly about the class play which is to be presented in about four weeks. They have decided on a three-act comedy, "Dear Papa."

Mr. Rector is directing the cast and has picked out very good characters to act the parts. There is a lot of acting to be done in the play this year and it is expected to make a great hit with the public and really go over big.

The Seniors

Reporter, Peggy Coobs

The class have received the good news that their class rings will arrive sometime in October. We are looking forward to wearing them.

The nine seniors taking Bookkeeping have finished one cycle. We are now beginning a chapter on checks. Some of us have given up the idea of Bookkeeping as a career, but to be honest, we all like it and think it is fun. We are having a pre-six-weeks test, Friday.

"The Statute of Frauds," is the topic in Business Law class. Jack Ziefenback visited our class Wednesday morning. He is a Yougoslavian and is making his home with Mr. Patterson.

The Struggle for Control is an interesting topic for discussion in American History class. Current Events is also a part of our History class and are discussed ever, Friday.

The seniors in Sociology class are working on the chapter "The Roots of Orderlineas."

The Short Story is a part of English Literature and a very interesting part too. We have read several short stories and have learned the difference between the American and English short stories. The different styles of several authors are also distinguished.

Pressure and Buoyancy are the subjects talked about in Physics class this week.

You have just read a summary of what the seniors have been doing in school this week. We find our subjects more interesting as we go along. It hardly seems possible that next week will be the end of the six weeks. This means tests so we will probably be sleeping on our books the night before.

60 YEARS OF PRACTICE

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Are Returning Veterans "Different"?

During the war you heard a lot about how hard it was going to be for returning veterans to get adjusted to civilian life . . . how they'd be "different."

Well, plenty of them have returned to our town, and a finer, steadier bunch you couldn't ask for. Most of them are back at the same jobs . . . going with the same nice home-town girls (getting married, some of them, and setting up families) . . . renewing the same old friendships.

Even their amusements are the same. Nothing more exciting than fishing Seward's creek or pitching horseshoes . . . enjoying an outdoor barbecue with friendly wholesome beer and pleasant talk.

If they've changed at all it's in the direction of maturity and tolerance . . . tolerance for everything except dictators, and those who would destroy our democratic principles of live and let live. And from where I sit, that's another reason to be proud of them.

Communism Loses Prestige in Europe

Life in Soviet Russia Lacks Utopian Promise

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—As relations between the western world and Russia grow rapidly no better, many reports are coming in to show that Communism, which reached the peak of its prestige with the end of the war, is losing some of its popularity in Europe. The lack of proof provided in the eating of the Soviet pudding has had its effects, and many a wail of anguish is dimly audible behind the iron curtain which stretches from the Baltic through the Balkans.

Baukhage

This, of course, doesn't prevent our own little family of loyal American "Commies" from screaming the praises of all within the Soviet's gates.

I have been looking over some facts concerning two of the great postwar American problems—housing and union labor demands—with an eye on similar conditions in Russia.

Nobody but an optimist with rose-colored glasses and a five-year lease would say that we have no housing problem in America. But Stalin has one in Russia too. And how, Tovarish! (Don't answer me now, there's a plain clothes man behind the samovar.) I know about that letter workers wrote to Uncle Joe, pledging their tireless work and a promise to "liquidate all shortcomings" on the housing industry. That word "liquidate" has an unpleasant sound. And when Russian papers are allowed to criticize production, putting the blame on "local Soviets," it means—the situation needs criticizing!

But what were Russian housing conditions before the war?

According to a recent Library of Congress report, "Communism in Action," even before the devastation of western Russia the average floor space in Moscow was only 45 square feet per head. But the privileged (workers with high records on the speed-up plan) had much more. Hence, the ordinary Russian worker had much less. By way of contrast in Washington, D. C., under the National Capital Housing authority, the smallest housing unit (a one-bedroom apartment) must allot 165 square feet to the living room alone, and the total space must be 250 square feet.

In Russia the usual arrangement is one family per room in a six-room apartment with common use of the kitchen and bathroom.

This was the situation before the war. Today, in the Ukraine, according to an article in Harper's by John Fischer, who spent some months in the Ukraine and Byelo Russia with UNRRA, conditions are such that the Russian press may well be allowed to 'criticize—if that will do any good.

In Kiev, says Fischer, a person is supposed to have six square meters of living space, which is a strip of floor about ten feet long and six feet wide. Less than that is available in Kharkov.

If you want to know how a typical family in the Ukraine lives, Fischer tells you to imagine you and your wife and children occupying the smallest room in your house, with the clothing, beds, furniture and possessions that are absolutely indispensable. You'll have a brick stove instead of a radiator or cooking range, a bathroom with no hot water shared by several other families — and probably a few relatives to share all that!

Probably you could stand this if you knew it was temporary. But in Russia, according to Fischer, because of the five-year plan for the expansion of heavy industry (said to be a part of Soviet war preparation), Russians are going to have a bitterly hard life as far as consumer goods and facilities go, for another 10 to 15 years.

I can't verify Fischer's views, but I know that authorities agree that Russia cannot possibly do much to raise the standard of living of the less privileged even if she doesn't continue the present military preparation.

And what has Communism done for the laborer as such?

Under the five-year plan industrial workers' pay is supposed to go up to 500 rubles a month. Fischer estimates the present rate at between 300 and 350, which he says amounts in terms of American purchasing power to about $30 to $35.

Labor Unions Under Government Wing

According to "Communism in Action" (the U. S. government document I mentioned earlier) the Russian labor unions started out under Trotsky as independent, fighting organs of labor. But when Trotsky was ousted and made his very hasty departure from the Utopia he helped found, one lap ahead of the liquidators, things changed. As in the case of Nazi Germany the union became a limb of the party.

And no one would say that American unions, like the Russian variety, "are not organized to conduct strikes." This is reported by "Communism in Action," which says that there hasn't been a strike in Russia since 1921. The document further points out that unions in the United States have as their primary purpose the privilege of their members to deal on equal terms with their employers on all matters of mutual interest.

In the U.S.S.R., on the other hand, the unions are a part of the apparatus of the employer (the government) and since the government is supposed to act in the interests of all, the workers can't complain against any of its decisions.

Tough Sledding for 'Ins'

There seems to be agreement between some of the political leaders of both parties that the voters are going to indulge in a good deal of indiscriminate hurling of brickbats next month and it is entirely likely that many an innocent, bystanding congressman is going to suffer for the sins of his colleagues. Clarence Brown, No. 2 man in the Republican national committee, admitted to me that he was counting heavily on the "throw the rascals out" vote. In other words people are going to take out their various personal grouches on the incumbent, regardless of record or party affiliation. This view was reflected on the Democratic side by that experienced politician, Senator Russell of Georgia. He said to some of us the other day:

"It's always like this after a war. A great many people have complaints of one kind or another. It's a natural thing for many of them to decide to vote against the people who have been in office."

That line of reasoning, when pursued by a good Democrat, might be wishful thinking if he were casting his eyes at the gubernatorial contest in New York state. Many people take for granted that Governor Dewey, if he wins, will try to use re-election as a stepping stone toward the presidential nomination. In any case, the way the issues are being played now, if Dewey is re-elected, it will strengthen the arguments the Republicans are emphasizing that the next presidential campaign will be "safety and solidity" versus "wild-eyed radicalism."

Evidence to support the view that the "ins," whether they are Democrats or Republicans, are going to get the brickbats from disgruntled voters was contained in a letter recently received by two Democrat ins.

"There just aren't any diapers," an expectant incensed father wrote to his congressman, "and it's someone's fault. Regardless of where and how you place the blame, you represent us in our government which has allowed this national disgrace to come about and are, therefore, to a greater or a less degree, personally responsible for it."

Trade Accord Approved; Meat Crisis Continues

FOREIGN AFFAIRS:
Trade Pact

Pres. Juan Peron and his entire cabinet looked on as British Ambassador Reginald Leeper and Argentine Foreign Minister Juan Bramuglia signed trade accords cementing commercial relations between the two countries. Pleased by the event, Peron announced that he had ordered three shiploads of meat to be sent to Britain before Christmas with the compliments of his government.

Peron might well have been tickled with the agreement, which calls for Britain's purchase of 83 per cent of Argentina's exportable meat surplus in the first year at prices 25 per cent over prevailing levels. During the second year, Britain will take 78 per cent of Argentine supplies. The latest price boost brings the total increase up to 45 per cent over the 1939 level when Britain first went in for large-scale buying.

In another accord, the British relinquished their control of Argentine railways in exchange for shares in a new company including Argentine government and private capital. Under a third agreement, Argentina will be permitted to utilize blocked wartime trade balances in Britain for retiring sterling debts, buying out British investments or making cash withdrawals of 25 million dollars annually.

MEAT:
Crisis Widens

No less than 36,000 butcher shops throughout the nation were said to have closed and almost 100,000 clerks and packing house employees were reported idle as the crisis in meat continued.

Receipts of cattle and hogs remained far below the high levels established during the suspension of OPA and ran considerably below last year's runs. As packers awaited the large seasonal fall shipments they were compelled to bid ceiling prices for lean, grass-fed cattle and inferior grades of hogs. Some of the stock received was said to be suitable for by-product purposes only.

Meanwhile, OPA promised to act upon restaurant operators' protests against imposition of June 30 ceilings on meat dishes. With the restaurateurs claiming that the restoration of old prices in the face of increasing costs would force them to close, OPA said it would modify ceilings to assure adequate earnings if evidence of hardship were offered. Whereas restaurants spent 40 cents of each dollar of revenue for food they now expend 55 cents, it was said.

YUGOSLAVIA:
Jail Archbishop

Acting upon the testimony of the voluble secretary to Archbishop Alojzijc Stepinac, head of the Roman Catholic church in Yugoslavia Marshal Tito's communist government arrested the high prelate and prepared to try him for "crimes against the people."

With 12 priests already on trial on the same charge, inclusion of the Archbishop would further tend to discredit religion in the Russian-dominated nation, following the pattern of communist hostility to all creeds. While the powerful Croatian peasant leader, Vladimir Macek was implicated in the Archbishop's alleged machinations, the government hesitated to move firmly against him for fear of political repercussions.

Talking freely against the Archbishop, his former secretary alleged that the prelate's castle in Zagreb was the center of an anti-Tito movement to set up an independent Croatian state. Charging that the Archbishop worked closely with one of Draja Mihailovitch's ex-aids in promoting anti-government bands, the secretary declared that the high churchman planned to finance a terrorist campaign for separation.

BILLIONS IN BACKLOG

Huge Works Program Mapped

WASHINGTON. — Plans for a $4,107,136,000 public works program are being mapped by states, cities and counties, with projects to be financed by their own funds, according to the Federal Works agency.

Federal Aid highways, rivers and harbors, flood control projects, federal postoffices and other buildings, and Veterans' Administration hospitals add other billions to the work backlog. These projects will be financed wholly or partially by the national government.

The Federal Works agency has requests from states, cities and counties for advances to plan 7,560 projects totaling $2,757,136,599, and as of June 30 these local governmental units had completed their own plans for 5,500 projects to cost $1,350,000,000, according to FWA records.

Of the requests, the agency reported it has approved 4,630 and advanced $32,258,354 for planning. These alone involve $1,296,997,051.

Under congressional act, FWA has $65,000,000 to assist states, cities and counties in planning non-federal public works.

The bulk of advances approved was for planning water mains, payed street and sewer extensions and improvements and for new school buildings and additions.

Applications have been approved for planning 2,083 sewer, water and sanitation projects to cost $546,355,941 and for 1,317 school expansions or new buildings to cost $318,415,189.

Variety of Projects.

Other items approved for advances include 300 highway, road and street projects to cost $46,820,998; 41 bridges, viaduct and railway overpasses, $28,426,458; 35 airports, $19,895,981; 158 hospitals and clinics $73,470,874; 392 public buildings such as courthouses and city halls, $117,187,172; 178 parks and other recreational facilities, $29,943,129; 72 miscellaneous projects, $116,481,309

Field said the program was not designed primarily to cushion unemployment, but to provide needed public works as soon as possible.

In the event it is turned into an emergency employment creator, Field said "it can give work immediately," pointing out that it took 18 months to get 100,000 working on public construction in 1933-'34 "because there had been no advance planning."

Flying Sparks Provide 'Touch,' Roofs of Farm Buildings 'Go'

WNU Features.

It was "touch and go" with 55,000 roofs last year, according to the National Fire Protection association, sponsors of Fire Prevention Week, October 6-12. The "touch" was provided by chimney or wind-blown sparks or flaming embers landing on flammable roofs, the third major cause of fires annually in the nation.

Property losses in farm and rural areas, according to NFPA's statistics, approach 200 million dollars annually. Included were 25,000 barns, with destruction of stock, feed, machinery and equipment.

"When a farm fire occurs, farm folk face the prospect of having their property completely destroyed," NFPA points out. Lack of adequate fire-fighting equipment generally makes it impossible to prevent spread of the flames from one building to another.

Emphasize Precautions.

Yet 90 per cent of all fires, it is pointed out both by NFPA and the U. S. department of agriculture, are preventable by the use of simple precautions and "good housekeeping."

Farmers should periodically inspect chimneys and flues, lightning arresters, farm storage of gasoline, storage places of kerosene, barns and other buildings where spontaneous ignition could occur, as well as stoves, furnaces and pipes. Statistics show that a heavy loss of life on farms occurs when kerosene is used to quicken fires.

Hay should be properly cured and stored with ample ventilation, with inspections at frequent intervals for signs of heating. Barn roofs should be examined periodically for signs of leakage, since water dripping into hay can start the heating process. Worn and curled flammable roofs should be re-covered with weather-tight and fire-resistant materials, such as asphalt shingles.

Bar Smoking in Barns.

Smoking should be strictly forbidden in barns. Lanterns should never be left where an animal or a careless workman can topple them over, or near accumulations of litter or combustible materials. All old feed bags, rags, paper and accumulations of other trash should be disposed of regularly and systematically.

All main buildings should have lightning rod protection, properly installed and examined for maintenance as a matter of regular routine. Gasoline, kerosene and other combustible liquids should be stored in metal containers, underground, and at least 75 feet from main farm buildings.

Chimneys and heating plants require frequent cleaning for fire safety. Electrical wiring should be tested for adequacy and, when new wiring is installed, it should meet standards of the national electrical code. Worn electrical equipment and frayed cords should be replaced.

BEFORE
Fire Strikes

1. Learn how to notify the fire department. Post the telephone number near your phone.
2. Learn the location of the nearest fire alarm box. Learn how to send an alarm.
3. See that every responsible member of your family knows how to notify the fire department.
4. See that your house is equipped with a garden hose and a water bucket. Sometimes a fire extinguisher may be advisable.
5. Rehearse in your own mind what you would do in event of fire.

AFTER
Fire Strikes

1. Start getting every person out of the house immediately.
2. Notify the fire department as quickly as possible. Don't let the fire get a head start.
3. After the fire department is notified and every occupant is safely evacuated from the house, you can start fighting the fire.
4. If you have given the alarm through a fire alarm box, stay at the box until fire engines arrive so you can direct them to the scene of the fire.

Fire Chief's Wife Insists on Nylons

DETROIT, MICH. — Most amusing incident witnessed by Fire Chief Ninnian Higby occurred at a blaze in his own home. Awakened by a dense smoke, the fire chief roused Mrs. Higby, who hurried into a bathrobe but refused to leave the house until he had secured a pair of nylons for her from the closet. Even then she sent him back—they weren't the right shade.

"In today's shortage of housing and building materials it would be in the interests of the American people if they made every week a Fire Prevention Week," declares W E. Mallalieu, general manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Waste Increases.

Pointing out that with the number of fires increasing and waste of property in 1946 reaching its highest point in history, Mallalieu contends that "it is time for every individual to ponder the effects of national carelessness, recklessness and preventable destruction on his own life, job and family."

With monthly losses during 1946 ranging from 11 to 37 per cent higher than last year, indications point to a record-breaking toll exceeding 600 million dollars in 1946. This loss, the result of approximately 700,000 fires, will be more than 30 per cent greater than the 455 million dollar toll in 1945.

Year's Toll Cited.

During an average year, the toll of fire includes: 10,000 lives lost; non-fatal burns to an additional 40,000 persons; destruction or damage of 350,000 homes, 2,700 churches, 2,600 schools, 9,500 hotels and boarding houses, 10,500 restaurants, 1,000 hospitals and 3,100 amusement places; destruction of 50 million dollars worth of farm property; burning of forest lands equal to an area the size of Kentucky, and devastation of enough timber and lumber to build 200,000 five-room houses.

Chief causes of fire are matches and smoking, which account for 30 per cent of all fires from known causes. Other major causes are defective or overheated stoves and furnaces, misuse of electricity, inflammable fluids and open fires.

Fire losses are heaviest during the winter months, when more heating systems are in operation.

Children are the most frequent victims of fire, with children under five accounting for 20 per cent of all fire fatalities.

Settlement House Observes Golden Jubilee of Founding

Founder Remains As Lone Director For 50-year Span

To the people of Cleveland, Ohio, Hiram House is synonymous with good citizenship. For the past 50 years, Hiram House and its founder, George A. Bellamy, have labored to build for Cleveland the finest kind of citizens possible.

Now the institution, which is supported by the Community Chest, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its founding This year also marks the golden anniversary of Bellamy's connection with the institution. He has the distinction of being not only the founder but also the first and only director.

Bellamy's philosophy was developed in the backwoods of Michigan, where he was born. In bringing his ideas and ideals to one of the country's larger cities he became the first of his family to pioneer in a large community. All previous moves by his family had been back to the land.

Founded in 1896.

Cleveland's first settlement house founded as such grew out of a chance remark made in 1896 in a Hiram college classroom. Boston's South End House was under discussion and someone said, "Why not a Hiram House for Cleveland?"

That "someone" was George Bellamy. A few months after his graduation he went to Cleveland and opened his first settlement house at 143 Orange street.

IN A DAY'S WORK . . . A game of checkers provides diversion for "young fry" at Hiram House, Cleveland's settlement house. The program isn't all play, however...

The first few months were hectic. There was very little money; the first furniture—and for a time the only furniture—was a baby crib and table loaned by a neighbor; the purchase of a quarter's worth of soap brought half a dozen metal spoons as a premium; within a few months the landlord gave notice to vacate because too many young people were coming to the house and he feared for its foundations.

The struggling little settlement house was moved to another Orange street location, where it operated for two years. By 1899 there was enough money to start building a new structure. The move to the new quarters at 2723 Orange avenue was made in 1900.

Teaches Americanism.

Men, women and children came to Hiram House in droves—from its first day of operation. They came to learn how to be good Americans, for help in burying their dead, marrying the living and counselling the wayward.

Gradually, Hiram House began to build a reputation as a model settlement house, its founder and director a man with extraordinary vision. Foreign countries began to send their representatives to the Cleveland settlement to study its program. More than 200 scientists interested themselves in Bellamy's seven-point program for the growth and development of the child.

When, in 1906, Hiram House opened "Progress City," a model community with its own boy judges, policemen, engineers and mayor, various cities studied its program with the thought of incorporating its best ideas in their own planning. Two representatives of the President of Czechoslovakia later lived at Hiram House for months, studying "Progress City." A little model cottage was built on the sand dunes of Cairo, Egypt, patterned after the model cottage at Hiram House. Japan, 20 years ago, studied Hiram House with the view of copying its best points.

GOOD CITIZEN . . . Just out of college, George Bellamy founded Hiram House in 1896. For half a century he has remained as the first and only director of the institution, known for its promotion of good citizenship in Cleveland.

. . . for children also are taught the rudiments of sewing and other household arts. As summertime comes, the sewing basket is discarded when . . .

. . . the date arrives for the settlement's annual summer camp at Chagrin Falls. Here boys and girls joyfully bid farewell to cohorts leaving in the first bus.

Hiram House and George Bellamy have chalked up many "firsts" in their 50-year association. It was the first settlement in the world having a year-round, lighted playground with trained workers; this settlement inaugurated summer camping for healthy children who had never seen a woods or a farm animal; it had among the first cooking, sewing and manual training classes in Cleveland; studies made by Hiram House workers resulted in public bath houses for the city and improved standards for its public dance halls.

Aids Other Projects.

Bellamy has become famous for his association with movements designed to make Cleveland a better place in which to live. He was one of the original committee which organized the Babies' dispensary and hospital; he helped organize the Juvenile court, the Legal Aid society, Citizens' bureau and Cleveland Community Chest, the first community fund in the world and since adopted by more than 800 American cities

Because of the early help he received from them, Bellamy always has cherished a deep affection for country people and small town churches. In his struggling early years at Hiram House, it was the little churches surrounding Cleveland whose pennies, nickels and dimes helped keep the city settlement houses going. The people in the small towns near his camp for well children at Chagrin Falls gave him his original opportunity to introduce poor boys and girls from the city's streets to the joys of country living.

When Hiram House was opened in 1896 Cleveland's population was 300,000. Today the city boasts a population of a million persons Among that million are many thousands whose lives were influenced during their early years by contact with Hiram House. These include some of Cleveland's outstanding business and professional men More than 90,000 persons, in all, have been associated with Hiram House clubs and classes during the settlement's half century. Many of these persons made scores of visits to the house, annual registration running as high as 450,000 to 500,000.

ENVY OF WOMEN

Oldest Man Doesn't Look His Age

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — Oldest man in the United States—100,035 years old, more or less—doesn't look his age.

The ancient pilgrim, now at Harvard's Peabody museum, where he was shipped from London in packing cases and English cigaret boxes, was found in a cave on Mt. Carmel in Palestine, part of the "richest find of Neanderthal man specimens ever made."

One hundred thousand years ago, according to his discoverer, Dr. Theodore McCown, professor of anthropology at University of California, the ancient man lived in the old Stone Age until he reached 35 years. In forgotten forests, he hunted the fallow deer, the wild ox and the wild pig.

Now his are the oldest bones in the United States, says Dr. McCown.

The old hunter is not "a direct ancestor of existing human beings," according to Dr. McCown, who explains that anthropologists set the origin of modern man at about 25,000 years ago. "He just looks like us," he adds.

He liked beefsteak, rare. Found in the cave with his bones were many bones of wild oxen in condition to indicate they were food, not pets.

Brought to London during war years for study by Dr. McCown and Sir Arthur Keith, anthropologist of the Royal College of Surgeons, the Neanderthal bones were shaken by a direct bomb hit on the college during the Nazi blitz.

The old hunter was unhurt!

Sleuth Nabs 2,000 Deserting Dads

NEW YORK.—If Hollywood were seeking a movie sleuth, probably the last man the casting directors would look at is George Henry Lamb. Yet Lamb has a spectacular record in the detective field

For 28 years the nervous, bespectacled little man of 60 has been boss and one-man posse of the Queens County Abandonment bureau. In that role he has tracked down more than 2,000 fathers wanted for deserting their children. He has pursued them in 48 states as well as Cuba, Canada and Mexico.

"Bloodhound" Lamb, wiry and short, looks and talks like a clerk or a Sunday school teacher.

He virtually commutes to California—which seems to attract family deserters like syrup does flies—and recently returned from there with his record one-trip catch of nine straying fathers. Sixteen others settled by handing over enough money to support their children, an arrangement which Lamb prefers over arrest.

"A father in jail is worse than no father at all," is his philosophy.

Gold Medal Driver, Husband Admits

CHICAGO.—Although it has been collecting annals of freak incidents for years, the National Safety council was rocked back on its heels by this one.

A Chicago man had a gold medal struck off and presented to his wife for driving 300,000 miles without an accident or a traffic ticket.

When the council recovered from the shock, it decided the man, James J. Ingels, had something. So it announced the formation of a national club of safe women drivers, to be known as "Wonder Wives." Mr. Ingels was named the No. 1 charter member.

Any wife who has driven 10,000 miles or more without an accident or traffic violation—and who can get her husband to sign a statement to that effect—may join the new organization.

Nevada Recalls Map Omitting One City

BOULDER CITY, NEV.—Distribution of a state-prepared tourists' map was halted by Gov. Vail Pittman because it did not include Boulder City, Nevada's fourth largest town. Reprinting of the guide in corrected form was ordered. The original map was condemned by Boulder City's 5,200 residents, who demanded that all copies of the erroneous guide be destroyed.

One more row to hoe

The boy from the farm is on foreign soil today!

Instead of overalls, he's wearing his country's uniform. He's standing watch over the hard-won peace. He's safeguarding your future!

At heart, he's still that farm boy. His laughter sounds the same—when he can laugh. He still goes for cokes and cakes—when he can get them. And he still gets mighty homesick—when he has nothing else to do but think of home.

Your USO has one more row to hoe. Another round of laughs to plant. Another crop of cheer.

Your USO needs your help, as much as ever. For millions of American boys still need the USO. They need the camp shows and clubhouses—the hours of relaxation and entertainment—a place to hang their hats and loosen their belts.

They need to know that the folks back home are still thinking of them—are still willing to pitch in and make their task a lighter one.

Tell the farm boy you're with him—every step of the way. Say it through the USO. Say it with dollars!

Keep it up... USO Don't let them down!

Give to the Red Cross.

LIKE MY DAD SAYS...

"Planned work saves time on a dairy farm"

A FELLOW doesn't like to milk cows half the night. But it seems as though that's the way it is on a lot of dairy farms.

My Dad says that isn't necessary if the work is planned right. Good planning means having the yards arranged right . . . feed and hay handy . . . a convenient milking barn.

And on our place we have plenty of hot water on hand to wash the milking machine and the cream separator. Wetting agents are our hired men for both jobs.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Are Returning Veterans "Different"?

During the war you heard a lot about how hard it was going to be for returning veterans to get adjusted to civilian life . . . how they'd be "different."

Well, plenty of them have returned to our town, and a finer, steadier bunch you couldn't ask for. Most of them are back at the same jobs . . . going with the same nice home-town girls (getting married, some of them, and setting up families) . . . renewing the same old friendships.

Even their amusements are the same. Nothing more exciting than fishing Seward's creek or pitching horseshoes . . . enjoying an outdoor barbecue with friendly wholesome beer and pleasant talk.

If they've changed at all it's in the direction of maturity and tolerance . . . tolerance for everything except dictators, and those who would destroy our democratic principles of live and let live. And from where I sit, that's another reason to be proud of them.

LIKE MY DAD SAYS...

"Planned work saves time on a dairy farm"

A FELLOW doesn't like to milk cows half the night. But it seems as though that's the way it is on a lot of dairy farms.

My Dad says that isn't necessary if the work is planned right. Good planning means having the yards arranged right . . . feed and hay handy . . . a convenient milking barn.

And on our place we have plenty of hot water on hand to wash the milking machine and the cream separator. Wetting agents are our hired men for both jobs.

OBITUARY

JOHANNA BEEK was born on September 5, 1864 at Warsingfehn, Ostfriesland, Germany. Her parents brought her to Holy baptism in the Lutheran Church. As a child she also received religious instruction and became a member of this church by Confirmation.

On April 6, 1885, at the age of 20 years, Johanna Beek was joined in Holy wedlock to Harmon J. Coobs. The young couple left at once for Amercia, arriving at Ackley, Iowa, April 13, 1885. Five years later they moved to the Klemme community where they farmed on various farms for 28 years. While here the family united with the Reformed Church and Mrs. Coobs has the honor of being the first President of the Ladies Aid of this church.

In 1918 the family moved to McGregor, Iowa, where they farmed for 46 years. The family circle was broken when Mr. Coobs died in 1931. Seven children were born to this union, six of whom survive. One son, John, having died in 1922 at the age of 36 years.

On September 14, 1932, Mrs. Johanna Coobs and Derk Ebeling were married at Mcgregor, and then moved to Marion, South Dakota where they have lived for the past 14 years.

Some months ago Mrs. Ebeling became ill with a throat ailment and she spent some weeks at Rochester and 10 days at Iowa City, but the doctors could not help her. Before going to her home at Marion, South Dak., she decided to spend a week or more visiting at Klemme with her children. While visiting at the Verner Lewis home, she suddenly passed on; this was Monday evening, October 7th, 1946. She reached the age of 82 years, 1 month and 1 day, and leaves of her immediate family, her husband, Derk Ebeling, and six children:

Anna, Mrs. W. F. Pavey, Klemme, Iowa

Benn J. Coobs, Klemme, Iowa

Lena, Mrs. Verner Lewis, Klemme, Iowa

Henry J. Coobs, McGregor, Iowa

Wm. J. Coobs, Monona, Iowa

Also 19 grand children and 4 great grand children.

IOWA STATE COLLEGE GIVES ADVICE ON BETTER METHODS OF FEEDING LIVESTOCK

STEERS GAIN FAST ON BROME-ALFALFA

Pasture With Small Amount Of Corn Speeds Gains, Reduces Costs

The bromegrass-alfalfa pasture combination not only is a first-rate soil builder, but ranks near the top as an efficient cattle feed.

For a number of years, many farmers have used bromegrass and alfalfa in the combined role of building the soil and feeding cattle. But there always has been a question of how good the grass-legume mixture was in putting gains on cattle compared to the standard drylot method. So far Iowa State College research specialists decided to find out.

This year cattle were fed four different ways on the experiment farm in southwest Iowa. One bunch was fed in drylot, another was fed corn on pasture, while two lots were fed on pasture without corn.

Feeding Methods

The first part of the experiment ran from the first of May until the middle of September when the three groups of pasture cattle were brought into drylot for finishing.

The cattle that were started on pasture and then full-fed ground ear corn on pasture during the last part of the pasture season gained faster than the steers fed the conventional way in drylot. The gains were 2.16 pounds per day for the pasture-corn cattle compared with 1.97 pounds for the drylot steers. Steers on pasture without corn gained around 1.4 pounds per head per day.

The pasture-corn steers ate only 21.7 bushels of corn during the experiment compared with 36.4 bushels for the drylot steers, a saving of almost 15 bushels of corn for the feeding period. The pasture steers, however, didn't have quite as good a finish and were appraised at a little lower price. It was estimated that they would require an additional 30 to 40 days drylot feeding to make them equal in grade and yield to the drylot cattle. But they should weigh at least 100 pounds more per steer when finished.

Feed Costs

The experiment will be concluded when all the steers are finished out in the drylot to the same weight, grade and finish. At that time it will be possible to figure feed costs on all the lots on a more nearly equal basis.

In commenting on the feeding trials, Rex Beresford, college cattle specialist, pointed out that one of the big jobs is to figure out just what value to give pasture in the whole farm operation.

"We know," he said, "that we should have a lot more bromegrass and alfalfa in our rotations, in order to stop soil erosion and build back our soil fertility. Much of our land has been corned to death.

"With this increased roughage, though, we must find the best way to use it. While the feeding trials this year don't give us all the answers, they do indicate that cattle feeders will want to investigate the possibility of using brome-alfalfa pastures for a part of their feed supply.

STATEWIDE DRIVE IS NOW IN PROGRESS

To Enlist More Boys And Girls In 4-H Work

October is the month set aside throughout the state of Iowa as 4-H Memebership Enrollment month. All boys and girls of 4-H club age—10 to 21 years—are eligible for membership if they live in a rural community. The State goal for 4-H club membership will be 3,000 more members than in 1946.

During the month of October rural boys and girls will be given an opportunity to enroll in the 4-H clubs of Hancock county. All boys and girls between the 10 and 21 years of age are eligible for membership, if they live in a rural community.

An attempt will be made to have clubs organized in all the townships in the county so that all boys and girls of 4-H club age will have an opportunity to participate in the 4-H club program.

For the first time in four years girls will be able to enroll in the boys clubs and carry livestock projects in which they are especially interested. To date several girls have signified their intention of enrolling in either baby beef or dairy calf projects. All boys and girls in the county are especially invited to join. If for some reason they are not contacted personally they should contact the local leaders or the county extension office where enrollment cards may be obtained.

All new members will be affiliated with an organized club. In these clubs they will have an opportunity for fellowship of other members, for receation, and for studying better methods. 4-H club members learn by doing and the 4-H project is a basis for the individual's membership. Each club develops a complete program which helps the individual with his project, gives him additional training and the experiences for personal living and encourages community service.

Complications Mark Soviet Approach

Friendly Russian Element Holds Out Hope for Peace

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"America has no foreign policy"!

That is one of the bromides which has always been popular among critics of government. I don't know on what the remark is based. If we haven't any foreign policy today, then many hundreds of thousands of words have been expended in comment on nothing.

Baukhage

While the recent Byrnes-Wallace controversy was raging I spent many hours trying to find out what our foreign policy toward Russia was supposed to be, and if so, why. I shall report as nearly as I can what I have heard. The report will not be in the formal language of diplomacy, in which, we have been told, words are used to conceal thoughts. I report it, compressed, of course, but as nearly as possible in the phraseology used by gentlemen who ought to know what they are talking about.

We start with the not-too-startling revelation that American negotiations with Russia are complicated and difficult.

They are complicated because it appears the approach must be made along two separate paths, each leading to a separate Russian group.

They are difficult because there are unusual obstacles put in the way of the diplomat, especially our representatives in Moscow; obstacles which, I am assured, must be encountered at close quarters to be appreciated.

The two groups, since neither is homogeneous nor closely identifiable, might better be referred to as two elements. One comprises that great indefinable and inarticulate body, roughly classified as "the Russian people." Americans who have spent some time in Russia and who have enjoyed such contact as is permitted with the Russian people, say they are devoted to their country with a Spartan loyalty, sensitive to its shortcomings, proud of its achievements.

Many in this group, especially those who have met Americans, like us. All want to know more about us. For example, they devour the big, propaganda, picture magazine "Amerika", printed in their language and distributed by our embassy. Formerly we distributed 35,000 copies. Later we were permitted to increase the printing to 50,000 copies. It is estimated that a hundred Russians read each copy of Amerika; it is black-marketed at a high price and read to tatters.

This group admires and respects mechanical know-how, our industries, our technical skills. Officially there has been no propaganda to cry down American achievement in the production fields, but rather exhortations to emulate and surpass us.

Soviet Officials Hate America

The other Russian element which we have to consider and with which we deal directly is composed of the leaders, the party bureaucrats, the secret police. They hate America with an almost incredible hatred. Their attitude is so extreme that it does not seem real; it appears to be prompted by a policy, rather than a normal, human, emotional reaction.

If either of these two elements existed alone it would be simpler to establish a line of procedure. But, my informant points out, each element requires a separate and different approach, since the two contradict each other.

Because the only visible hope for an understanding with Russia depends on the semi-friendly group, nothing must be said or done in our relations with the other (now in power) which would make it seem that we are building a wall against Russia. That impression would alienate any potential sympathy the semi-friendly ones might feel for us.

This dual approach was exemplified by the Byrnes speech calling for the unification of Germany, under a single government, with all four occupying countries acting together as co-directors of the whole. Byrnes made the proposal inclusive. Russia would participate equally with the rest. The intention of the United States was firmly stated. There would be union of British and Americans, presumably the French, and the Russians too, if they consented. If the Russians refused, the United States would go ahead with the plan but it would not slam the door on Russia.

We are to be friendly but we must be firm. That is what makes negotiations so difficult. To convince the "haters" we mean what we say, the United States must state its decisions firmly and emphatically, outline exactly what we will do and will not do; what we will permit Russia to do and not do. Our firmness has to depend on our words. We cannot use force, because we have not the force available to use.

This, however, does not mean we cannot succeed, because I am optimistically assured the Russians are weaker than we are. Although their military forces on the continent of Europe are stronger than those of the Allies, it is believed that the Russians lack the economic, physical or moral strength to engage in a major war and they know that in the long run the rest of the world can develop a greater power.

Politically they have not the influence, either, to risk withdrawal from the United Nations. They know they could not take a sufficient number of other nations out with them and thus, withdrawal would mean ostracism and threats from the rest of the world. This the Russians know as well as we do.

Evolution of Typewriter Continues

If there had been a word-counting device on my typewriter, I would not be writing this end-piece now. But it is just as well authors haven't adopted these wordometers or they might find their thoughts being regimented.

The typewriter has already advanced far in its evolution. There is now a typewriter for the Chinese with their 5,400 (believe-it-or-not) characters. It is a product of the miracle working International Business Machines corporation. But it is no miracle for IBM which built a gadget used at the Nuernberg trials whose dial we could twist to produce with equal fluency, English, French, Russian or German, regardless of what language was being spoken. Of course human beings — lightning translators — are cogs in its works. The Nuernberg trials lasted too long as it was—but they would have lasted four times as long, if it hadn't been for IBM.

I understand a typewriter is being perfected into which you talk and which obligingly types the words you speak with no manual effort on your part. How, I wonder, would this recording typewriter spell: If you spell the word "house" on the ordinary keyboard it comes out that way, h-o-u-s-e. But if the machine operated by sound. "house", depending on where the speaker was born, might come out "ha-ows"; "idea" might appear as "idear".

For my part I should be very happy if a gadget were invented which would spell better than my typewriter can or even if the gadget would produce a synonym now and then after I had repeated the same shopworn word three times.

Strife Rages in Greece; More War Profits Bared

GREECE:

Civil Strife

King George II of Greece faced no happy return to his homeland as open civil war raged in the mountainous northwestern border region and the Red-dominated Albanian and Yugoslav governments were charged with actively aiding the rebels.

Premier Constantin Tsaldaris bluntly attributed the strife to Russian efforts to tighten their grip on the Near East. Said he: "It is as clear as noon-day that this is . . . for the benefit of those who aim to take advantage of our troubles with a view of securing an outlet to the Aegean sea."

As a last resort, 40,000 British troops ensconsed in Greece were being readied for intervention in the dispute if the government forces failed to check the left-wing uprising. With the country occupying a strategic position near the Dardanelles and Suez canal, Britain and Russia have been waging a bitter diplomatic war for control—the British to protect their lifeline to the East, the Russians to weaken their rivals and to extend their own dominance over the rich area.

SHIPBUILDERS:

Probe War Profits

Figures, figures and more figures featured the house merchant marine committee's investigation of wartime shipbuilding profits, with these prominent facts emerging after the mathematical smoke had cleared away:

1. Because of applying shipbuilding profits against losses of its Fontana steel mill, Kaiser company showed a deficit of 13 million dollars on its wartime operations. Another Kaiser-controlled company used shipbuilding profits to pay off a 26 million dollar magnesium plant in full.

2. The government's general accounting office's charge that California Shipbuilding corporation had realized a 44 million dollar profit failed to take into account funds recaptured by the U. S. through renegotiation and taxes. After these reductions, the firm showed a five-year profit of $8,782,863.

3. Failure of the accounting office to include renegotiation and taxes resulted in its estimate that New England Shipbuilding corporation had made a 11½ million dollar profit instead of approximately 1½ million.

LABOR:

Defy Injunction

Always jealous of its right to strike to enforce wage and other demands, organized labor presented a united front against a county court's anti-strike injunction against the Independent Association of Employees of Duquesne Light company in Pittsburgh, Pa.

In issuing the injunction, the three-judge court heeded the city solicitor's plea to act in the public interest in preventing a costly power strike. Though the order later was dissolved when the solicitor declared that it had served to force a resumption of bargaining between the disputants, IAE members remained adamant about returning to work as long as it stayed in effect.

Apprehensive of the no-strike and no-picketing features of the injunction, AFL and CIO unions supported the IAE walkout. Labor charged that the court order was in violation of both the state and federal anti-injunction laws and there was no law requiring men to work against their wish.

MEAT:

Dems Differ

Heightening of the meat crisis found Democratic leaders at odds over the retention of controls, with President Truman calling for continuation of regulations and other party heads favoring a relaxation, if necessary.

Declaring there was a shortage but no famine in meat, Mr. Truman looked to a fall run of grass-fed cattle to relieve the nation-wide scarcity. Attributing the current shortage to heavy livestock marketings during the recent suspension of OPA, the President asserted that removal of controls now would add to difficulties later.

Mr. Truman spoke shortly after the Democratic national executive committee took cognizance of the meat situation and instructed Chairman Hannegan to discuss higher prices, decontrol or other remedial measures with government authorities. The committee's action came close upon Democratic House Leader McCormack's plea for a 60 day suspension of meat control.

All Debt in U.S. Shows Increase

WASHINGTON. — Total private and public debt in the United States climbed 35 billion 400 million dollars in 1945 to reach a record figure of 400 billion 500 million dollars, it is revealed in a department of commerce report.

The increase last year, representing the final war period, fell far below that of the record 62 billion dollar rise in 1944 when the war was in full swing.

Main item in the increase was the federal debt, which rose 42 billion dollars last year. Offsetting this gain, declines were reported in other debt spheres.

Declines Noted.

Corporate short-term debt declined 8 billion, 800 million dollars during 1945, totaling 46 billion, 500 million dollars at the end of the year.

Other declines were listed as follows: State and local government debt, 349 million dollars to 13 billion, 700 million dollars; long-term corporate debt, 950 million dollars to 39 billion 300 million dollars; farm mortgages, 190 million dollars to 5 billion 100 million dollars for the lowest level since 1915.

Increases reported for the year 1945 included: Non-corporate urban mortgage debt, up to 162 billion dollars; short-term commercial and financial debt, up to 2 billion, 541 million dollars, and short-term consumer debt, up to 957 million dollars.

Production Gains.

During the four-year war period between 1941 and 1945 there was a net increase in all debt from 202 billion 400 million dollars to 400 billion 500 million dollars. During the same period the gross national product—the total of goods and services produced—rose from 120 billion dollars to 199 billion dollars.

The downward trend in farm mortgage debt, which has been continuous since the early 1920s, soon may be halted, the department predicts. In 1945, according to the summary, farm mortgage debt increased in 20 states, compared with increases in only eight states the previous year.

'IT'S GOOD BUSINESS'

Observance Sparks Program To Get Jobs for Handicapped

WASHINGTON. — Importance to the nation of maintaining employment for handicapped workers is being stressed in the first observance of National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, being held the week of October 6-12.

The observance, authorized by congress and proclaimed by President Truman, is intended to spark a nationwide drive to provide work for millions of handicapped persons, including thousands of veterans of two World wars, millions of victims of industrial and other types of accidents and those who are handicapped as a result of sickness, disease or birth.

Join in Promotion.

Under leadership of United States Employment service, Veterans' administration and Disabled American Veterans, governmental and private agencies are promoting the week. Through numerous citizens' committees, information concerning the physically handicapped and their abilities as workers will be disseminated and public education will be fostered.

Introduced during the week was the new official "trademark" of the selective placement program for physically handicapped and its slogan, "Hire the handicapped—it's good business."

More than 300,000 disabled workers, including 228,000 disabled veterans, now are ready for work and are seeking employment through the USES, according to Robert C. Goodwin, director. Pointing out that many of them are highly skilled workers, Goodwin says that they are immediately employable in jobs which emphasize their abilities rather than their disabilities.

Perform Skilled Jobs.

Disabled workers, for the most part, are veterans who came home from the war with amputations or other permanent injuries and civilian war workers involved in industrial and other accidents, according to the director. The handicaps sustained by these workers have not impaired their capacities to perform skilled jobs, he emphasizes.

In referring to the wartime employment record of the physically handicapped, Goodwin reports that 83 per cent of the nation's industries employed more than a million handicapped workers. These men, he adds, "frequently excelled the output of non-disabled employees."

Earn Own Way.

"Veterans and other workers who were victims of circumstances beyond their control want to keep their self-respect and earn their own way. They are capable of doing it and certainly they deserve the opportunity," Goodwin insists.

Discussing the problem of the handicapped veteran, Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine of the retraining and re-employment administration says: "The disabled veteran is a vitally important man in our post-war economy. If the nation, the state and the community fail to make suitable provisions for disabled veterans, the loss will be great. For wounds and injuries so frequently are the result of leadership and bravery that we dare not lose the services of the disabled veteran."

Village Gets Huge Gun as Memorial

FLORDELL HILLS, MO. — In response to Mayor Walter Zieger's request to President Truman for a World War II memorial trophy, this village recently received a five and one-half ton howitzer. The huge gun was shipped from the Rock Island, Ill., arsenal at a cost to the village of $86 in freight charges. Twenty citizens pushed the gun to the city park.

The club also plans to buy a Cub plane for students who do not want to learn to fly in so fast a ship. American military plane production increased in August to 130 planes, compared to 67 in July, Aircraft Industries association reports. Bulk of the increase was accounted for in fighter planes, production totaling 105 compared to 58 in July. This increase reflected renewed output of jet engines and stepped up production of a new navy carrier fighter. Total military plane production for the eight months of 1946 is 834, compared with 45,338 in eight months of 1945

Party Lines Crumbled In 79th Congress

TO ANYONE who has spent considerable time here in Washington watching governmental operation, and more particularly the action of members of congress, the thought is bound to intrude itself . . . is our two-party system of government working?

Do we have the checks and balances in congress that we should have with the two-party system? And when we watch these elected representatives of the people in action on the floor of the senate and the house, another natural reaction is the question, "What is a Democrat?" or "What is a Republican?" "Are party lines vanishing?"

Of course, the only and obvious answer is that a Democrat is a man who espouses the principles of the Democratic party, while a Republican is one who espouses the principles and beliefs of the Republican party. Following through on this catechism, the next question is "What are the party principles?" The answer is that although they change somewhat from time to time, the only steadfast measure of party principles are those which the regularly elected delegates of the two parties declare in their platforms when they meet in solemn convention every four years.

Then when a candidate for public office declares that he is a Democrat and asks for votes of the people, it is presumed, unless he declares otherwise, that he is running for that office as a believer in or a supporter of the party's principles, namely the Democratic platform. And the same thing holds true on the Republican side.

The only measuring stick we have to determine whether a political party is carrying out its party platform, which is its pledge to the people of performance, is when it passes, or at least attempts to pass, legislation which would put its platform pledges into action.

Many on Wrong Side

So, after either a Democrat or a Republican has been elected to congress and comes down here to Washington and votes against his party or against his party's attempts to carry out party programs, what would you call him?

For instance, the record in the 79th congress shows that on issues where a majority of the Democratic party voted one way and a majority of the Republican party voted the other, only 18 Democratic senators and 14 Republican senators voted consistently with their party. The record shows that Sen. Harry F. Byrd (Dem.) of Virginia, voted against the Democratic party 63 per cent of the time; that Sen. Peter Gerry (Dem.) of Rhode Island, voted against a majority of his party 54 per cent of the time; and that Sen. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel (Dem.) of Texas, voted against the Democratic party 88 per cent of the time. On the Republican side, Sen. George Aiken of Vermont voted against the Republican party 80 per cent of the time; Sen. Wayne Morse, Oregon, voted against his party 70 per cent of the time; and Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire voted against his GOP colleagues 51 per cent of the time. So on the basis of their votes, these three Democrats were better "Republicans" than most Republican senators, and the three GOP solons were better "Democrats" than most of the Democratic senators. There are those who declare that such senators as these are "Independents."

Southern Reactionaries

Fifteen Democratic senators voted against their party from 33 to 50 per cent of the time. They were Bailey, N. C.; Bilbo, Miss.; Burch, Va.; Connally, Tex.; Eastland, Miss.; George, Ga.; Hoey, N. C.; McCarran, Nev.; Overton, La; Stewart, Tenn.; Swift, Ala.; Thomas, Okla.; Tydings, Md.; and Wheeler, Mont. Four Republicans are in the 33 to 50 per cent class in voting against their party. They are Austin, Vt.; Knowland, Calif.; Langer, N. D.; and Saltonstall, Mass. All except two of the Democrats in this class are from the southern states and their record of opposition to the Democratic majority was more pronounced in the closing months of the session from May 1 to Aug. 2, the date congress adjourned.

It is only fair to state that there were stalwarts in both parties who could be counted upon to support their party's program at least 90 per cent of the time. The consistent Democrats were:

WNU Features

When other rocks have cooled, it is granite that holds the heat of the sun after nightfall. When other sections go off on political or philosophical tangents, it is New England that retains the basic Puritan characteristics—thrift, the will to work, and individuality.

The first settlers in New Hampshire carried with them a King James Bible and a Puritan conscience. Fundamentally, through every vicissitude of progress New Hampshire has remained unchanged. The old influences still prevail. From the very beginning, however, New Hampshire folks were the merriest of the Puritans. They have held to the gospel of work, but the gospel of laughter has not been forgotten. They are genial, love a good story, have a quip or wise saw, and delight in antic ways. The infusion of French-Canadian blood as well as that of those recently come from Europe has not materially changed the values of life in New Hampshire.

Puritan Standards Prevail.

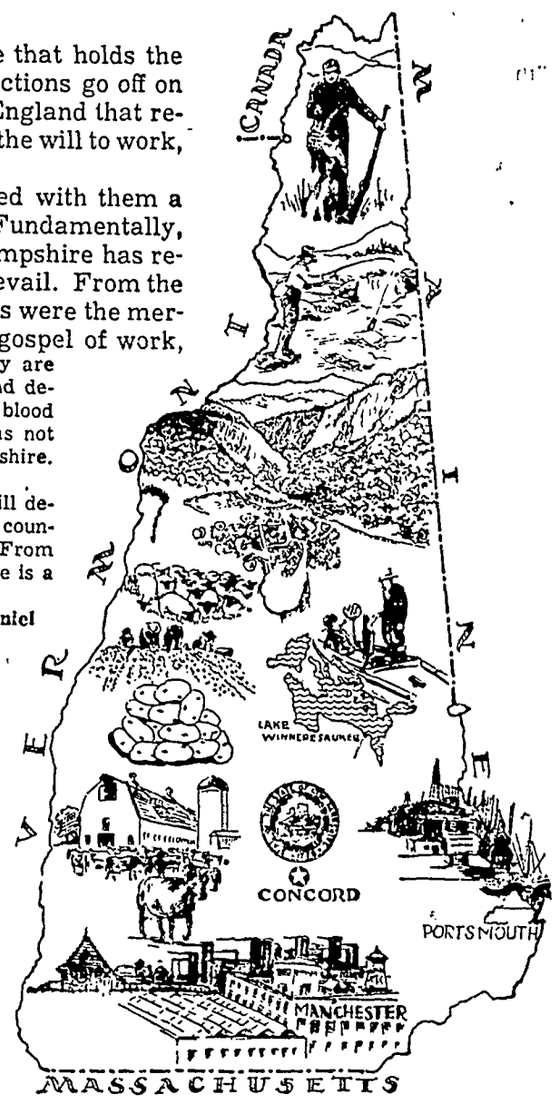
Matters of morals and taste and government are still decided with Puritan standards. The appearance of the country, in its cleared land, is as the early settlers left it. From the top of its mountains down to the sea, New Hampshire is a varied land, but changeless and inspiring.

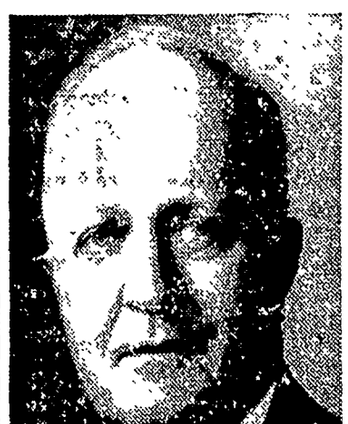
No state is greater than its people. Men like Daniel Webster, Pres. Franklin Pierce, Salmon P. Chase and Thomas Bailey Aldrich are not mere accidents. They, and many other famous men, came from the breeding and environment of New Hampshire and were molded by the traditions and influence of that state.

Two years before the Revolutionary war, John Sullivan, a young Dunham lawyer, and John Langdon, a wealthy merchant, were active patriots. In December, 1774, they seized Fort William and Mary at New Castle (present site of Fort Constitution) and removed from it 100 barrels of powder, besides cannon and small arms. These munitions of war later were used against the British at the battle of Bunker Hill!

It is notable that three-fifths of the men who fought with the Colonial army at Bunker Hill were from New Hampshire, and men from that state were in every campaign of the war. Stark and his New Hampshire troops checked Burgoyne and paved the way for Gates' triumph over that ambitious British general at Saratoga. Three weeks before the Continental congress agreed to the Declaration of Independence, the New Hampshire assembly adopted one of its own, thus making the first authoritative statement of purpose to cast off allegiance to the British crown.

New Hampshire was first settled in 1623, at Dover and Portsmouth—just three years after the landing of the Pilgrims and seven years before Boston was founded. The first settlers were fishermen, farmers and traders.





GOVERNOR . . . When Charles M. Dale, native of Minnesota, was installed as New Hampshire's governor on January 4, 1945, he became the first Westerner to become chief executive of a New England state.

Agriculture and industry spread rapidly. Millions of years ago, Nature provided New Hampshire with an abundance of gravel, sand and granite. Under the surface were more than 95 different minerals. Many large rivers had their sources in New Hampshire, and could be harnessed for power. There was plenty of timber and wild game. There was excellent soil, particularly in the valleys of the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers. Grass was plentiful for livestock. Fruit trees were easily grown. The climate was healthful. The New Hampshire of today was built upon these resources.

Unique Industrialization.

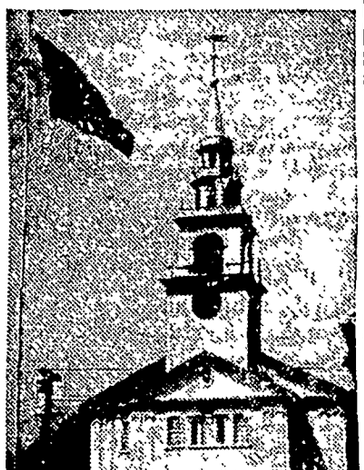
Even the industry of New Hampshire has its unique side. "Our craftsmen know what it is to live in a good place," is the state's boast. Laboring men never know the crowded living conditions which so often attend industrialization.

New Hampshire plants, mills and factories manufacture chemical products, electrical equipment, leather goods, machinery, tools and scores of miscellaneous articles and products. "Made in New Hampshire" may mean anything from a sewing needle to a steam engine or the heaviest foundry casting. Its wood products are without number. Its paper and paper products are used throughout the world.

The dairy industry is the most important agricultural enterprise in New Hampshire. Milk, cream, butterfat, cattle and calves return a cash income of about ten million dollars a year. The apple is the chief commercial fruit, and New Hampshire orchards range from a few trees to more than 100 acres. A million and a half bushels of potatoes are grown in the state each year, making them the most important field crop.

Complete Farm Units.

Most New Hampshire farms are units so complete it seems nothing is lacking.



TOWN HALL . . . A classic example of New England architecture is the town hall and church at Hancock, N. H.

New Hampshire farmers do not "put all their eggs in one basket," or hold to one principal source of income. They hold to a combination of products and services calculated to return the largest income, considering the family skills, the soils and market opportunities. They look toward a year-around income—not to a single cash crop.

Lakes, mountains, seashore and a splendid climate have made New Hampshire famous for vacations and tours.

White Mountain national forest, with its roads, trails, lakes and streams, lures thousands of people from every part of the United States each year. From bathing on the ocean beach to skiing through mountain snows, New Hampshire offers opportunity for recreation and sports.

From colonial buildings at Portsmouth, Dartmouth college at Hanover, and Daniel Webster's birth place near Franklin, to the Old Man of the Mountains, Lost River at Kinsman Notch and the cog railway at Mount Washington, New Hampshire offers everything for those who seek historical, recreational or inspirational travel.

"Every road that leads you out
Makes you long to turn about,
In New Hampshire."

PRETTY AS A PICTURE . . . The beauty of Mt. Chocorua has made this New Hampshire peak the most photographed mountain in America.

Distinctive Setting Adds to New Hampshire's Charm

New Hampshire's natural setting adds greatly to its charm. While it usually is considered a mountainous state—and justly so—its eastern slope extends in gently rolling inclines southeastward to the Atlantic. Five sandy beaches are features of New Hampshire's 18 miles of seashore.

But New Hampshire is remembered longest for its mountains and valleys, forest roads, remote farms, old villages and white-painted houses. The White mountains are storied mountains, long loved and sought by man. Other distinctive sights in New Hampshire are its hundreds of ponds, its thousands of granite ledges, its expanding forests, its industries and its green landscapes.

The mountain region has few inhabitants except in summer. In the lakes district, an agricultural area, are the industrial cities of Laconia and North Conway. Connecticut valley, embracing three-tenths of the state, contains New Hampshire's chief agricultural section and many industries, with Merrimack valley a close second in agriculture and greater in industry.

The eastern slope is largely agricultural, but contains the industrial cities of Rochester, Somersworth and Dover.

PAUL TRAINS FOR HIS LIFE WORK

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:19b-22; 11:25, 26; Galatians 1:17-24.

MEMORY SELECTION—And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.—Acts 9:20.

The regenerating grace of God had made Paul into a new man, one who now had no greater delight than telling others of the redeeming grace of God.

In preparation for that fuller ministry which was to follow, Paul first gave witness in the place where he had been persecuting the Christians, in fact, in the city to which he was bound when the Lord met him. But now instead of breathing out threats and violence he met these former associates and friends with the new message of the gospel.

He had to meet them sooner or later, and it was well that he met them now. A clean break with his past makes a man ready for future service.

I. Paul Faces His Past (Acts 9:19b-22).

What a surprise it must have been for those persecutors of the Christians at Damascus to find that the one to whom they had looked for leadership was now a Christian. What a testimony that was—right to the point!

"Straightway"—what a good word to apply to the servant of the Lord. Paul did not hesitate to declare his faith in Christ, to proclaim that the One who had redeemed him was able to save others.

It is the normal and proper expression of Christian faith to give testimony to others. That should be true of every believer. With Paul there was the added element of his call to preach, for God had ordained that he should be his chosen vessel for that purpose (Acts 9:15).

Paul's message was Christ. He proved to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ (v. 22), the One of whom their Old Testament Scriptures spake and for whom they professed to be looking. He declared him to be the Son of God (v. 20).

They were unwilling to accept the message. They were "amazed" at Paul and "confounded" by the truth he proclaimed, but they rejected both it and him, and he had to escape for his life.

Although our lesson only indirectly refers to it (see Gal. 1:17, 18), it should also be noted that Paul went up to Jerusalem before he went to Antioch, as indicated in our next portion of Scripture.

There he faced suspicion on the part of the believers, who knew him as their enemy.

Having faced his past we now see that

II. Paul Faces His Future (Acts 11:25, 26).

He was God's chosen instrument to bear his name to the Gentiles (see Acts 9:15), and at the invitation of Barnabas he came up from his home city of Tarsus to minister at Antioch, the place which now became his real spiritual home, and the center from which his great missionary enterprise was carried out.

It is interesting to note how this came about in the providence of God. Persecution spread the believers abroad (Acts 11:19), and like the scattered brands of a beaten fire they carried the flame of Christianity far and wide. Thus the gospel came to Antioch, the third greatest city in the world of that day. A revival broke out and Barnabas was sent from Jerusalem to be of help.

Good and spiritual man that he was (Acts 19:23, 24), Barnabas did nothing to hinder this work of God, but admonished the people to "cleave unto the Lord"; that is, to follow him closely. Would that all spiritual advisers had such a spirit and such sound judgment.

He was also wise in sensing his need of help. So he went after Paul, the very man to teach these young Christians and to lead them out into a radiant and abundant life for the Lord. Here it was that the beautiful name of "Christian" was first used.

All this was possible because

III. Paul Faces His Lord (Gal. 1:17-24).

Many years after he had been called to Antioch, Paul wrote this letter to the Galatians to warn them against Judaizing teachers and to urge them to hold fast to salvation by faith. He declared this to be a message which he received from God and not from men.

Before Paul went out to preach and teach he went up into Arabia to be alone with the Lord, as he took what we might call his postgraduate course in theology. He learned—alone with God.

His life had been transformed. His attitudes had been completely changed. His thinking about Christ was diametrically opposite to his former beliefs. He needed time alone with God to prepare himself for the stormy but triumphant years ahead.

Government Offers Agricurtural Training For Veterans

The serviceman's Readjustment act. Public law No. 346-78th congress provides opportunity for a veteran of World War 2, to obtain training in an occupation of his choice in the community in which he desires to reside. Under the act, "on the job" and "institutional" training may be offered for veterans interested in farming as a vocation or in agricultural occupation directly related to farming.

This institutional on-the-farm training will be provided for through the public schools that have regular vocational agricultural departments. However, any school that is to have such a program must have at least 10 veterans enrolled for such a program.

The veteran enrolling for this program will attend a total of 200 hours per year to study agriculture and related subjects, and have not less than 100 hours of which may be group instruction on the farm nature.

The Veterans Administration will pay the school a tuition for all veterans enrolled in this program, and will also pay the veteran a subsistance payable monthly, the amount depending upon the veteran's status and his earnings, providing he is making satisfactory progress and shows his cooperation during the entitlement.

The objective of the program are as follows; first, to aid the veteran to acquire proficiency farm skills, and managerial ability. Second, to help the veteran to become established in a worthwhile farming program which would provide him with a favorable environment, through training.

Any veteran whether a farm hand, a farm operator interested in availing himself to the benefits of this program is to ask to contact either the local county extension director, Paul Henderson, and fill out his form 1950 and receive his certificate of elegibility and entitlement and then he is ready to start in such a program.

If a veteran is interested in such a program, the local committee urges him to contact his veteran friends in order to get enough veterans interested in such a program so that there will be 10 or more enrolled in each school.

The following schools are willing to offer this program, providing enough interest is shown by the veterans: Britt, Garner, and probably Ventura and Forest City.

Freshman Report

Reporter, Darlene Etchen

The freshman are very busy this week because this is the end of the six week period and tests are being given. Everyone is very busy studying. You see, we are not too sure of ourselves.

Mr. Rector gave us a good brain-buster test in History. We haven't got our papers back but when we do everyone will be afraid to look at them.

In Algebra, Mrs. Leith was disappointed with our papers. We can all do better work so "let's get down to brass tacks and study Algebra."

Friday is the day set for our English test. One thing we must all watch is our penmanship for it will also count on our test grade.

Science has been very interesting. The past week we have had four experiments. The first was "Is air, because of its weight, matter?" by Willis Back. "Can atmospheric pressure be measured?" demonstrated by Beverly Beier; "How does water rise in a lift pump?" by Merlin Brinkman; and "Can air be compressed?" by Darlene Etchen.

In physical training, the girls enjoy playing soft ball. The sophomores have been winning over the freshman although the freshman have put up a good fight. The boys have been playing football.

We are all anxiously looking forward to our first high school party which will be Friday evening. Every member of our class plans on being there.

Our Sophomore Class

Reporter Irene Lyons

This week we have been having six weeks tests, so we have all been busy.

With the exception of Geometry all the tests are taken, and what a headacke they've been for everyone. We can very well believe the teachers when they say they have worked hard too.

In Geometry we have been having theroms, and I think we all agree on one thing, that they are almost beyond our comprehension.

In English we have been having diagraming. Mrs. Harvey finds that we all have to study a lot harder if we want a good report card.

In World History we are studying about some important men in the ancient world. Their names are all so queer until its really a job trying to remember which is which. Mr. Rector had a lot of practice in making checks while correcting our tests.

There is a school party on October 11th as the party of October 4th was postponed until this date. After this week I think we need some relaxation. Right class?

A Note From The Juniors

Reporter. Rose Schaefer

In Economics, we have just finished the unit on "Consumption." It is very interesting but, there are a lot of terms we have to know.

We have learned all the keys in typing and we have been taking speed tests. Most of us come out on top with a nice number of words per minute, but once in a while someone comes up with words in the hole. (With a forfeit of 10 words per mistake, who wouldn't.)

For English Literature, we are studying about different English authors and some of the stories they wrote. We find that their standard of writing is much different than ours.

In grammar work we have been diagraming sentences and learning the different parts of them.

We have been working for about a week on our class play and we find we have to practice more than we thought we would. We have now started on the second act.

The Seniors

Reporter, Peggy Coobs

This week is six weeks test in Klemme High School. We are all studying and cramming for the tests, but by the looks of some papers it doesn't do too much good.

In Literature we finished reading the first section of short stories. We switched over to our English books now and have just started to study the chapter on "Explaining."

In Business Law we are studying the chapter on "Bankruptcy." I believe we will all watch out so we don't become bankrupt.

In American History we are studying the chapter on "The Causes of Discontent." This is the period just before the Revolutionary War began.

"Specific Gravity" is the chapter in Physics. There are some pretty difficult problems solve before you find the answer to Specific Gravity.

The six weeks test in Bookkeeping was composed of making all transactions necessary to keep books. The next chapter to be taken up is "Personal Bookkeeping."

The Klemme Shamrocks baseball team made two trips in the past week. Last Friday they went to Kanawha and got let down 14-12. Last Tuesday they went to Thornton and got let down 16-6. We still have hopes of seeing them improve, even though it is getting a little late.

AROUND IOWA

SEEK MISSING HEIR

Anyone know Clifford Sinclair? He was last heard of in Storm Lake, about 1938, and has fallen heir to his father's share of an estate left by a wealthy kinsman. So far efforts to locate him have been unavailing.

ASPHYXIATED

Mrs. Joe Matuska, of near Spirit Lake, asphyxiated recently by wood smoke from a stove. used as a laundry stove. The body was found about two hours later. She was the mother of six children.

$600 MULES

Top price for a pair of mules at a sale in Albia recently was $600, with several mule teams bringing better than $500.

LOST EVERYTHING

Veteran Vernon Thompson and wife, of Waukon, were among the veteran's families who had been able to find a place to live, in a cabin near Waukon. Last week an oil heater caught fire, burned the house and all furniture and belongings of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

RICOCHET

At Waucoma recently, Linus Wintre, 15, shot at a squirrel with a rifle. The squirrel was sitting on a block of salt and the bullet, rebounding, hit young Winter in the arm, making two gashes.

KILLED BY TRAIN

When rain, weeds and trees obstructed his view, John Madden, Pocahontas, failed to hear a coming train on a railroad crossing and was instantly killed. The crash tore the engine out of his automobile, hurled it 50 feet.

WHEEL BURST

An emery wheel flew apart at the C. B. and Q. Roundhouse in Creston recently. One fragment struck Lester Saffel, 45, a machinist, fracturing his skull and resulting in his death.

Many corn-picking accidents are the result of carelessness on the part of the machine operator.

ABOUT THE FUTURE OF YOUR CHILDREN

You're pretty proud of those kids of yours, aren't you? Want them to have the best of everything. Good food—good housing—a good education—a chance to work and play—have friends—travel occasionally. Yes, you'll give them all of this.

BUT, If they're not members of a 4-H club they're missing one of the best opportunities of their lives. Chances are they want to be members. If you encourage them they'll probably join.

You've seen enough of the work of 4-H members to know how it helps boys and girls to grow. Of the pride they take in their projectsJthe fun they get from their club meetings—the training they get in good farm and home practices—the recreational opportunities they have—the rewards that come from a job well done.

We suggest you help your children become members of the greatest youth organization in the United States.

Give them a chance to wear the symbol of the 4-H organization—the Four Leaf Clover with its 4-H...

WE ARE 4-H CLUB BOOSTERS!
